I am just 'putting this out there', so "interpret" according to your own personal beliefs.

Back to my paraphrased EE 'big-guns' rite...
The EE told me I was a "Slacker". They told Dee the same thing.
[I feel kind of honored!]

EE also said I am a nuisance by interjecting a lot of pointless questions that have no relationship to what They are presenting. I do not like to add my cup of opinion to the Enochian Horror stories, but EE do show They have an "Agenda"...What I ask is unimportant unless it pertains to Their Materials.

EE's main mission is to enlighten and evolve- Humanity.

They have become reluctantly uncomfortable, by narrowing it down [out of necessity] to just the select wizards who will listen and record it for mass distribution.

I am an Enochian scribe.

I work rituals, and record what They tell me to. I then upload it to the internet so others can receive it... free of charge.

Back on track...

Because obviously, I am a 'slacker', the EE are going to speed things up, Themselves. Similar to the "Light that flew into Kelley's head" when he was scrying and filling up parchment with EE Materials, I too "will be privy of a sort".

EE told me to record this:

" As [... Voice recorder Inaudible Here...] 'Urim & Thummim' to reveal what was meant to keep as secret, so too shall thou bear witness to our light stones. So shall you appear as our priest for this time and time again, as did the High Priest, and as **Joseph Smith of old...*"

I am going to splice an article here, as I feel it is relevant:

“Paranoid Email + Root Cause of Enochian Sensationalism”

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/enochianmagic/message/91>

I have been corresponding with this certain individual for a few weeks now.

*[Not sure if it is male or female-, not sure if it matters, either way.
Hysterical and emotional break down can be sexless]*

Today I received a reply to one of our several running conversations.
This day's email seemed ripe with paranoia.

The classic 'Enochian Horror Stories' I warned about in my previous discussions.

This is not in anyway a 'slam' against this person, but I am just using this as an example on why Enochian seems to attract a lot of negative sensationalism.

I will leave all personal details out to retain their Anonymity.
However, I kept the grammar and spelling errors intact.
Comparing their previous emails to this one is evident this person was in a highly charged 'manic' condition

Hi again SaToGa!

I remember in one our conversations you mentioned you moved from New York City to Arkansas because the enochian angels got you the wife hook up lol. I came across something on the news check this out. it all runs thru out the same time you started listing your enuchian threads;

Arkansas Game and Fish Press Release:

BEEBE, Ark.-- Saturday night, ringing in the New Year took on a whole different meaning for the citizens of Beebe. Around 11:30 p.m., enforcement officers with Arkansas Game and Fish Commission began getting reports of dead black birds falling from the sky in the city limits of Beebe.

Officers estimated that over 1,000 birds had fallen out of the sky over the city before midnight. Most of the birds were dead, but some were still alive when officers arrived.

The blackbirds fell over a one-mile area in the city.

AGFC wildlife officer Robby King responded to the reports and found hundreds of birds.

"Shortly after I arrived there were still birds falling from the sky,"

King said. King collected about 65 dead birds that will be sent to the Arkansas Livestock and Poultry Commission lab and the National Wildlife Health Center lab in Madison, Wis.

[Edit: Personal details Omitted from this individual's EMail]

I am sure this individual is trying to help me.

If the pen-pal relationship didn't sour, I was going to [jokingly!] mention maybe the EE apocalyptic intent was to send me to Arkansas because of the vast amount of Crystal Mines, to which Arkansas is well known for.

With all that piezoelectric oscillation banging into the Aethyrs... that would significantly strengthen my apocalyptic hammer!

Maybe, 'praying for my doomed soul' was this person's initial intent since the beginning of our conversations...

Perhaps this person's own innate paranoia got the best of him/her.

Maybe this person's emotions were 'tweaked'- due to the Holiday season and just needed a release.

I will never know as all communication was halted on their end...

Of course I will comply and respect their wish.

P.S. He/she said... she/he would pray for me.

→ I would less likely blame me, and look towards a more scientific, rational explanation...like HAARP, the BP Fiasco, Chemtrails or even, maybe... the LHC.
[Large Hadron Collider]

I had a brief vision of this last year-

As I described in:

“Enochian Entities – Practice & Theory – By SaToGa”
Volume #1:
“EE somnambulism: ZAX Dream”

However, My Own Opinion- is based on legitimate science.

- I would go with either an Arkansan ‘Caldera Volcano’ or the New Madrid Fault Lines getting ready to blow.

I think the 'apocalyptic scenarios' EE enjoy. serve two-fold:

1) Entice DEE to stop 'slacking', because there is a set time frame the EE are working within.

2) The apocalyptic scenarios- I see more as "the death of the ego".

Enochian Magick should leave the mage 'evolutionary exalted'.

When Fundamental Religious Doctrines such as "antichrist" and "Armageddon" rear their head/tail, I believe the exegesis [from a neutrally spiritual/non-religious approach] 'should' dictate it.

I also noticed EE enjoy using symbolism from the Pseudepigrapha writings, and Nag Hammadi Scrolls.

But...there is definitely an ‘ominous feel to the Earth’s energy matrix’.

People are generally in anticipation of 'something big is about to go down'....

Maybe it is the mainstream media, that is always trying to instill fear into the hearts of it's viewers (?)

Again... I personally despise all the 'EE bad rap' stories and the negative attention it gets, and I do my best to rid it when I can.

When the EE Materials are understood and worked by *Sanctioned**, experienced mages...
They bring powerful, quick results as the prime diversionary backdrop [all the while keeping the mage, active]
-as EE evolutionary forces tweaks the magickians energy fields

[*See Volume #1 about "EE Sanctioning"]

Back to the 'Urim & Thummim'...

Originally when this was told to me, I really did not grok what They meant.

It started unfolding after so many years of doing Magick, in general-[almost 40 years!]...then exclusively working only "Enochian Magick".

*Being bestowed an "Enochian-esque Urim & Thummim", after so many years,
allowed me to feel- I really was 'getting somewhere'...*

Basically what it entailed, was this:

Besides my usual EE Ritualistic 'contact', there would be a 'ceremony-less' contact time as well.

I enter my Temple, adorn myself with Lamen and Ring.

Then I sit full lotus, recite the 1st and 2nd EE Key, meditate briefly until I reach Alpha level.

I relax [in the Temple recliner!] in that state, grab my notebook and voice recorder and establish "Channeling Contact" with the EE...

→ Most of the time: Dee and Kelley would perform an Oratory Prayer & the EE Communication began. Sometimes, Dee/Kelley did Nothing at all, and "Some-Thing" would instantly appear.
Spiritualists would tell you what Dee/Kelley did was Not Magick, but rather, just a generic Séance.
*'Just Pray and Summon'

---

...This will manifest differently as a wide array of variables enter the equation. One such variable is contingent on what EE Ritual I performed, prior. Sometimes the EE channeling session will be an addendum to that ritual. It all depends.

During these sessions, I am more aware of understanding the EE Materials. My memory is better, almost as if I am downloading information from vast EE archives. My mind 'cross indexes' in visual depth, and my clairvoyant abilities are also tweaked.

NOTE: Unless I specifically state "Ritual", the information will be understood as originating in an EE induced trance state.

Photograph of a Visual Page From My EE Grimoire.

Armed with my Voice Recorder, I also scribble pictures [in the dark] from the visions I encounter.

Sometimes, these 'notoriously quick' EE Imagery Flashes can get forgotten.

"Temple Tools"

EE has repeatedly told me all the Enochian Materials are to be
"Knitted Together"

[See Volume #1 also]

In My Own EE Temple, I incorporate the following:

Holy Table

[Holy Table of Covenant]

After the altar is all set up, I use as was suggested, Red Silk covering... This conducts Energy [bioelectric energy]

Sigil Dei Ameth

This Sigil acts like a 'combination lock' when deciphering the names of the beings that grace the outside circumference.

[Other EE Material Items had 'removable parts'- insides that were manually manipulated and turned 90 degrees!]

Sigil Dei Ameth's Bee's Wax composition is organic, & will not impede bioelectric energy

7 Ensigns of Creation

[with Enochian Letters]

I also use the appropriate Ensign when I call the [Heptarchial Mystica] King, Prince and 42 Ministers.

Like an ascending/descending spiral staircase...the Ten above items spiral energy upwards, into dimensions that transcend our three dimensions.
They radiate within the shewstone... that lays upon all of it.

Liber Loagaeth and other Enochian Materials are sometimes used to breach our normal 3D 'laws'.

The EE Materials were for an Era when Magickians would Grok "Quantum Physics"

[Liber Loagaeth will be discussed later in this Volume].

“EE provided Dee with what he Wanted”

Premise: “EE provided Dee with what he Wanted”

The Heptarchial Entities [They are still- EE] – Kings, Princes- show many of them are keen for fighting wars in the waters.

This was something very appealing to Dee.

Also the 91 Governors and parts of the Earth seem to be personally directed to Dee, as he was a navigator, explorer, map maker, history student extraordinaire, etc.,

Example: the attributes of the Mercurial King shows skill in warfare of the waters.

Compare traditional Mercurial correspondences with King Bnaspol. The abilities these Kings and Princes exhibited were more aligned with the needs, wants, desires and interests that Dee held dear.

Spanish Armada ring a bell?

The 91 parts, [which have ‘magickal counterparts’], were ‘peppered with the flavor’ Dee hungered for...

Political dominion for his Queen.

For each individual magus, all these attributes differ.

If you require a certain task to be performed, no matter the task- you will have it fulfilled by one of these EE.

I have worked with the same King [Bataiva/h] over and over, and He stretched into other WatchTower “areas” ...

Though He is of Fire, He performed Water, Air and Earth “tasks”.

This is why ‘Neo-Enochian’ practitioners get results...

*"Enochian Magick is like a Quantum Machine-
The 'Observer' affects the Outcome."*

Back to: "Temple Tools"

5 Wands [Optional]

-used exclusively for EE ritual.

One for each element.

[Consecrated]

I originally made these by exposing them to their own native element.

Example- Fire wand was put in oven until it turned a golden brown.

When EE came onto the scene- They have such a varied and wide element base, Their's 'over-lapped' what ever element exposure I previously employed.

Lamen

The second one. The first one made was of demonic interference but can be used for other magicks, such as Solomon's

Ring

I was told by EE to wear mine on my left, marriage band finger
[Volume#1]

I also have the 4 WatchTowers up, as well as the Tablet of Union.

Some mages feel these are necessary to balance the energies.

I do not feel that way.

The watchtowers are only a small group of EE Materials, but were of prime importance to older magickal orders because they did not have/incorporate all the EE Materials.

“What more could you want?”

“The Holy Table, for example- is called "The Table of Covenant".

"Covenant" tells me there is much more to discover.

The Lamen, Ring, Ensigns- there is much information "hiding in plain sight". The Six Round Tables of the Kings, for one- is something I personally would like to know more about.

All these questions is what I want to learn more about.

As far as I know, a unified system is lacking these answers.

If I ever discover anything good, I promise to share..."

➔ No matter how many reference books about the Enochian Materials are circulated [mine included!]- the serious student must go directly to the actual Dee/Kelley Diaries.

“...If I ever discover anything good, I promise to share...”

“Quinta Essentia Enochianas”

→ “Enochian Magick” contains 5 Parts- Quintessence

1) “Liber Loagaeth” Gebofal
– 49 Gold Leaves

[Joseph Smith received Gold Plates From an Angel named “Maroni”- see this Volume]

2) 49 Keys [“Calls”]
- but only have 48

3) WatchTower Tablet
-Original & Revised
(See Volume #1 regarding the “Tabula Recensa”)

4) “Heptarchial Mystica”
-A Complete Planetary ‘Magick’ System

5) “Liber Scientiae Auxilli et Victoriae Terrestris”
– The 91 Parts

Liber Loagaeth had the input of 7 Entities,... lending Their voices, either directly or indirectly, in regard to this Book.

This Book WAS that Important!

In the “ZAX Vision”, the EE explained it as:

*This is the Analogy of Correlation***

(This Volume: “ZAX Vision: Get Thee Behind Me- Satan!”)

“Think of the 18 Calls as The Keys that Open the Tumblers
of the Loagaeth cities.

The WatchTowers contain It’s occupants, &
the Governors of the 30 Aethyrs” [the 19th Key]

The Holy Table- is as the -Loagaeth & 30 Aethyrs.

The 7 Ensigns- is as the -Heptarchial Mystica

Sigillum Dei Aemeth- is as the -WatchTowers

Microcosm- is as the –Macrocosm

The EE Infrastructure: “Knitting Together”

30 Aethyrs are “of” the Cities of Loagaeth

Liber Loagaeth are 49 gold sheets with a differing front and back.

In other words, this signifies “Thickness or Volume” and that each “page” is 3D- maybe, even... “Multi-Dimensional”

The 19th Call is a Trumpet that Calls the 91 Governors

The 91 parts are ‘etheric counterparts’ “of” the 30 Aethyrs

Heptarchial Mystica is the 'Cosmology' and 'Calendar' system of the EE MultiVerse(s)

Previously, I wrote:

"Dee's diaries are vague in establishing a direct link between the Enochian Keys/Calls and the Watchtower tablets."

The WatchTowers contain the 'Census' [inhabitants] of the 30 Aethyrs, 91 Parts and Loagaeth.

Think of the WatchTower as a telephone directory.
Find the occupant and dial it in!

The 18 Calls/Keys [including the 19th] are directly related to Loagaeth.

If Loagaeth was a Nation, the 18 Calls is it's Declaration of Independence. ['Directives']

Liber Loagaeth relays 3 types of Knowledge.

Triple-fold is a common theme in The Enochian Materials.

The 2nd EE 'Lamen' contains 3 "parts"

- The Flesh
- The Skin
- The Heart

The First Item received- 'The Tablet of God' [in this Volume] is also 'of' 3 Parts, and appears to be divided into 4 parts- like a "prototype" of the soon to come -WatchTower Tablet.

The Lamen- is as the -Tablet of God

The EE “Solomonic-style” Ring, by being worn- shows you have power in your hand to control.

The Lamén, [like the breastplate of the Old Testament Priests] signifies- within your aura- you are composed of the same fabric as the EE “Theocracy”.

The EE were very interested in the World’s Kingdoms.

We see this as an interest because the EE Hierarchy is composed of a “Theocracy”- like the 12 Tribes of Israel.

EE has Kings, Seniors, Princes, Ministers and of course,
God(s)...and a God of Justice
(Scales of Balance)

The purpose of Loagaeth:
Circulating it’s Energy Matrix/Theocratic Kingdom ..then-
“The End of the World”.

Again...

“But in the same instant when Adam was expelled, the Lord gave unto the world Her time, and placed over Her Angelic keepers, Watchers & Princes”

“As an instrument of the thrashing... This Doctrine is a Flayle”

“Therefore you may do anything” –Mapsama

As the Grid Pattern was very special to John Dee [see his Book of Soyga]...the diagrams consisting of boxed squares proved nothing unusual in Dee’s current Understanding...

The Vertical and Horizontal Lines form Latitude and Longitude Lines, aligning the Zodiac, Celestial/Cosmological Spheres, Planets and Elements.

I believe some of the familiar number sequences in the 18
Keys refer to this: “456”, “9996”, “3663”, etc.,

Some of the context from these Keys make these numerical sequences appear as “Zones” or “Districts”...

Gnosticism plays an important function in the Enochian Materials.

Galvah is Sophia, trapped in flesh, yearning to reach Her destination.
Unwrapping the imprisoning skins of the fallen Adam.

Mondays were the EE Sabbath, and the EE calendar demonstrates this.
[Spoken of in this Volume]

The EE Hierarchy is a Balance of Male AND Female

Again... The EE enjoy making usage of Gnosticism, Pseudepigrapha, Nag Hammadi Scroll imagery.

It is my belief- the EE 'God of Justice' differs from the Old Testament Demiurge- 'Ialdabaoth'. ['Gnostic speaking...']

The EE are rebels against Entropy... seeking to overthrow the shackles of flesh, to which,
Humanity- were imprisoned by...

The unmade/uncreated Universes, still slumber... awaiting attention/LUX.

The Savior, who appears as the First Leaf [received last] of Loagaeth, resurrects 'black matter'.

He awakens from the dead ... [sleeping] "inertia". ..Similar to the Cthulhu cult

What rests, comes alive - when the redeemer [of EE Christian symbolism] ...saves the slumbering masses of Un-Creation.

The First Leaf of Loagaeth was presented last, detailing the Christos.

It was presented by Galvah, who again-is the personification of Sophia [Imprisoned Flesh]

Thus, we are all creators in Loagaeth.

New Year Rite

12-31-10 to 1-1-11

Performed 11:30Am- 12:23 AM

The Enochian Sphere [similar to the descending crown sphere of the 'Middle Pillar' exercise] above my head seems to have changed.

It now appeared 'artificial', as if it was hollow and metallic.

The usual globe of power above my crown chakra has now shifted location and is wrapped around me.

The globular sphere as a coat of many lights might return to it's original crown setting next time. (?)

I open the East Fire WatchTower Hierarchy:

- 3 God Names, the King and 6 Seniors-

I Vibrate Keys, #1, #2 ...
& #17 Fire of Air

In this Volume: Appendix

"Proper Key Index" – [Which Enochian Call Is Used?]

I call King Bataiva once more, this time- within the flaming red Heptagram, superimposed "through the Heptagon" with the appropriate WatchTower Seal.

I wait until I can feel it "hum".

This transpires:

I see what appears as a playing card King- His profile.

Blond hair, 'page style' haircut.

He wears a red shiny material 'royalty' coat with white fur hems, embroidered with green and red diamond shaped stones.

He says I have done well, and I ask for his blessing. He says

"Blessing will not come now, but will come later".

I 'see' an explosion coming from a round doughnut shaped rock.

Billowing black smoke, then comes fire...as the rock appears to be that of a black rubber tire/wheel.

I hear another 'bomb' blast ...mingled with a 'trumpet' blast and then hear:

"The voice of the seven thunders ... echo to the minds that know me.
I maketh thee a great seere, to learning the ways... the magick of the old ones. Understanding and know the modern ways of the cycle of things passed. Awaiting eagerly with angst, and awaiting the wraith of god and power, glory with all things, linked as one circle..."

As I wrote in "Enochian Entities – Practice & Theory – BY SaToGa" Volume #1:

... I oftentimes hear the voices of the Kings as Binaural.
For some reason, the language takes on the old archaic 'Olde English'... 'Thee', 'Thou', etc.
It personally turns me off [does not make it sound anymore holier, in my opinion] and transcribing the ritual notes with this can be nerve wrenching.

[I see a thick heavy chain with links being pulled taut]

"...[inaudible] ...no beginning and no end.
A lock, deep in the hearts and minds of those that know us.
Do not share thy glory with anyone.
We are angels [i.e., messengers] of old,
not the ones you are familiar with.
These are the un-named 7...Untouchables – who knoweth not and who descended not... who keepeth away the 'privy' [?] of men ...thou understanding this is unique, more of a feel than of a touch".

I ask a personal question about putting more notes together for volume 2.

the 6 seniors come together- amidst red ambient smoke-
I see a round table with only 2 chairs- but they all sit down at once
[even though there are still only 2 chairs]

The Table looks like red glossy mahogany wood, and what appears as an exaggerated huge gavel is now present.
'Two Seniors who share one arm' sit at the head of the table and grab the hammer, holding it above their heads, sideways.

The hammer sideways, looks like the 'T' of this East WatchTower.

The hammer is on fire.

They throw it at me and it opens up an 'aire' that spirals and sparkles multi-colored sparkles of light.
[my physical body jumps and I literally duck, thinking my face will meet this ballistic huge hammer]

I go inside a long black tunnel and I hear "knitting together - knitting together"...
[I see Betsy Ross sewing the American Flag]

I see the 'B' and 'C' on the flag King Carmara introduced to Dee.

The prior 'armless female head and bust' originally on King Carmara's flag changed form and the woman [now] grows arms and legs and she faces me and says "It is now time to walk!"

See: "Enochian Entities – Practice & Theory – BY SaToGa"
Volume #1-
Chapter: "C/B Cycle"

I see the B and C superimpose over each other to form an Enochian Letter.

[it flashed in and out so quickly but I believe it to be the letter "N"]

[The EE are well known to give very quick imagery flash]

The flag opens wider [stretches] and a cross on it grows as the C/B gets smaller until it fades out of view...

The Original Great WatchTower Table appears on this flag and blows hard in the winds.

I hear "This is now the union of the systems" and "Make it one now!"

I see what appears to be a funnel, [wide open mouth] turning to me now, as a dark tunnel, [folding in and out] of itself with 30 separate ridges..."Spiral these Aethyrs as one giant snake".

Each one overlaps over another one. The border lines dissolve and it appears as a 'wall-less labyrinth'..."The maze is only one, but to the uninitiated it appears as 30".

They [?] say "Open the book, and judegeth not, but learn"

I see an eagle that turns into a vulture as it flies by.

I am told by King Bataiva "This is for eating the corpses of the Union and the wounds of the union lay bare the siege" and "The time of the great disaster that shall befall all mankind... and the greatest gift that was lost, was the purity of their hearts [pause]...and of their [louder] minds".

I see someone sliding down two banister rails, skipping steps down a winding staircase.

It appears again as King Bataiva.

He walks towards me, trailing behind him the train of his royal robes.

He opens up his robe and I see within his heart- 3 daggers embedded within.

He pulls out the middle dagger and suspends it above his head.

Lightening hits it and His hair 'sprays upwards' like igniting a power static discharge.

He simultaneously pulls the remaining two swords out and holds His arms out horizontally, [like a crucifix] ...still holding them.

He approaches me, and stands chest to chest with me.

He wraps His arms around me and crosses his arms.
The two swords form an 'X' behind me.

The sword suspended over His head, drops behind him- point down- the sword hilt forms a 'T'- the sword hangs stationary, the length of my body...

"2 swords crossed behind ... one sword to your front...- encompassed in steel, your protection to walk through the fires..., of the path that leads ...and... the path thy... takes"

I see fire and hear explosions...

He says "Write this down" .....

"Thy cutteth with 6 swords but only beareth 3...[long pause]
...go now...and make learning"

-and write

"For the last day approacheth, but thou shalt make known all the secrets to those men who gather"

I see an hourglass, turning upside down
The sand particles are drops of fire

He says "Time is running, so begin!"

[The trance is heavy]

I ask why the substitution of the globe at the beginning of this rite-and he tells me [paraphrased]
“To establish a better connection”

I hear whistling on my left- and I am told:

“Some flesh are conduits, who scatter their bones and bring ‘the field’ to open, upon the 4 sections of Tex”.

As I cycle back to Beta...

I ‘hear’ a voice, faint, within my mind, as if my subconscious is thinking aloud-

[...or am I still in contact?]

RITUAL NOTES TRANSCRIBED:

I slipped into a deep trance.

By not calling the Seniors, and adding the “ArchAngel & 4 Kerubs”, the Rite took on a totally different “Energy and Setting”..

These notes will reflect the changes in information I received, if compared to my previous articles.

The King Name was chosen for Severity

[My previous Articles featured: King Bataiva (mercy)... now- Bataivh]

The change of King working- 'Severity' from 'Mercy', eliminating the 6 Seniors, using Key #11, and invoking the Archangel & 4 Kerubs during a 'partial solar eclipse' and 'meteor shower' brought highly charged 'apocalyptic overtones'.

What transpires was extremely surprising, if you compare what is to follow with 'what I was expecting' in the beginning of this article...

[...As soon as the 11th Key was recited and the Archangel appeared- the whole temple began to display mild poltergeist 'crackling of walls']

...Immediately, my scrying produced visions...I see a blue sky, over cast by white billowy clouds...the clouds and sky grow dark, and the clouds speed by my sight quickly, as if a magnificent storm is about to ensue. I ask for knowledge and initiation as I can sense something watching me from a distance...

I see a darkened desert with tumbleweeds blowing across. One of the tumbleweeds become like fire, and out of the rolling grows one mammoth entity with a huge wingspan. The wings attached lower than one would suspect, almost on the Latissimus Dorsi muscle group.

[I confirm this Entity to be: HCNBR]

On His forehead was a triangle, encasing an eyeball. Light was beaming from it, like a spiral funnel cloud. His demeanor was different from what I have been used to in my Enochian Work.

In the distance, there were two thrones.

All I could see of each occupant of said thrones, were Kingly 'head ornamentation'.

I understood Them to be the two Kings evoked previously in this Rite.

In my previous Article: "New Year Rite"

...I was told to "join the union"- signifying [in vision], making 'One' of the WatchTowers and Heptarchial Mystica "systems"

The beaming LUX of the 'Archangel'*

[Note: *Archangel and Kerub are terms 'manufactured' by Magick Lodges, and have become popular. I personally do not agree with calling these Entities "Angels", but to not confuse the reader, "Kerub" will be transcribed]

I see the profile of the Archangel, and He peers upward and the clouds darken which bring lightening and deafening thunder. The booming echoes literally distort my equilibrium, as if wearing headphones with the volume turned up to maximum.

"Hark"...Entity rises and in His navel is a red stone, with light emanating from it.
He looks at me and roars with the mouth of a lion. The energy spirals through me, and from my back, I feel wings sprouting.
I soar upwards, higher than He, and I am surrounded by 4 winged Entities [the Kerubs, previously called]

They are 'Mother' "angels" I am "secretly" told...
These are female, and surround me at the 'cardinal directions'.
They spin around and lines are formed to create patterns. This creates a pyramid and inverted pyramid = "a diamond shape".
This pulses..."this is the Art of Hearts"- They sing.

I see an aluminum pyramid and a round window portal.
I am told this is "Signs"
This metallic pyramid turns into a Nuclear Missile War Head.

*"We provide the Arts which create the biggest weapons man has.
We provide the rationale and common sense of 'not to use it'.
We provoke to make you use it.
We open the books and say 'learn not to use it'.
Man's inherent ways, will decide that destiny.
In a smaller scale man within himself is god.
Within are bubbling fountains of light that sprinkle forth the waters of life and godhood.
This is truly the bigger picture, for bombs are the meager one."*

I see white ceramic fountains of water that turn blood red.

I feel knowledge moving within me like light.
The temple walls are crackling loud.
The 4 EE I have seen before, return.
I see a flat spinning disc like a flying saucer.

“We are propelling it.
We are the inertia and We are the propellant force.
And We are the guidance.
When you combine what you have just seen,... the waves of the light of the waters within you as fountains...that is the inertia that drives these mechanized creatures. It is a dual system, one must learn one to learn to operate the second one.
The nuclear warheads are the same crafts, but without the waters and power of within. It is only externalized knowledge. Man rather have this, ...[pause] it is easier and without study.
And these tectonic plates, they move walls and they buckle. It is nature’s nuclear weapon.
Under the flooring where you sit, shall someday be split in half.
We shall guide you...and tell you when to leave”

[personal conversation ensues]

I ask what does the Black Cross of the WatchTowers mean:

“These are ‘passed third dimensional’.... [but...] They open at each quarter”.

“There are two horizontal axes” [plural of axis]
(Each at the cardinal points) “...and one vertical axis”
[I am shown]
[“North South, West East- Up Down”]

“When the lines of light form, this appears as a double helix. The pyramid [I am shown Giza] is one half of the helix. The Earth’s core spins and is the inverted pyramid of resonance.

The energy of radiance opposes itself.
An alignment with “A” [not “The”] universe is created.
It is as a gyroscope that connects Earth to it’s skies.

These are innate and with lines and meridians of power”.

“Across the goddess [Earth] you see meteors which are winged messengers who bring plagues and destruction. What you see is only the beginning of what it is to come.

The penumbra hides the light which is as a shadow that walks and hides the wisdom. The umbrella cloaks the knowledge. The light is hidden by it's darkness. These both are harbingers. We are the sentinels to come. The trumpets are vials and the vials are of plagues”.

“The first of the 49 leaves shall be rendered true...

[wording inaudible, sounds like “Madimi”]

and the silence of one of 49 keys, shall be revealed unto you” [“...”] (Was spoken as a deliberate rhyming poem)

Understand there are hidden references in this, which I have not added

'Galvah'- gave Dee the forty ninth silver leaf of the book & the name "Loagaeth".

I didn't want to add confusion here.

"Madimi" [actually another EE name similar to it] is spoken of in the conversation, but I kept that part to myself.

[personal conversation- I omit this deliberately by my own choice]

“Conduits of energy open the next chapter.

We are inside looking out. For those who see us as needing man are in their own foolishness for We have God. We seek acknowledgement of man in his haughtiness now, as We searched for righteousness in man during the time of Sodom. Not approval, but admittance that man has sealed their own final destiny, by their mouth, and not our.

We have the key”. [inaudible: God has the key (?)]
As in Sodom We oblige those who freely work with Us.
How many can seek truth?

This is what we seek.
In their own frailty and their own destruction is what they seek.
We seek that man now acknowledge his own doom*.
[*boom, bomb, doom – inaudible]
There is no external taunt nor any external tease.
There is no outside force that makes evil, for within man has every force containing evil ever created and manifested”.

“Bide Bide Bide” and I hear the word “Time” echoing in the back.

“Come now walk with us and rest easy son of men”

I see the ‘wheel of fortune’, spinning.

I see a giant bird with long blue feathers...but now it looks like a phoenix. His eyes are 2 diamonds on fire. It turns its head and opens its beak wide.

A fly comes out of its mouth.

The fly is holding a scroll and some sort of writing instrument.

“Fly to the heavens as the maggots of the field are awakening now!
Now it is your turn to write!”.

The fly opens the scroll and it says:
“It Is Finished”

The first EE [Archangel] at the beginning of this Ritual appears and says “It is time to descend.”
I am back in my temple. I look into the larger scrying black shewstone and I hear: “It is time, and time and time again after time”

He tells me to write this all down and record it just like They say it.

Except for three mild audio distortions, the voice recorder actually performed almost 100% perfect this time.

This shows me They can control what gets destroyed...or not.
... He says “.” [period]

“C/B Cycle”

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/enochian/message/7333>

‘ZAX Vision’:
“Get Thee Behind Me- Satan!”

ZAX is ‘everything they say’. [who ever “they” are]
For the sake of sparing redundancy and sounding cliché, ZAX really was, for me, all about meeting the proverbial ‘man in the mirror’.

The 3 parts, from my personal perspective*:

An amusement park’s ‘House of Mirrors’; viewing myself in various octaves of introspection.

Mountains too high to reach the pinnacle, but alas... that last bit of digging down deep, to succeed.
Visiting an astral theatre, & Me,... being the featured film.

Intense.

Much of it was personal, so it would be pretty boring for the reader to drudge through it all- besides, it’s personal!

I did get to ask questions-and they were promptly answered in ‘ZAX-Speak’.
[I went there with questions, and just ‘left’, with answers]

The inhabitants were holy, white shrouded, think “This is holy ground” sort of sacred.

A cross between Mount Sinai and your parent’s bedroom:
off limits, and sacrosanct.

I witnessed the ‘House of the Holies’, the “Veil” that the mage ‘parts’, and King Solomon’s Temple.

These was all etheric doppelgangers, heavy duty symbolism-
as a ‘Nile reflection’ of Amenti and Abydos.

Choronzon took the role as Psycho-pomp...
& Then, appearing in a
phantasmagoric kaleidoscope of faces from the gallery.

He said His greatest illusion, was... Me.

I was impressed by the archetype He conjured in Figure #333.

Liber Loagaeth, `Choronzon volunteered- [to lure me right in] was the infamous "Necronomicon".

He went into great detail about how Satan does not manufacture dinosaur bones to fool Christian Archeologists, but rather, lays foundation in the dreams of nightmarish merchants.

He took me on a small boat and played the Ferryman in a mock version of the Crossing of the River of Styx.

He pointed to Saturn and taught me [His rendition] about the concept of "Time" and said Chronos was a storm god like Set [Sutekh].

He continued to explain how the Gnostic Seth was in actuality, this divine storm bringer...

Liber Loagaeth was explained to me [earlier] by The 3 individuals who "appeared to Abraham [prior],...then 2 of The 3 destroying Sodom and Gomorrah and other cities"

Also Melchizedek 'passed by' and a small crowd said "He is the Logos, the King of Jerusalem"

This ...all of it, was heavy symbolism about Liber Loagaeth, and the Covenant [Holy Table].

My advice, to future wayfarers, is do not journey the 30 Aethyrs out of order. At least, do a few before 'travailing the notorious' ZAX.

[*In Volume #1 I spoke briefly about why each vision is unique to the individual sayer:

Like dreams, there is no universal 'look it up Lexicon']

Matthew 16:23 But he turned, and said unto Peter, "Get thee behind me, Satan: thou art an offence unto me: for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men". [King James Bible]

Revelation Chapter 21:

- 12- And had a wall great and high, and had twelve gates, and at the gates twelve angels, and names written thereon, which are the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel:
- 13- On the east three gates; on the north three gates; on the south three gates; and on the west three gates.
- 14- And the wall of the city had twelve foundations, and in them the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb.

As far as I know, this was the first time the Enochian WatchTower system has been properly correlated to make it Magickally accessible.

It would have made studying and magick a lot easier for me if I had understood this at the beginning of my studies...

Ohorela

Fri Jan 14, 2011

Took a nap [ @ My age, that's Happy Hour! ]...
I 'seen' the word:
"Ohorela"
It was 'written' as that, then it 'expanded'-
"ooooooooOOOOHOOOOooooooooooooRela"
...something like that.
-for a few times, over & over again
I know what it means in Enochian*...
But for it to 'pop up' in a 10 minute nap?
[Woke me up, actually]
I have not done any EE work for a couple of days since I finished my second book.
"They" call me, constantly...
[I know They aren't lonely, lol]
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/enochianmagic/message/102>

Ohorela [III]

Been an interesting couple of days...
I planned on taking a short 'magickal sabbatical' from doing any Enochian.
Enochian has a way of burning up your nervous system if performed too much-for too long.
[I believe I fit into that criteria]
Many long-time magickians will often take a few months off every once in awhile.
Well, that didn't happen
[Taking some time off lol]
"Ohorela Papers"....."Transmission- started"
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/enochianmagic/message/103>

*In Enochian Language: "Ohorela" means "Law"

"After a couple of days away from the Temple, I returned..."

Performing an opening rite, and confirming, as usual... the 'Enochian Skehinah', descending- & the Enochian Entities [EE] of the Table of Working, ascending.

The EE energies quickly grab hold of the chamber, and I immerse-mind first, into the tranquil state of Alpha level.

:Moving down and falling backwards:
...That's the best way I can articulate that comfortable, at home, feeling.

I am amongst the 24 Seniors- at a Round Table. I gaze upon the crystal sphere, and see what looks like an architect's blueprint.

I see the EE imagery flash before me. Sometimes so quickly, I can sense it is deliberately manifested that way, so I can not absorb the full memory the first time it is shown.

It is almost always:

- Fast Forward
- Pause
- Rewind
- Certain Segments Spliced
- Altered,
- Isolated "Stills"
- Magnified

& finally –

-Explained

The EE have become My Personal Friends & Allies.
To Them, I believe I am little more than a Business Partner.
Some of them, seem robotic, and some- like my brother.

Still, I always have an unsettling uneasiness...
EE always command- Respect.

Again, I am told...
“Write This Down”...

The “Ohorela Papers” were named by the EE.

They have initiated yet another project.
[Again for wide and quick distribution]
&.. For Free

The deadline for Volume #2 was January 19, 2011
I was quite a few days earlier in releasing it.
I thought I would have some vacation time due me.
Now again- this particular article is to be sent “upstream” by that same exact date.

These writings are not my invention, nor my teachings.
I will not yell from the roof tops:
“This is how it is done!”

Rather, I am a scribe, an EE conduit.
EE download - I upload.
That’s the ‘arrangement’

I do not think I was Dee, Kelley nor Crowley in a past or future lifetime...

I am no avatar
“Nor the second coming or the fourth encounter of Pharaoh PHast.PHood or King W.AL-mart”

This is not an acid trip...

It is not New Age ‘channeling’...

I am...

THIS IS ENOCHIAN MAGICK!

I will be compiling notes, directly from my Enochian Rituals.

The Material will be put in a pleasing format which will make sense to those who did not participate in the Ritual with me.

Grimoire, Spiral Note-Book, Voice Recorder & sometimes, My Wife, are my only physical witnesses.

Similar to Dee & Kelley- My wife & I are considered as 'One Part' to the EE.

There are times when I am 'neurologically fried' from participating solo [in Ritual]- & yet still... receiving a dual dose of energy.

I will Ground well afterwards, and up my dosage of Potassium [Volume #1]

These "Ohorela Papers" will be a Series of EE Works.

This Volume is called "Obtuse"
[Again- Not My Idea of Titles or Sub-Titles]

I am unsure of how many there will be, nor do I know what these will entail.

I do know some of the future Materials will consist of Obscure EE Items, Texts & Tablessuch as this Table of Nalvage which most EE practitioners are not familiar with.

[Volume #2 was similar in scope, containing the Liber Loagaeth, Lamen, & 7 Ensigns]

The reason most mages are not aware of these obscure, rarely discussed EE Materials is because most of them laid dormant to the seeking eyes of Magickal Lodges over 100 years ago.

These Lodges gave Enochian Magick It's popularity.

The 4 WatchTowers were usually the main fixture.

There is another reason these EE Materials were 'hidden'...

-ROUND TABLE OF NALVAGE-

THE FIRST EE MATERIAL RECEIVED:

Premise:

PROTOYPE OF THE 4 WATCHTOWERS TABLET.

→ Like a Hologram-

Everything, in "The EE Materials" -are Complete.
[Separated or as a Whole- it still equals 'One Complete Unit']

This is why the Enochian Materials can be incorporated with any Tradition or "Free-Style" [Neo-Enochian 'Systems']

It always carries "all of Itself", ...even in the smallest fragment.
["A box, within a box, within a box"]

Everything in the EE Materials have an 'Intrinsic Connection'

Figure #1

Look, and analyze...
Meditate on Figure #1 until it works it's way deep into your understanding... Does it "make sense" ...yet?

TABLE OF NALVAGE

This Table was the Prototype of what sort of encryption Dr. Dee was to look forward to & enjoy.

He loved those grid patterns and loved his “Book of Soyga”
[“Agyos” means “Holy” in Hebrew -Volume #2]

The Nalvage Table was encrypted with 3 levels:
Heart, Skin and Flesh.

It is a machine that comes apart.

[Like the Lamen, Sigil Dei Ameth, etc.,]

The point I am trying to convey is the EE Materials were not considered ‘just charts’...

They were Quantum Engines with Moving Parts.

[As I explained in Volume #1, even the Heptarchial Mystica’s King, Prince and Minister names were “Cycled”]

Intrinsic Connections

Figure #2

The patterns [as revealed to me], were sometimes given to Kelley/Dee, separately, and prior... to what the info pertained to.

This way, the EE Materials would make no sense to anyone, if the sessions were to come to an abrupt halt, inadvertently.

None of the information could be comprehended- until the next piece of the puzzle was given.

Dee's times were full of political tumult, demonic interference, and Kelley's threats of quitting.

The Table of Nalvage was one piece of the later WatchTower schematic.

Many of Dee's Diaries disappeared- for a 'deliberate' reason...

-These EE Materials were for This Age-

[Discussed explicitly in Volumes #1 & #2]

We can now ascertain from Figures #1, 2 & 3...

‘THE FUNCTION OF THE TABLE OF UNION ENTITIES’:

- EXARP = SACH
‘Confirming Entities’
- HCOMA = LUAH
‘Praising Entities’
- NANTA = URCH
‘Confounding Entities’
- BITOM = LANG
‘Ministering Entities’

We can now, also ascertain...

‘THE FUNCTION OF THE 3 ENSIGN BEAERS [3 GOD NAMES (3,4,5)] OF EACH WATCHTOWER’

- 1st Continent = East WatchTower:
Highest Life/Joy – Fire
- 2nd Continent = North WatchTower
Life /Potentiality – Water
- 3rd Continent = South WatchTower
Continent of “Creation” = Earth
- 4th Continent = West Watchtower
Continent of “Discord” = Air

Original WatchTower

Order of Continents: Round Table of Nalvage

IAD = GOD

- Continent #1:

Iad Moz Zir = Oro Ibah Aozpi

“I am the Joy of God”

- Continent #2:

Iad Bab Zna = Oip Teaa Pdoce

“God’s Power In Motion”

- Continent #3:

Iad Sor Gru = Mor Dial Hctga

“Result of God’s Action”

- Continent #4:

Iad Ser Osf = Mph Arsl Gaiol

“God’s Discord & lamentation”

→ By “reverse engineering”...we can now meditate upon each of the properties, attributes and characteristics of each 3,4,5 God Name...

As well as the Individual WatchTower ‘quality’

Example:

The Water WatchTower which is North, Green...

Continent #2:

Iad Bab Zna = Oip Teaa Pdoce
"God's Power In Motion"

→ Water is God's Power in Motion.

Magickally, we understand what the Water Element 'is'.
But the Enochian Materials have much more profound meaning to 'Their' elements*.

When we incorporate the "Black Cross" [Table of Union], we can now fully understand the function and the attributes of the EE Forces we are utilizing.

[Ref. TFR pg. 183 per Ave Saying the "L" has "more FORCE than N".]

*If you compare the Heptarchial Mystica's Kings and Princes to Traditional Planetary Correspondences, you will understand the significant differences.

The 'Vision Talisman' lays out a Diagram- and shows us how to interpret the WatchTowers, and It's Occupants.

It is encompassed by the Zodiac Belt.

Depicts the Order/Flow of the WatchTowers in the acronym:

“ A → G → L → A ”

[See Volume #1]

All My Books are Free.

So When I Refer the Reader to My Prior Volumes,
It Should Not Be Misconstrued As A Sales Pitch.

The "Ohorela Papers" should be considered
Advanced Enochian Magick.

Get familiar with the substructure of the system, before groking the infrastructure of it.

If you want to 'practice' Enochian in It's purist form- my advice is to avoid clouding your mind with the 'flavors of the week '...

I will not dare say:
"just read my books until you get more than a solid foundation in the EE Materials".

That would be absurd!
There are many excellent writers in the EE playing field.

However, if you introduce a wide array of variables into your research- you may walk away totally confused.

Here's an example:

You want to learn about traveling through the Enochian Aethyrs.
You read on forums how other mages 'did it'.
You read their adventures with the EE.

Then, you compare that to Crowley's "Vision & the Voice"...

Now... 'You try it at home'...

Instantly, your subconscious comes under scrutiny because it must live up to the expectations of what your mind has consumed and sorted in it's infinite data base.

[& that's a trademark protocol of the EE]
(See Volume #1)

You stare into the scrying mirror until your eyes feel like onions have been forced under your eyelids. [I hate when that happens]
You see a dark cloud pass in your gaze, then it evaporates just as quick. After awhile, you quit. Scratching your head, thinking to yourself...

"I thought Enochian Magick was powerful...why can't I see stuff?"

Do not raise your standard of expectation so high that you will doom yourself to disappointment from the very beginning.

Choose one or two Authors who have a credible, or at least- garners a majority of attention from fellow mages.

Start off slow and do not expect results
"Like [enter the name of your favorite magickians here] got"

Patience is not only a Virtue, but it is also a Ruler in the Enochian Tool-Box!

Enochian Entity Realms – the EE 30 Aethyrs

After exploring the 30 Aethyrs/Aires...
[some of them, more than once]
...the Visions became more linear for me.

The Aethyrs have boundaries, and these Territories have Their own laws and jurisdiction.

The Laws are ‘Laws of Geometry’

The Geometry conforms to the lucid flow of liquid boundaries.

There are 92* Governors, (not 91)

[Again, this is My Own Research & Experience]

[*This may be discussed in a later Document]

I am Not one who participates in the many New Age Channeling Doctrines circling this New Aeon.

But Sacred Geometry holds some truths.

The 'Book of Enoch', and just about anything attributed to Enoch... usually holds some type of 'Magickal Math' principles, attached.

In Geometry, a Tetrahedron is a polyhedron composed of four triangular faces.

The Tetrahedron is the three-dimensional case of the more general concept of a *Euclidean simplex.

The Tetrahedron is one kind of pyramid

[A Tetrahedron is also known as a Triangular Pyramid]

Reference: "The Mathematicall Praeface to Elements of Geometrie of **Euclid of Megara, by John Dee"

Obviously, the EE knew fully well, that John Dee could relate in these Mathematical terms.

Visualize the above Tetrahedron –

"Flattened Out"...

Then “Super-Impose” a few of them over each other...

...& then more, once the visualization gets easier

Keep doing this until you have 87
“Flattened Out” Tetrahedron Corners
[29 ‘Flattened-Out’ Tetrahedrons would produce 87 Corners]
 $29 \times 3 = 87$

This is a very simplistic Representation of the Enochian Aethyrs-
[Aires #2-30]

30 Aethyrs

TEX [the 1st Aethyr/Aire] has 4 Divisions...

There are 87 Territories, divided amongst the [Flattened – Out] Tetrahedrons.

Then we added a Square- [which really is a Tesseract]- but for our simple understanding- just a square...

We now have 91 Enochian Zones.

Zones = Fractions of [Distinct] Aethyrs.

These 91 Zones compose the 30 Enochian Aethyrs

*Of course, They are not flat- & These really are not globes*, either.
But- for simple analogy- we will think of these as Spheres.
[*Similar to visualizing the Tree of Life]*

Each Sphere is a Globe with a Tetrahedron inside it...
&
...One Sphere with a Square inside

Each of these 30/91 revolving and rotating machines are unique, with Their Own Laws, Governments and Rulers...
91 Zones- 92 Governors- 30 Aires/Aethyrs

“Enochian Entities - Book B” – By SaToGa
Volume #2

In the “ZAX Vision”, the EE explained it as:

**This is the Analogy of Correlation**

(This Volume: “ZAX Vision: Get Thee Behind Me- Satan!”)

*“Think of the 18 Calls as The Keys that Open the Tumblers
of the Loagaeth cities.*

*The WatchTowers contain It’s occupants, &
the Governors of the 30 Aethyrs” [the 19th Key]
The Holy Table- is as the -Loagaeth & 30 Aethyrs.*

*The 7 Ensigns- is as the -Heptarchial Mystica
Sigillum Dei Aemeth- is as the -WatchTowers*

Microcosm- is as the –Macrocosm

The EE Infrastructure: “Knitting Together”

30 Aethyrs are “of” the Cities of Loagaeth

Liber Loagaeth are 49 gold sheets with a differing front and back.

In other words, this signifies “Thickness or Volume” and that each “page” is 3D- maybe, even... “Multi-Dimensional”

The 19th Call is a Trumpet that Calls the 91 Governors

The 91 parts are ‘etheric counterparts’ “of” the 30 Aethyrs

*Heptarchial Mystica is the ‘Cosmology’ and ‘Calendar’
system of the EE MultiVerse(s)*

Previously, I wrote:

“Dee’s diaries are vague in establishing a direct link between the Enochian Keys/Calls and the Watchtower tablets.”

The WatchTowers contain the ‘Census’ [inhabitants] of the 30 Aethyrs, 91 Parts and Loagaeth.

Think of the WatchTower as a telephone directory.

Find the occupant and dial it in!

The 18 Calls/Keys [including the 19th] are directly related to Loagaeth.

If Loagaeth was a Nation, the 18 Calls is it’s Declaration of Independence. [‘Directives’]

The EE were very interested in the World’s Kingdoms.

We see this as an interest because the EE Hierarchy is composed of a “Theocracy”- like the 12 Tribes of Israel.

EE has Kings, Seniors, Princes, Ministers and of course, God(s)...and a God of Justice

(Scales of Balance)

*The purpose of Loagaeth:
Circulating it's Energy Matrix/Theocratic Kingdom ..then-
"The End of the World".*

Again...

"But in the same instant when Adam was expelled, the Lord gave unto the world Her time, and placed over Her Angelic keepers, Watchers & Princes"

"As an instrument of the thrashing...This Doctrine is a Flayle"

"Therefore you may do anything" –Mapsama

As the Grid Pattern was very special to John Dee [see his Book of Soyga]...the diagrams consisting of boxed squares proved nothing unusual in Dee's current Understanding...

*The Vertical and Horizontal Lines form Latitude and Longitude Lines, aligning the Zodiac, Celestial/Cosmological
Spheres, Planets and Elements*

I believe some of the familiar number sequences in the 18

Keys refer to this: "456", "9996", "3663", etc.,

Some of the context from these Keys make these numerical sequences appear as "Zones" or "Districts"...

It is physically Impossible to "Chart" Enochian
Multi-Dimensional Zones in a 2D book
[and have them make sense!]

However, rather than trying to grok the Enochian Aires as:

'One Onion with 30 Skins and a CruX pit inside it...'

Try to fathom the following drawings...

→ [For the beginning Mage] To completely understand the outline of 30 Aethyrs, [with 91 Corresponding Areas!] ...will lead most to absolute frustration.

Trying to ascertain where Zone 1 ends, and Zones #2-3 begins, overlaps, bleeds-through, etc.,
- can be confusing.

Review these Notes the next time you decide to venture through the 'Cities' of Liber Loagaeth.

Take all the information from my other books with you.

The more understanding One contains within the psyche...

The unfolding of "Enochian Realities" congeals `into semi-digestible molds.

Accessing These Aethyrs:

In my prior books, I gave various techniques, as well as my own results, with the Aethyrs.

Here's one that can propel you past stagnation:

Visible Apparition is mandatory for these to be considered 'Legitimate Enochian Entity Contact'

[See prior Volumes]

-Temple set up

-Key 1 & 2

-GBRH.eptagram

-Rising on the Planes:

From Malkuth- 'Ascend' up the Serpent Trail Until reaching Chesed.

From there, enter Da`ath.

Emulate a sensation of falling backwards from Da`ath until you reach Yesod.

[EE are very Lunar-oriented: You may use Queen Scale Color Scheme]

From Yesod- Recite the 19th Key...

If you are using wands set aside primarily for Enochian Ritual...
[See prior Volumes]

-Using Spirit Wand:

Draw a Heptagram over the Scrying Mirror.

'Pierce this Veil' and Circle the Scrying Mirror 7 times, Clockwise-then 7 times- Counter-Clockwise... through the Heptagon that is inside the Heptagram you just "Veil Pierced"

When you withdraw your hand- you should feel a sticky magnetic pulling sensation.

This is a Portal

If you set up your Temple as instructed in the Prior Volumes, you will be able to Legitimately Contact the EE Realms at this time.

Usually, in my own experience- you will see –literally, small floating Electric Blue and/or Indigo spheres in your peripheral vision floating independently around your temple space.

-Remember, there are 30 Aethyrs- consisting of 91 Zones.

Each Zone has Their own Governor [92]

Aires #2 through #30 share one trait...
Each Aire has an Apex.

This Apex is where all 3 individual Zones become unified and ‘connect’ within that particular Aire.

It is usually located by a Large or Outstanding [Hyperbolic]
Pillar, Pyramid, Shamanic World Tree, Obelisk.

[It is a similar to the rotor in an engine]

Release Date: January 20, 2011

This Volume will be [very] different.

→ This Book is Divided into Two Distinct and very separate parts.

You probably already noticed the format is different. The margin is on the left side of this book, rather than being centered as I usually have my books. I did this for a reason.

This first part of the book reads like a normal book.

However, the other half of it is written in the Enochian Language. This language is similar to Hebrew as it is written and read Left to Right.

As far as I know, it is the only book written [and read] in Enochian that is currently online and constructed correctly.

The Enochian Language is read this way:

The back cover is now the Front Cover.

The book binder is on your right, and the pages are on the left.

When you open the cover,
you will be reaching across the front of you with your right hand.

You open the cover & that is the First Page.

Right to Left and Downward...

After reading the Preface- a Note will tell you to Scroll down to the Last Page... That will then be the Front Cover. When you scroll up, the next page [on top] will be page #2. You will start reading from the top of the right column, and read to the left- downwards. When you get to the last sentence, the last word will be on the lowest left side. You again scroll upwards to Page #3.

[See My Chart –Next Page]

If you have been reading my books, this is now the 5th Book.
 I enclosed the Names and ISBN Digits as well as the ISBN Bar Codes for easy reference as the amount of my Volumes are climbing and some people are getting confused and losing track. [Me too!]
 This should make it all a little easier.

The Enochian Entities definitely have an agenda that is aligned to our current time line. I have been releasing the Volumes in accordance with Their instructions and release dates.

This small tome in the Enochian Language

[available @ this date of 19/01/11*]

...is to be considered a “Talisman”.

You can reference my Enochian Font Chart on the prior page, and translate the Talisman into your own language so you will know what it says.

→ Do Not Trust Anyone To Write Rituals For You... Especially in Enochian!

From what I can personally ascertain, this work was long overdue. There is much confusion on how to format, read and write correctly in Enochian.

Many Mages want to construct their own rituals in the Enochian Language and it seems there are many incorrect notions being given out in the advice department.

*B Cocasg de Eno Domini

I will state that this EE Talisman is extremely powerful all by itself. By that, I am stating --just by printing it out, as It is- and placing It in your Temple space, should help you in your Enochian Vision* works.

The “Ohorela Papers” were named by the EE.
They have initiated yet another project.

Again for wide and quick distribution
&.. For Free

*These writings are not my invention, nor my teachings.
I will not yell from the roof tops:
“This is how it is done!”
Rather, I am a scribe, an EE conduit.
EE download - I upload.
That’s the ‘arrangement’*

This & All Prior Volumes Previously Released-were works of Altruism.
There were no fees for these Volumes.
Nor did I ask for any type of Contribution, whatsoever.

THE ONLY FAVOR I ASK OF YOU IS TO PLEASE KEEP THESE BOOKS IN CIRCULATION.
UPLOAD THEM AND DOWNLOAD THEM, PRINT THEM AND COPY/PASTE THEM ALL OVER THE PLACE! ...INTERNET & BEYOND!

PLEASE- IF YOU COPY & PASTE FROM MY BOOKS-
KINDLY INCLUDE:

MY NAME, COPYRIGHT INFORMATION AND EMAIL ADDRESS.

COPYRIGHT©1995-2011 –SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

I WOULD LIKE TO GET SOME CREDIT FOR ALL THE WORK I PUT INTO THESE.
[I think that is fair]

My only hope, is for my name to go down in the Enochian annals of time, and to leave as my contribution, these books.
That is my Magickal Legacy. My small, but personal addition ... to the archives of Enochian history.

Yours Truly,
-SaToGa
Salvatore ‘Tommy’ Ganci

“In the Vision [Figure #1 & #3]
I seen little people- [Reminiscent of ‘Gulliver’s Travels’] carrying square boxes with letters, on top of their heads.

They were shuffling around, every time someone yelled “SHUNT” ...*Shunt!... Shunt!... ****

This ‘scene’ flipped over, under it:

It appeared as a circuit board* with electricity traveling from one letter to groups of letters.

To watch the vision, it makes so much sense, but to convey it- or attempt to draw it, is almost impossible for me!

* *Motherboard with ‘electronic relays and gadgets’ passing and swapping current [Step-down & Step-Up Transformers]

→ Recall, the Enochian Calls [Keys] are not necessary to Activate/Summon the WatchTower Entities.

[See My Other Volumes]

A simple ‘getting to know you ritual’ lasting only a little more than couple of weeks at the beginning [of the Enochian Preparation] is enough to initiate a person into the Enochian Current-Stream.

From there, reciting small sequences of letters is all that is needed to Summon!

Again, No Enochian Calls... nor anything else for that matter-to ‘activate’ the Enochian Stream.

1st level consists of 20 Letters.

Think of that small board as a circuit board, with wires connecting the letters, underneath.

2nd Level consists of 10 Letters

3rd Level consists of 36 Letters

4th Level consists of 40 Letters [Black Cross]

The whole WatchTower tablet itself revolves on an axis that is aligned to the Zodiac belt.

That rotates in conjunction with Liber Loagaeth.

*Shunt:

- to shove or turn (someone or something) aside or out of the way.
- to sidetrack; get rid of.
- to move or turn aside or out of the way.

Electricity:

- to divert (a part of a current) by connecting a circuit element in parallel with another.
- to place or furnish with a shunt.

Railroads:

- to shift (rolling stock) from one track to another; switch.
- [of a locomotive with rolling stock] to move from track to track or from point to point, as in a railroad yard; switch.

Surgery:

- to divert blood or other fluid by means of a shunt.
- the tube itself.

The fountain of energy passes and overflows/showering from one Sephiroth to the one under it.

Power passes along the Paths- to and fro.

The path going to Tiphareth from Yesod is different than the path going to Yesod from Tiphareth.

Liber Loagaeth works the same way.

Recall from my other Volumes:

“Liber Loagaeth are 49 gold sheets with a differing front and back. In other words, this signifies “Thickness or Volume” and that each “page” is 3D- maybe, even... Multi-Dimensional”

There's a lot of info there...

That was the preparation.

"I feel the temple floor shaking, and my root charka creates intense heat. I feel like my spine is a Guitar, as I can literally feel 'strings' being prodded and waves of intense energy vibrating upwards."

For some odd reason, every time the energy 'plucked' around Lumbar 2, 3 & 4- the refrigerator in the other room kept clicking and knocking. This happened for about 15 or 20 minutes. The synchronicity was uncanny. I eventually knew when the refrigerator would 'knock' right before it did because I realized the cadence and patterns of energy in those lumbar regions of my spine.

Sure enough, I looked behind this spare refrigerator afterwards and [it is an older model]- it had a grill of skinny pipes running vertically... like a Harp made of tubes rather than strings.

"I see what appeared as a big, plump, white bird, with the head of a man- flying towards my left. Then I was seated in a class room, and being taught the following...

I am looking down, as various items are being displayed on a desk.
I can 'view' scenes for instruction somewhere in my 'mind-projection'... "

[How do you explain this stuff???]

“...Like two Harps-intersecting:

The Chords are ‘super-imposed’ vertically and horizontally.

These Chords are composed of etheric [invisible] filaments...
‘plasma fibers’ that run in 90 degree angles.

-Similar to Ley Lines-

Each Intersecting Plasma-Chord resonates at different frequencies.

The Shunt:

This Series of Oscillations
Pass throughout the Grid Patterns- Harmonically.

In turn, they vibrate intersecting chords [Grids] which form a Nexus.

The Names of the EE are the receiving Conduits.

Each frequency is an EE Signature.

Thus the Enochian Language, Itself, is as a Music Scale.

Each Grid composition are lines of Longitude & Latitude.

They transmit and intercept/receive radiating Acoustic **Plasmid* vibrations.

→ The Tones transmit, intercept, mutant/change... and become a new vibration...forming an EE Signature

*plasmid

—noun Microbiology .

a segment of DNA independent of the chromosomes and capable of replication, occurring in bacteria and yeast: used in recombinant DNA procedures to transfer genetic material from one cell to another.

These Tones radiate LUX.

Each of the ascending scale levels are higher frequencies, ending in the Table of Union- Black Cross.

This is why the Grid Formation is so important- most of the EE materials, including Liber Loagaeth, are all in grid patterns.

The EE wanted this Grid Composition-this is the 'Blueprint' behind it.

-SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo

Staff
consists of lines

When Reciting- Vibrating [Literally!]
 an Enochian Entity Name-
 The corresponding Chords are Plucked-creating a chain/chord reaction.

“Enochian Entities - Book B” – By SaToGa
Volume #2:

“In the “ZAX Vision”, the EE explained it as:

*This is the Analogy of Correlation*

(This Volume: “ZAX Vision: Get Thee Behind Me- Satan!”)

“Think of the 18 Calls as The Keys that Open the Tumblers
of the Loagaeth cities.

The WatchTowers contain It’s occupants, &
the Governors of the 30 Aethyrs” [the 19th Key]
The Holy Table- is as the -Loagaeth & 30 Aethyrs.

The 7 Ensigns- is as the -Heptarchial Mystica
Sigillum Dei Aemeth- is as the -WatchTowers

Microcosm- is as the –Macrocosm

The EE Infrastructure: “Knitting Together”

30 Aethyrs are “of” the Cities of Loagaeth

Liber Loagaeth are 49 gold sheets with a differing front and back.

In other words, this signifies “Thickness or Volume” and that each “page” is 3D- maybe, even... “Multi-Dimensional”

The 19th Call is a Trumpet that Calls the 91 Governors
The 91 parts are ‘etheric counterparts’ “of” the 30 Aethyrs
Heptarchial Mystica is the ‘Cosmology’ and ‘Calendar’
system of the EE MultiVerse(s)

Previously, I wrote:

“Dee’s diaries are vague in establishing a direct link between the Enochian Keys/Calls and the Watchtower tablets.”

The WatchTowers contain the ‘Census’ [inhabitants] of the 30 Aethyrs, 91 Parts and Loagaeth.

Think of the WatchTower as a telephone directory.

Find the occupant and dial it in!

The 18 Calls/Keys [including the 19th] are directly related to Loagaeth.

If Loagaeth was a Nation, the 18 Calls is it’s Declaration of Independence. [‘Directives’]

The EE were very interested in the World’s Kingdoms.

We see this as an interest because the EE Hierarchy is composed of a “Theocracy”- like the 12 Tribes of Israel.
EE has Kings, Seniors, Princes, Ministers and of course,

God(s)...and a God of Justice
(Scales of Balance)
The purpose of Loagaeth:
Circulating it's Energy Matrix/Theocratic Kingdom ..then-
"The End of the World".

Again...

"But in the same instant when Adam was expelled, the Lord gave unto the world Her time, and placed over Her Angelic keepers, Watchers & Princes"

"As an instrument of the thrashing...This Doctrine is a Flayle"

"Therefore you may do anything" –Mapsama

As the Grid Pattern was very special to John Dee [see his Book of Soyga]...the diagrams consisting of boxed squares proved nothing unusual in Dee's current Understanding...

The Vertical and Horizontal Lines form Latitude and Longitude Lines, aligning the Zodiac, Celestial/Cosmological
Spheres, Planets and Elements

I believe some of the familiar number sequences in the 18

Keys refer to this: "456", "9996", "3663", etc.,

Some of the context from these Keys make these numerical sequences appear as 'Zones or Districts'..."

“Enochian Alphabet”

[Christmas Eve- 12/24/2007]

NOTE: This is Not Scrying the Alphabet

My work with EE has revealed some insight into Their System, including Their Alphabet.

Kelley received the Enochian Alphabet by EE in a thrice-fold division:
(3 sets) x (7 letters)

People are used to seeing "Cardinal, Mutable, Fixed" associated with the Zodiac...

The sequence of:

-Cardinal [create, begin]

-Fixed [change/maintain]

-Mutable [changing to something else, end/destroy]

...are parts of all the patterns we experience.

"Language and communication are the cornerstone to evolution.

Language and it's expression are 'finite borders' that must be expanded to 'allow' broader horizons"

- An EE told me this

Zodiac Influence -Cardinal Qualities:

1st Set of 7 Letters:
B, C/K, G/J, D, F, A, E

"Cardinal" - [from the French "cardo"] = a 'hinge', that on which something turns. (It is the most important part)

Example:

In the Hept. Myst. System, A majority of names begin with the letter "B". It was my contention that the "B" changes in cycles.
Also, Carmara drops the "C" and is Marmara.

[See My Other Volumes- "C/B Cycle"]

--The cycling of the letters could be considered "hinge-like"

Planet Influence -Mutable Qualities:

2nd Set of 7 Letters:
M, I/Y, H, L, P, Q, N

"Mutable" = "subject to change".

Example:

His bigger name is Carmara, that is pronounced Marmara by the angels (the first "M" remains silent).

--The "bigger name" has the Zodiac "C" rather than the Planet "M".
"Subject to Change"

Element Influence [Including Aethyrs] -Fixed Qualities:

3rd Set of 7 Letters:
X, O, R, Z, U/V/W, S, T

"Fixed" = securely placed/fastened - implies unchanging.

--Quite a few 'power words' of the Enochian Keys contain the letter "Z". These Calls exert 'tension and torque' on the Element Qualities of the 4 WatchTowers, [and 30 Aethyrs].

Example:

"ZACARe ca od ZAMRAN" amplifies my Temple and My Aura and magnifies/intensifies "Hybrid works".

From Macrocosmic to Microcosmic:

The Structure of:

Zodiac - Planet – Element:

is similar to a "cosmic step-down transformer".

- The Celestial Hinge of the Zodiac.
- The Cycles of the Planets.
- The Fixed Elements which cement their molecular structure, holding our reality, together.

“Enochian Alphabet II”

The Enochian Alphabet is in an ordered structure.

Each character holds a frequency of it's own.

[See My Other Volumes: Enochian Entities -Key Of It All]

The sequence of order the Alphabet was given to Kelley is Important:

Ref. TFR pg. 183 per Ave Saying the "L" has "more FORCE than N".

Zodiac Influence -Cardinal Qualities:

1st Set of 7 Letters:

B, C/K, G/J, D, F, A, E

This Order:

See My Other Volumes for a Color-Coded Chart... makes it easier for understanding

Aries FIRE- {1.EAST}

Taurus EARTH- {2.SOUTH}

Gemini AIR- {3.WEST}

Cancer WATER- {4.NORTH}

Leo FIRE- [EAST]/ SOUTH {5.EAST}

Virgo EARTH- [SOUTH]/ {6.SOUTH} WEST

Libra AIR- [WEST]/ NORTH {7.WEST}

Scorpio WATER- [NORTH]/ {8.NORTH} EAST

Sagittarius FIRE- [EAST]/ NORTH {9.EAST}

Capricorn EARTH- [SOUTH]/ {10.SOUTH} EAST

Aquarius AIR- [WEST]/ SOUTH {11.WEST}

Pisces WATER- [NORTH]/ {12.NORTH} WEST

Obviously, there are only 7 Letters but 12 Zodiac Signs.
There is another 'structure-key' that pertains to the cycling of these Zodiac/Letters depending where They are in a Name, Phrase, etc.,

Planet Influence -Mutable Qualities:

2nd Set of 7 Letters:

M, I/Y, H, L, P, Q, N

This Order:

Venus, Sun, Mars, Jupiter, Mercury, Saturn, Moon

Element Influence [Including Aethyrs] -Fixed Qualities:

3rd Set of 7 Letters:

X, O, R, Z, U/V/W, S, T

Fire, Earth, Air, Water
Red/Black/White/Green

Again, obviously, there are 7 Letters but only 4 Elements.

There is also a 'structure-key' that pertains to the cycling of these Element/Letters depending where They are in a Name, Phrase, etc.,

The Enochian System is "Alive"...

Placement of Letters causes 'change and shifting'.

[Similar to a 'Rubik's Cube']

We see King Names which Spiral.

Adding a final Letter to the King Name designates whether it is for Mercy or Severity.

[Ref. TFR pg. 183 per Ave Saying the "L" has "more FORCE than N"]

These 2 "Enochian Alphabet" articles do not pertain to
'scrying the EE Alphabet'.

'Structure-Keys' & other Updates to both prior articles will be discussed as well as Scrying the Enochian Letters in an upcoming Volume.

Here is the Missing Structure

as promised...

Scrying the Alphabet

There are many renditions to the the meanings of the Enochian Alphabet.

I recommend Enochian Students to scry it themselves.

The Golden Dawn put out a small pamphlet on some of their members crying it.

There is my own rendition.

If you read my other books, then you will grok how I personally view the system.

I believe a mage must be 'called' by these Enochian Entities [EE]- thus, "Sanctified"

[\[See My Other Volumes\]](#)

From there, the 'promising mage' must commit to the EE Work, thus, "Initiation" by the EE.

From there, the EE will perform a sort of "Benediction", some might call it a "Blessing"

Once all of the above transpires- the dedicated & devoted mage will be "within the EE Current"

I will attest- it is an Extremely Powerful Stream of 'Pooled Energy'...

'Not at all similar to that of a human-crafted Egregore'

It Is a Unique Grid of LUX that you must experience to understand.

If you undertake all I have published, thus far- you will have a very thorough understanding of the Enochian Alphabet.

Some if it takes a 'personal judgment call' by the Practitioner,

But greatly worth the effort!

b = Wheel, Cycle. the Number #2
[See My Other Volumes]

c/k = Particles [as in Floating “Particles”]

g/j = Make Stationary, Grasp, to Hold

d = Fusion

f = to Make Strong, [by ‘Replication’]

a = Undivided, Whole

e = Erect, to Build

m = Entropy, [‘Break-Down’ in order to Rebuild or Restore]

i/y = Replenish [by either increase or decrease]

h = to Maintain, [to keep from Moving, ‘Anchor’]

l [L] = Wave, the Number #1

p = Constrict, Confine

q = Move, Change, Dynamic

n = Endure, Increase [by 'Repetition']

x = Cross-Over, to Find, Locate

o = Genesis/Begin in order to Seek, Find, Explore

r = Barrier, to keep from Mutating, [End of Cycle] (Different from the letter 'p')

z = to Ascend with added/extra 'Dominance'

u/v/w = Actualize, Actuate, Activate
(I 'received' all 3 words @ the same time)

s = Divine, a Positive Charge

t = Revitalize, Resuscitate, Invigorate, Resurgence, Resurrect
(I 'received' all 5 words @ the same time)

Trying to compare the Enochian Alphabet to something, the closest I could possibly fathom, is the 'scientific' Element Periodic Table/Chart... if it suddenly incorporated a gazillion more elements.

...Or, some type of Chemical Compounds which formulate words.

Or if I assigned various Letters to Tree of Life.

Each Enochian Letter sequence creates Meridian Harmonics, Etheric Activations, Celestial Dynamics, Coordinates of Light.

They are DNA on Paper...literally...

The Letters dance under a Microscope and bewilder Telescopes.

They are Quantum Computers uploading bytes of information into your Brain...every time you reference Them.

Recall the EE explicitly commanding Dee & Kelley to write some of the letter sequences Backwards.

It is...that Powerful.

[Side Note:] I performed an EE Ritual a couple of nights ago...I had a huge Hierarchy conjured within our Temple.

I wanted to know if EE still considered me a “slacker”...and Their response was that ‘I should start playing the Multi-Million Dollar Lottery’...

What do you think?

I consider the Enochian Entities to be similar to what the Egyptians encountered as the Divine Ennead.

[Tep Zepi]

Babalon's inclination seems to be in alignment with that of Set [Sutekh]

*I view Galvah as Ma'at:
though originally I viewed Her as Isis
[until I worked through Aethyrs 12, 11, & 10 again]

Nalvage archetype of Thoth

-Some view Enoch as Thoth,
so we can bring it full circle, per se

→ I do not believe that the 'Energy-Pool' of the Judeo-Christian Archangel [Telesmatic Imagery] Egregore was the one(s) Dee & Kelley 'tapped in to'.

I believe those 'Archangels' are more in line to Hebrew and Christian thinking.

I do feel that the [greater purpose] 'instructing current' to which they are aligned, is probably what Dee & Kelley encountered.

Gabriel gave Muhammed the Koran and announced the coming of John the Baptizer and Jesus.
His brief appearance in the Book of Daniel also leans to the Harbinger Trumpet Call of Gabriel.

Whenever something 'new' is about to appear on the current scene, it is Gabriel who announces it.

...This whole New Aeon Current has Horus written all over it!

Michael the archangel- who throws Satan out of heaven-- inadvertently [accidentally?] gives Dee the infamous 666 'lead' during creation of the most famous Seal... seems more than a mere

-Lucifitan as "Brightness"
-Babalon rather than Babylon
-Ways to encounter Choronzon
-Instructions on contacting Cacodaemons...
But promise never to do it!
...teasing Kelley's natural proclivity to play with Black Magick
&
-Instituting Gnostic overtones...

The EE Religio-Political ‘scheme’ was to knock down World Religion and it’s Political Bedfellows.

These Entities were deliberately stumbling and pretending to ‘play nice’...

*Galvah- Sophia [Wisdom]- Isis [12:12]- Babalon

Galvah = Sophia

Babalon = Madimi

Abaddon or Apollyon

Abaddon (Hebrew: אַבְדּוֹן, Ābaddōn, Greek: Apollyon, Latin: Exterminans, Coptic: Abbaton, meaning "A place of destruction", "The Destroyer", "Depths of Hell") in the Revelation of St. John, is the king of tormenting locusts and the angel of the bottomless pit.<sup>[1]</sup> The exact nature of Abaddon is debated, but the Hebrew word is related to the triliteral root אבד (ABD), which in verb form means "to perish."<sup>[2]</sup>

The Independent for June 18, 1952, cost five cents.

The front page headline reads:

BLAST KILLS CHEMIST

House Torn Apart by Explosion

There was a picture of City Patrolman L.D. Harnois inspecting the debris of the destroyed apartment at 1071 South Orange Grove. The story said Parsons had moved from that address on June 1, and he and his wife Marjorie were staying at 424 Arroyo Terrace--where his mother had a summer position as caretaker--while preparing to leave for a trip to Mexico. Parsons had gone over to the South Orange Grove apartment to gather up some of his supplies.

In the Los Angeles Times article I had read previously, the chronology had jumped from the explosion to Parsons being pronounced dead an hour later at Huntington Memorial Hospital. The Independent filled in some chilling details.

"Parsons body was literally torn apart by the chemical blast.

"The explosion blew off his right forearm, tore a gaping hole in his jaw and shattered the other arm and both legs. He was still conscious after the blast."

 Two upstairs occupants, Mrs. Alta Fosbaugh and Salvatore Ganci ran down and found Parsons pinned under two heavy washtubs and one wall.”

‘The Vision of the Aethyr LOE’

A Tornado ripping across a desert.

This desert looks like a ‘movie stage’, a fill-in prop for a low budget
‘blue screen epic’.

A woman appears, nude and crucified, and howling at what seems to be Twin Suns
 (or Twin Moons)
 [Sophia- Twin aspect]

[personal - conversation]

Her hair is as flames.

Her lips are puckered up, and she is inhaling wind.

Another pyramid, formed of sand, like a sand castle- appears.

This female [Babalon?] is nestled on top of it, riding it like a surf board.

She stands on it, and salutes the sky.

She 'demonstrates' the Signs of:

- Osiris Slain
- Isis Mourning
- Typhon

[LVX]

I look upward and see a black hole, and within it, an indigo colored eye.

It grows and I realize she is causing the black hole by inhaling the wind.

She calls herself “Eclipse”...

She is now wearing a war helmet, and holding a black trident.
She has 6 toes on each foot, and is howling uncontrollably.
[very eerie...]

The sky is now a black blanket ‘covering many stars’...

LIBER 49

1. Yea, it is I, BABALON.
2. And this is my book, that is the fourth chapter of the Book of the Law, He completing the Name, for I am out of NUIT by HORUS, the incestuous sister of RA-HOOR-KHUIT.
3. It is BABALON. TIME IS. Ye fools.

<http://hermetic.com/wisdom/lib49.html>

She asks me:
"How old, ye?"

I answer: (truthfully)
"49 years old"

She says:
"Thee the Liber Jubilee" (49)

She asks:
"When thou day of birth?"

I answer: (truthfully again)
"January 19"

During the period of January 19 to February 27 I invoked the Goddess BABALON with the aid of my magical partner, as was proper to one of my grade.

<http://hermetic.com/wisdom/lib49.html>

She says:
"See It All Born Again"

[THE SYNCHRONICITIES ARE UNCANNY!]

She says:
"I know why you are here,... to die in my arms"

["Born-Again"...?]

Her lower self turns into a volcano and erupts.
My root chakra is burning hot.

She says to make an offering in her name.

[personal - conversation]
[...inaudible...]

[...]I see a huge "Hallmark Greeting Card" that reads:
"Get Well Soon" -with red roses on the front of the card.

[am I sick?]

Her face is full of serpents, which reach out like tentacles and engulf me. She points and I look and see a window pane.

Just a shattered sheet of clear glass.

It turns sideways and in the thin slice I see an [WILD!] animal.

She says "That is Teloch Vovin, who was Cthulhu, before Cthulhu was"

She says "Leave the poison, here"

[...]She says [...]her name is "VAOAN" [Truth]

[ALL 3 VERY INTERESTING QUOTES!]

I see cities crumbling...earthquakes.
I look down and my body is composed of cities.

She says:

"Liber Typhon meets Liber Loagaeth".

Babalon: "LIBER-TYPHON"

I see Leviathan rising from waters... breaking through streets.

[...]PROPHECIES GIVEN.....[...].....
and I hear the words:
“Violent Overthrow, Nature’s Culling, Oppression, and
...Archetype of Analogy of Anarchy.”

I see the image(s) of Nosferatu, briefly.
[weird?]

[personal - conversation]

My nostrils keep itching [bad!] from the Kundalini racing up the facial meridians, and it disturbs me to keep breaking the Alpha State.

[personal - conversation]

She says “Leave your seed in LOE”
‘Ellllll—Oohhhhh—Eeeeeee’

[Ends]

Not once did She utter the name- Babalon.

The personification of the ‘wicked seductress’ as a sole being named ‘Babalon’ [in LOE] is a magickal lodge, Telesmatic Image creation/Thelema production.

-Like the epitome of evil embodied as ‘Satan’

*The closest ideal of Babalon is Kelley’s vision of Madimi playing ‘seductress’...breaking of Taboo

-like the notorious ‘wife swapping’ incident.

ZAX Vision:
“Get Thee Behind Me- Satan!”

ZAX is ‘everything they say’. [who ever “they” are]
For the sake of sparing redundancy and sounding cliché, ZAX really was, for me, all about meeting the proverbial ‘man in the mirror’.

The 3 parts, from my personal perspective*:

An amusement park’s ‘House of Mirrors’; viewing myself in various octaves of introspection.

Mountains too high to reach the pinnacle, but alas... that last bit of digging down deep, to succeed.
Visiting an astral theatre, & Me,... being the featured film.

Intense.

Much of it was personal, so it would be pretty boring for the reader to drudge through it all- besides, it’s personal!

I did get to ask questions-
and they were promptly answered in ‘ZAX-Speak’.
[I went there with questions, and just ‘left’, with answers]

The inhabitants were holy, white shrouded, think “This is holy ground” sort of sacred.

A cross between Mount Sinai and your parent’s bedroom:
off limits, and sacrosanct.

I witnessed the ‘House of the Holies’, the “Veil” that the mage ‘parts’, and King Solomon’s Temple.

These was all etheric doppelgangers, heavy duty symbolism-
as a ‘Nile reflection’ of Amenti and Abydos.

Choronzon took the role as Psycho-pomp...

& Then, appearing in a
phantasmagoric kaleidoscope of faces from the gallery.
He said His greatest illusion, was... Me.
I was impressed by the archetype He conjured in Figure #333.

Liber Loagaeth, `Choronzon volunteered- [to lure me right in] was the infamous "Necronomicon".

He went into great detail about how Satan does not manufacture dinosaur bones to fool Christian Archeologists, but rather, lays foundation in the dreams of nightmarish merchants.
He took me on a small boat and played the Ferryman in a mock version of the Crossing of the River of Styx.

He pointed to Saturn and taught me [His rendition] about the concept of "Time" and said Chronos was a storm god like Set [Sutekh].

He continued to explain how the Gnostic Seth was in actuality, this divine storm bringer...

Liber Loagaeth was explained to me [earlier] by The 3 individuals who "appeared to Abraham [prior],...then 2 of The 3 destroying Sodom and Gomorrah and other cities"

Also Melchezidek 'passed by' and a small crowd said "He is the Logos, the King of Jerusalem"

This ...all of it, was heavy symbolism about Liber Loagaeth, and the Covenant [Holy Table].

My advice, to future wayfarers, is do not journey the 30 Aethyrs out of order. At least, do a few before 'travailing the notorious' ZAX.

[*In Volume #1 I spoke briefly about why each vision is unique to the individual scryer:

Like dreams, there is no universal 'look it up Lexicon']

Matthew 16:23 *But he turned, and said unto Peter, "Get thee behind me, Satan:
thou art an offence unto me: for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men".* -King James Bible

Enochian Witchcraft®

Book #1

This Book is dedicated to my wife, "Lisa Ganci ... a Natural Witch"

She was my inspiration to create a workable system of Enochian Magick for a Pagan who did not want to be caught up in Renaissance Era Judeo-Christian Religious Doctrine.

I condensed and streamlined Enochian Magick into a compact system designed for minimal study and fast results.

Thus...

"Enochian Witchcraft©" & "Enochian Eclecticism©"

was Born...

Why Enochian Witchcraft© & Enochian Eclecticism©?

To make the Enochian Materials more readily accessible to the Pagan & Magickal Communities.

This is a condensed, stream-lined course to get instant results!

Personally, I stay as close to the purity of the Dee Diaries as I can.
Enochian Witchcraft should, however, be considered Neo-Enochian to the max!

→ Enochian Witchcraft© & Enochian Eclecticism©
should, however, be considered a viable alternative for beginners [& intermediate levels], practicing Enochian Magick.

As Qabala was an 'initiate only' magickal system of ages past- it is time to strip Enochian of It's antique Renaissance Era attire and redress it for modern times.

This is a bare minimum outline which should be considered 'food for thought'...

There's a lot of info. out there in regard to John Dee, Edward Kelley,
& the Enochian Literature.

To work a 'purser form' of Enochian Magick requires an in depth study of Dee's diaries.

Just about all of the Enochian Material-as well as John Dee's Diaries, can be read online for Free, along with My other 9 Enochian Books.

<http://www.themagickalreview.org/enochian/mss/>

<http://hermetic.com/browe-archive/enochian.htm>

<http://www.lulu.com/spotlight/SaToGa>

Take this Enochian Witchcraft© & Enochian Eclecticism© System for a test drive. If it works for you, by all means pursue it.

If you get zero results- abandon it.

**If you push, it might cause you problems*

Gnostic or Egyptian ‘flavor’ can be added or subtracted.

-Many of the WatchTower Kerubic and Servient [Servitor] Entities can be gradually added as your Enochian knowledge base grows rapidly.

-The Heptarchial Mystica system has a wealth of Entities.

-The Enochian Keys [Calls] & 30 Aethyrs amplifies solo workings.

These are Lunar-Oriented Entities:

Enochian Entities [EE] hold Monday as Their Sabbath.

-Essentially a Matriarchal & Patriarchal Balance

)o(

An Enochian Pantheon

Galvah: the “I Am”. Mother Yahweh. Shekinah

The ultimate Goddess [archetype and prototype of the Gnostic Sophia]... trying to get home.

[Isis, Ma’at, Lilith, -Eve in her highest Magickal state]

Madimi: The daughter of Galvah, who has some feistiness in her, but has mom to back her up. Care-free & liberated. Uninhibited.

[Daughter of Fortitude]

Similar to Hecate

Choronzon: Personified as a death dragon. The serpent all grown up with an Aethyr all His Own [ZAX] Typhon Apophis Cthulhu Set

Babalon: The seductress, like a black widow, consumes her mate.

By dissolving materialism [the shells of Qliploth]- one can be consumed by Her in the 12th Aethyr

IAD: The opponent(?) of the Demiurge- Yahweh [Ialdaboath]

AOMORYBN: The Beast

Guardians of the WatchTowers:

Gabriel- Water HCOMA

Uriel- Earth NANTA

Raphael - Air EXARP

Michael- Fire BITOM

Nalvage- Spirit EHNB

That was a very small and basic pantheon.

Like the Tree of Life...nurture it and allow it to grow for you.

This short course is only a structure- a partial Grimoire.

The Enochian System is a Unified, Living, Breathing Organism.

Let it grow...

You will reference this later in the volume

You will reference this later in the volume

TOOLS

Enochian Witchcraft© Tools can range from a bare minimum to draping your living quarters in Enochian curriculum. Start off slow, but do start. You might see many future Enochian practitioners always collecting some type of Enochian paraphernalia, but never doing any actual Enochian work. Don't be stagnant as you accrue "stuff" that will all come when the timing is right.

The Traditional Element Representations as Athame, Pantacle, Chalice & Wand may be employed.

Align these to the 4 WatchTowers

The “Enochionomicon©”

DAILY USE OF SEALS & CALL NAMES OF KINGS

The following Material incorporates the Heptarchial Mystica system.

These Ensigs of Creation [white square seals] should eventually be converted utilizing the Enochian Alphabet.

-The Enochian Alphabet works excellent for Talismans & Amulets.

-Charging them with prayers, invocations/evocations, etc, in the Enochian language gives it all an extremely powerful boost.

→ Enochian Script is written and read from

Money – Earth - South WatchTower

SOUTH:

Black - Earth

Capricorn Taurus Virgo

Virgo

We will Use Virgo:

Mercury will bring us ideas and possible communications or connections to new, undiscovered pools of the money current.

Element: Earth

Money, gold, silver, abundance of Earth's resources

Quality: Mutable

Changing the stagnating, dormant matrix of that low financial energy current

Planet: Mercury

Ideas, communications, connecting with '$-energy conduits'

)o(

Cut out a square [4 sides - Earth] piece of blank paper.

Write your intention about finances in Enochian Script

[Diagram in this volume]

After the research, formation of Intent & Will and constructing the above- “Enochian Money-Drawing Talisman”...

(All the above steps are essentially just as important as the ritual, itself)

...We erect and align the Temple.

Perform energy circulation such as the Middle Pillar or Microcosmic Orbit [Chi Kung]

Your Circle- Formed

Enochian Call #1, 2 as Primary energy inducers-

#8 for Air of Earth- bring Ideas and New Inventions, Connections &/or Communication involving finances.

Now, recite call #19

[included in this volume]

Use the Aethyr TEX, which is the 30th [starting point]

It has 4 regions, and is similar to the 4 points of Earth.

Earth, for money- pulls down astral energy to create money thought-forms that will eventually manifest for you.

Your Temple should feel as if it is vibrating.

3 God Names: Mor Dial Hctga

Called To the South Quarter

King: [Spiral] lczhhca/ lczhhcl

Create a vortex of spinning energy- then call this King's name.

lczhhca: Right Hand Path

Six Seniors:

[Summon within Heptagram of Corresponding Color - Gold]:

Lzinopo Lhiansa – Virgo

Only 2 of the 6 Seniors

[are necessary for this working] called through your Heptagrams

[see diagrams in this volume]

Visualize and state out loud your need for Their help.

Now, summon King Bobogel- envision His Seal in a blazing Gold Hexagram [6 pointed star]

...and once more:

Visualize and state out loud your need for Their help....

Or you may Scry to speak with Him, ‘directly’

[see “How to Scry” in this volume]

Sigil of the 2. King Bobogel: 3. Son of the sons of Light – Ave

The king of Sunday and the planet Sun is Bobogel

Sunday: Sun, success, wealth, promotion
[Gold/Yellow]

The hardest part of this ritual is tripping over your tongue when reciting the Enochian Tongue.

Enochian Eclecticism®

Book #2

“How to Scry”

By -SaToGa

Copyright©1995-2011

You may read about how great it is to scry the 30 Aethyrs, but when you try, you get zero to minimal results. Everyone has various innate scrying abilities.

John Dee had minimal scrying abilities, thus the reason for Edward Kelley.

I get a lot of Emails asking me how to scry.

If you are having problems with scrying, this is for you.

First, when you scry, you must say out loud what you see, no matter how trivial or small. If you are solo, then use a voice recorder.

I can not over emphasize this.

The trail of images will at first be like still imagery- then it will suddenly pick up the pace.

Eventually, the EE will race through your ‘sight’

Forget the mirror and scrying stone if it is not working.

Sit about 1 foot away from a blank wall, with no print or design.

It must be a solid color.

If it has a crack or paint peel, fix it.

This small distraction will become a hyperbolic distraction in only a few minutes.

If you can not do this- get a large piece of white cardboard, and use that as your ‘scrying field of vision’.

I actually employ this as I can change the color to fit the energy working.

Light 2 small candles and keep them in back of you, on the floor, in range of about behind each shoulder.

Assuming you are sitting on the floor, facing the blank wall, about one foot away...

[when I was young, my teachers forced me to discover this technique every time I was bad & got banished “to the corner”!]

Relax....deep breathe...circulate energy and expand your aura until it encompasses the scrying area and wall.

You will start to see a blurry haze.

Put your hand up, right in front of the blank area.

Look between your fingers...you will start to see your aura.

Once you can- the rest will come naturally—guaranteed.

Astral projection and remote viewing are all in the same family as this. Your consciousness accesses these etheric areas- you do not actually leave your body- your consciousness just views these multi-dimensional ‘regions’.

The Enochian Entities are Real- not figments of archetypes hardwired into your brain.

[Believing EE are not real- will cause you problems]

Relax and recall to memory your ‘hand-shadow-aura’ play.

Say out loud- but in a low monotone voice- like a third neutral party, viewing what is transpiring.

Understand ‘someone is listening’...another person working with you, or the voice recorder.

Inhale and exhale the aura field of the glowing area.

Allow it to grow, and grow more...larger and larger until your aura fills the temple.

Your eyes will get ‘unfocused’...sometimes known as ‘easy eyes’.

Whatever comes to mind- your inner vision or easy eyes- say it out loud.

Follow this lead- the trail will encompass more and more.

A ridiculous thought, memory, smell, sound, taste- things not pertaining to your ritual work- may float in and out of your sensory ranges- follow them and say it out loud.

You are training yourself(s)- and it might in reality, have something to do with the ritual, as it all develops into something else later down the road.

If you practice this for 30 minutes, 3 times weekly- you will start scrying to the fullest potential of your innate ability.

Your dreams will become more lucid, as well.

Scrying the Aethyrs: TEX

[My older diary notes]

TEX - 4 Parts

Calling of the 4 Princes- of the 4 parts, Their Sigils, employed.

All 4 Princes appear on the North - Water - Watch Tower:

Thus, Transformation of Form.

Negative aspects via this Watch Tower are Deception and Illusion.

I perform a ritual given to me prior, by the EE.

I am 'scheduled' to perform this particular Aethyr Working, as told to me, by the EE.

I am told to wear my Enochian Ring, on my left (marriage band) ring finger.

I perform a rite similar to the Middle Pillar.

As I 'grow upwards', I realize one foot is standing on Earth, the other, standing on Luna.

By 'half standing on Luna', I assume, partially 'astral lodged' in Yesod.

Opening Rite continues...

Call of the Aethyrs: TEX

Immediately, under the Lamén, I feel intense heat.

I feel like I am having a heart attack- no pain, just heavy pressure and constriction dead center of my chest. I sweat profusely, and honestly, am ready to bolt from my temple to summon an ambulance.

I cycle from Beta to Alpha, repeatedly.

Suddenly, I hear a calm voice telling me, assuring me, I am fine.

[Just anxiety from intense energy.]

Vision opens of a volcano erupting,... I am wrapped in clear cellophane(?), and lava gushes upon me, burying me.
[Obviously, heart attack seems imminent!]

I'm thinking I have been duped and now I am done!
[Again, I am reassured.]

I am buried alive, under cooling lava.
I ask for help, or guidance- and another voice says, clearly-
"There will be no help for you"...
(Personal conversation ensues)

This buried alive vision lasts for what seems to be a couple of minutes.

(After wards, I check my voice recorder log, and in actuality, just a few seconds passed. The whole TEX session, minus the preliminary ritual, lasted 34:43.)

Numerology is exact- that "34:43" - 7/7 is legit and amazing.

The buried alive heaviness subsides- and I fall, supine- downwards. I am in a cavern, with darkness fading in and out.

There are quite a few inactive scenes in this exploration, where all I see is darkness and hear nothing.

I am in a desert.
White sand.

Aleister Crowley, dressed as an Arab, passes perpendicular to me, and notices me.

[I feel...maybe,...this was a replay of an Akashic recording]

I am pulled upwards, and I see an island with palm trees.
I am inside an old basement (?) and see a dim light bulb. I am pulled to it, and the glowing filament is right in my face. I am now one with that violet flaming filament, and am inside the glass bulb. A voice says I am light, but still trapped and limited within my confines.
I feel this heat.

(Personal conversation ensues)

Shifting scenes of islands, bodies of water...I am underground, then in the sky...I see stars, celestial bodies, simultaneously.

I see a female eyeball, left profile.
I experience more scene shifts.

Another eyeball seen, with long white eyelashes, all cornea- no pupil

(but it 'watches me')

I now meet the cartoon personality (little guy with mustache and black top hat) of Milton Bradley's "Monopoly" game.
(I played Monopoly only once, about 40 years ago as a child- hated it. Definitely not something that should be in my recent mental records!)

(Personal conversation ensues)

He shifts back and forth into the cartoon character of "Wimpy" from Popeye. (Who knows!)

(Personal conversation ensues)

Now, I am watching a female with long painted fingernails throw dice. I watch her play Monopoly and suddenly I am inside the small 'silver train' playing piece. I am being driven around the game board, and just drop downwards into another cavern.

I see glowing green eyes.

I walk and see bright orange light- active lava, but silent and non-threatening this time around.

I fly upwards out of what appears the introductory volcano.
I see a male lion approaching me. Then I am somewhat inside his roaring mouth. I back away and grow large. I look down at the lion and he playfully rolls on his back, exposing his belly.

An angel lifts me up and says "we have work to do"...
(Telepathically I asked prior for an Initiation of TEX)

We are flying fast. I am on a beach, no sand, just black shiny small rocks and pebbles. I look and see fallen skyscrapers, buildings destroyed all round me.

Ominous silence, and it is snowing. I hear "Ice-Age".
I believe a different angel continues on with me...

(Personal conversation ensues)

Flying with this EE, extremely fast...I see Old England and it's inhabitants dressed in 1880's attire.
(I never been to England, but I 'knew I was there'.)

Flying.....loud wind gushes.....

I see what appears as 'primitive man' and hear and 'read phonetically'... "barMUda".

(MU, as in Lemuria? Bar, as in "son of"...not sure...)

Again I hear "Ice-Age".

I see dinosaurs, then darkness and what appears as a still photo of 'the Big Bang'.

Now, in linear terms, I am moving forward in time, again.
I see once more, primitive men, like cavemen.
One of them is standing in a body of water, (a beach?) and he pulls a fish out of the water, as if hunting for food.

He rips the fish open [vertically/long ways down], and a cell phone is inside it.

He smells it and it rings.

He notices me, and hands me the phone.
I get dizzy, spinning...

An angel lifts me and flies me to a mountain composed of what looks like 'cartoon-esque' glass shards of stone...

[The English language doesn't always have the equivalent words to match up to what I seek to describe from my Enochian experiences.]

(Personal conversation ensues)

I am on level ground, looking up at Luna.
(I feel depicting this as Luna is accurate, as I was originally standing on it with one foot)

There were other scenes, omitted, as some were repetitious in nature.

There were many lulls, like scenes stalling.

The above- “TEX Vision” was posted on My Yahoo Group:

Posted: Thu Dec 9, 2010 5:05 pm

Seeing Crowley in the desert, provided me with the Egyptian location marker for placement. I understood Crowley performed Magick Rites in Egypt. If you have read My other 9 Enochian Books- you will recall many of my visions contained pyramids, deserts and portals opening.

Look at this...

Laidrom- Earth - (Taurus)

Mon Nov 22, 2010 5:13 pm

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/enochianmagic/message/4>

Subterranean, chthonic- Hades, psychopomp- images raced through my vision, while "hearing those words".

Fire, caverns, then crystalline structures. Meet with one called 'Agatha', and was taken to see the Elder..

[...].....[...].

However, He (They?) holds a grudge against humanity, saying we didn't appreciate the work the Watcher/Grigori performed in 'our benefit'.

[...].....[...].

I am taken deep down- (again, spinning).....what appears to be Hades. I am not christian, so these scenes took me off guard (quite disturbing)

He said (with many voices) "Enoch was here, speaking to the Grigori- to intercede for them"

The chains that imprison them, shackle their "Duties", not they, themselves. I see them lifeless, like wax figures. Suddenly, I am on a space craft- flying up, out of a portal.

[...].....[...].

He gave me instructions for my next initiatory rite,, before 'dropping me off @ my temple'.

Again, the EE tell me to 'write it down, and tell others'...but they also limit my mentioning of details.

"TEX"
"Laidrom"
"The Vision of RII"
"Tri-Cyclic Ritual: WINTER SOLSTICE"
"Partial Solar Eclipse/ Quadrantid Meteor Ritual- [Apocalyptic]"

All these previous notes are contained in My other books.
See the last 2 pages of this book for info regarding them.

The above 3 Ritual postings also alluded to Egypt, Hawks, Deserts, Nuclear Apocalypse and the Opening of Portals to allow entry of Enoch's 'Watchers'... buried deep down under the Desert in Prisons.

The Pyramids, the Gods, & Enochian Magick are important in Crowley's system- "Thelema"...

What I believe, is the EE are pointing to 'Upheavals in Egypt' as ancient energy currents imprisoned beneath the desert break free...signaling times of Revolution & Evolution for that whole region.

Eventually it will spill over into Israel and ignite the Arab world.
Of course, that will trigger world wide calamity and the advent of World War III is not too far away.

This is Galvah, finding her way home, drudging through the Obstacle Course of the Profane & Mundane.

Choronzon [like the Cthulhu Mythos] awakens, as Gaia's Kundalini is ripe for eruption.
It is the complete circle of Gabriel's "flayle" as Raphael, Michael and Uriel blow Their Apocalyptic Trumpets.
The portals created through Enochian Magick(s) are the 'nexus transport' for the imprisoned Watchers.

Their release are conduits of evolution.

AOMORYBN is the sum of the remaining 'hidden letters'- which resurrect from slumber... upon the most Holy Sigilum Dei Aemeth.

Babalon is the World Government- prostituting and pimping out it's Military might for OPEC.

Madimi is the Faux Media, teasingly telling us the plans, as she seductively hypnotizes those who blindly follow.

IAD speaks..."I reign over you..."

The beauty of Enochian Ritual is it always works!

No matter what you do to the Enochian Materials, the system, itself, is always self-contained.

Like a Hologram- it is 100% complete within the smallest fragment.

Harbinger & Sentinel

I have released Numerous Ritual Workings, which were all dated [& documented] on Enochian Forums.

I released 9 Enochian Books and circulated them all over the Internet, for Free.

Each book also had a Release date on them.

I mentioned over and over that the Enochian Entities [EE] had a Schedule.

The EE also told me to Record Everything They told me, and to Mass Distribute it all for Free.

I complied with all of it.

If any astute reader who possesses My Books and has been reading My Forum Postings, Here:

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/enochianmagic/>

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/enochian/>

<http://evocationmagic.com/viewforum.php?f=31>

...that same astute reader can attest to the fact that all I say is true.

*Now some people can all say that this is all coincidental.
That is fine by me.*

Perchance- it all is.

But...some of the astute readers will further notice the Titles of my 9 books, and investigate the EE Time Line Release Dates associated with Each Title....

If any astute readers have also been astute current event watchers-they might notice the parallels.

*Now some people can all say that this is all coincidental.
That is fine by me.*

Perchance- it all is...

I have included some excerpts from My Latest Book Releases.
There's a good chance you already own them if you are reading this now.

If you do not own them, here they are:

<http://www.lulu.com/spotlight/SaToGa>
<http://www.scribd.com/doc/46296748/Enochian-Entities-Practice-Theory-by-SaToGa>

The excerpts I share in This Book show I have been working with the EE for some time.

I magickally appeared on Enochian Forums right around the same time I Posted My First Message on My Own Forum, Here:

Nov 22, 2010

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/enochianmagic/message/1>

I then attempted to engage fellow Enochian practitioners and enthusiasts alike, with magickal conversation.

There are many intelligent people on these forums.

Thank you for receiving me.

On some of these forums I posted My 9 Books.

I thank them for hosting them for me.

My Books were also distributed widely across the Torrent sites, just as I asked.

I uploaded them to Lulu.com and Scribd.com all for Free.

I received a lot of Emails with much feedback.
Some were from magickians who were in magickal lodges.

But most were eclectic people who enjoyed reading and practicing Enochian Magick.

I thank you all for the Emails- Please keep them coming.

enochian.mage@yahoo.com

I included in the Preface of some of My Books, my hope and dream to be remembered long after I leave this incarnation.

I wanted to leave an 'Enochian Legacy' as someone who took his own time and altruistically donated back to the Enochian Community my '9 cents'...

Maybe even contribute to History, my own valuable contribution.

The size of my impact is up to each individual who received me, one way or the other.

As you read this- look back on what I have authored.

Maybe you can see some clues in what I wrote, and any hints I included- such as ending

"Liber Typhon- The Babalon Working Revisited" with:

*"I MET BABALON"
IN THE 11 DAYS, I MET ALL OF THEM FROM MY 'ORIGINAL CHARGE'....*

-SaToGa

"Tetelestai"

Also in this current Volume-
I have included excerpts from:

*Enochian Entities:
'The Ohorela Papers'
Volume 3
"Talisman"*

Release Date: January 20, 2011

The Talisman attracts...

That Book, was written in Enochian- & as far as I know, the only Enochian Book currently online- written in Enochian Script, correctly.

It was used as an Enochian Portal Opening to Resurrect the Watchers from "The Book of Enoch".

Here is some the History on this:

Dudael is the place of imprisonment for Azazel (one of the "fallen" angels), cohort of Semjaza. It is described in the book of First Enoch chapter 10 verse 4-7:
[Dudael means Great Desert or Fiery Caldron]

"And again the Lord said to Raphael: 'Bind Azazel hand and foot, and cast him into the darkness: and make an opening in the desert, which is in Dudael, and cast him therein. And place upon him rough and jagged rocks, and cover him with darkness, and let him abide there for ever, and cover his face that he may not see light. And on the day of the great judgment he shall be cast into the fire'".

According to 1 Enoch (a book of the Apocrypha), Azazel (here spelled 'ăzā'zyēl) was one of the chief Grigori, a group of fallen angels who married women. This same story (without any mention of Azazel) is told in Genesis 6:2-4:

That the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all which they chose. [...] There were giants in the earth in those days; and also afterward, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bore children to them, the same became mighty men which were of old, men of renown.

1 Enoch portrays Azazel as responsible for teaching people to make weapons and cosmetics, for which he was cast out of heaven. 1 Enoch 8:1-3a reads:

And Azazel taught men to make swords and knives and shields and breastplates; and made known to them the metals [of the earth] and the art of working them; and bracelets and ornaments; and the use of antimony and the beautifying of the eyelids; and all kinds of costly stones and all colouring tinctures. And there arose much godlessness, and they committed fornication, and they were led astray and became corrupt in all their ways.

The corruption brought on by Azazel and the Grigori degrades the human race, and the four archangels (Michael, Gabriel, Raphael, and Uriel) “saw much blood being shed upon the earth and all lawlessness being wrought upon the earth [...] The souls of men [made] their suit, saying, "Bring our cause before the Most High; [...] Thou seest what Azazel hath done, who hath taught all unrighteousness on earth and revealed the eternal secrets which were in heaven, which men were striving to learn."

God sees the sin brought about by Azazel and has Raphael “bind Azazel hand and foot and cast him into the darkness: and make an opening in the desert — which is in Dudael — and cast him therein. And place upon him rough and jagged rocks, and cover him with darkness, and let him abide there forever, and cover his face that he may not see light.”

Raphael's binding of Azazel on the desert rocks of Dudael in upper Egypt appears again in the Book of Tobit, which is found in Catholic and Orthodox bibles, but not in Jewish or most Protestant bibles. In that Book (the only place in Christian bibles where Raphael appears) he accompanies the young man Tobias (Tobit) on his perilous journey to marry his cousin Sarah, whose seven previous husbands had been killed on her wedding night by the demon Asmodeus

In 3 Enoch, Azazel is one of the three angels (Azza [Shemhazai] and Uzza [Ouza] are the other two) who opposed Enoch's high rank when he became the angel Metatron. Whilst they were fallen at this time they were still in Heaven, but Metatron held a dislike for them, and had them cast out. They were thenceforth known as the 'three who got the most blame' for their involvement in the fall of the angels marrying women. It should be remembered that Azazel and Shemhazai were said to be the leaders of the 200 fallen, and Uzza and Shemhazai were tutelary guardian angels of Egypt with both Shemhazai and Azazel and were responsible for teaching the secrets of heaven as well. The other angels dispersed to 'every corner of the Earth.'

Tobit 8:3: The smell drove the demon away from them, and he fled to Egypt. Raphael chased after him and caught him there. At once he bound him hand and foot.

Egypt was thought of as the most remote part of the world and the home of demons and evil spirits.

The 'Cities of Wisdom' are Astral Regions inhabited by Hierarchies of Entities, all of which have different assignments related to Earth.

Dr. John Dee incorporated it all in a schematic & divided into 4 Quadrants, called the Great Table...The 4 WatchTowers.

This is counter-part to Liber Loagaeth.

Each Quadrant is known as a Watchtower.

The Enochian Calls/Keys open the Gates to the 'Cities of Wisdom' and summon the EE.

The Gates can only be opened by those Sanctioned By the EE & Their IAD.

These Gates can not be opened by the Entities, Themselves, which is the reason Azazel and the rest of the imprisoned Watchers could not escape.

In My other 9 Books, I mentioned Gabriel and His timing-...was meant for Our generation...

Our Generation= The Opener of said Gates.

The Book of Enoch, dated to 400-200 B.C. states that IAD placed the archangel Uriel "in charge of the world and of Tartarus"

In 1 Enoch, Tartarus is understood to be the place where the fallen Watchers (Igigi or Grigori) are bound.

<http://english.aljazeera.net/news/middleeast/2011/01/201112515334871490.html>

Timeline: Egypt Unrest:

January 25: On a national holiday to commemorate the police forces, Egyptians take to the streets in large numbers, calling it a "day of rage". Thousands march in downtown Cairo. Protests break out in the Mediterranean city of Alexandria, the Nile Delta cities of Mansura and Tanta and in the southern cities of Aswan and Assiut.

January 26: A protester and a police officer are killed in central Cairo as anti-government demonstrators pelt security forces with rocks and firebombs for a second day, according to witnesses. In Suez, the scene of bloody clashes the previous day, police and protesters clash again.

January 27: Mohamed ElBaradei, the former head of the UN nuclear watchdog turned democracy advocate, arrives in Egypt to join the protests. Protesters clash with police in Cairo neighbourhoods.

Violence also erupts in the city of Suez again, while in the northern Sinai area of Sheikh Zuweid. In Ismailia, hundreds of protesters clash with police. Lawyers stage protests in the Mediterranean port city of Alexandria and the Nile Delta town of Toukh, north of Cairo.

Facebook, Twitter and Blackberry Messenger services are disrupted.

January 28: Internet and mobile phone text message users in Egypt report major disruption to services as the country prepared for a new wave of protests after Friday prayers. Eleven civilians get killed in Suez and 170 injured. No deaths were reported in Cairo. At least 1,030 people get injured countrywide.

January 29: Egyptian soldiers secure Cairo's famed antiquities museum early on Saturday, protecting thousands of priceless artifacts, including the gold mask of King Tutankhamun, from looters. The greatest threat to the Egyptian Museum, which draws millions of tourists a year, appears to come from the fire engulfing the ruling party headquarters next door on Friday night, set ablaze by anti-government protesters.

Thousands of anti-government protesters in Cairo's Tahrir Square. Turkey has also said that it is sending aircraft to evacuate its citizens.

January 30: Thousands of anti-government protesters in Cairo's Tahrir Square stand their ground, despite troops firing into the air in a bid to disperse them.

January 31: President Hosni Mubarak still refuses to step down, amid growing calls for his resignation. Protesters continue to defy the military-imposed curfew. Thousands remain gathered in Cairo's Tahrir Square and hundreds have marched through Alexandria.

Former US president Jimmy Carter calls the unrest in Egypt an "earth-shaking event". Israel urges the world to tone down Mubarak criticism amid Egypt unrest to preserve stability in the region.

February 1: Hosni Mubarak, the Egyptian president, announces in a televised address that he will not run for re-election but refused to step down from office - the central demand of millions of protesters who have demonstrated across Egypt over the past week. US

President Barack Obama in a speech at the White House praised the Egyptian military for their patriotism and for allowing peaceful demonstrations. He said that only the Egyptian people can determine their leaders. Motaz Salah Al Deen, spokesman for Egypt's opposition Al Wafd Party, says a self-described "new national coalition for change" has been formed.

Number of protesters in Cairo's Tahrir square revised to more than a million people. Thousands more took to the streets throughout Egypt, including in Alexandria and Suez.

February 2: Preparations begin for another day of demonstrations against President Hosni Mubarak's regime. The army with tanks are still deployed throughout different positions in and around the square. Google improves its speak2tweet technology for the people in Egypt. Clashes between anti-government and pro-Mubarak protesters in Alexandria. Internet services were at least partially restored in Cairo after a five-day blackout.

The Independent for June 18, 1952, cost five cents.

The front page headline reads:

BLAST KILLS CHEMIST

House Torn Apart by Explosion

There was a picture of City Patrolman L.D. Harnois inspecting the debris of the destroyed apartment at 1071 South Orange Grove. The story said Parsons had moved from that address on June 1, and he and his wife Marjorie were staying at 424 Arroyo Terrace--where his mother had a summer position as caretaker--while preparing to leave for a trip to Mexico. Parsons had gone over to the South Orange Grove apartment to gather up some of his supplies.

In the Los Angeles Times article I had read previously, the chronology had jumped from the explosion to Parsons being pronounced dead an hour later at Huntington Memorial Hospital. The Independent filled in some chilling details.

"Parsons body was literally torn apart by the chemical blast.

"The explosion blew off his right forearm, tore a gaping hole in his jaw and shattered the other arm and both legs. He was still conscious after the blast."

Two upstairs occupants, Mrs. Alta Fosbaugh and Salvatore Ganci ran down and found Parsons pinned under two heavy washtubs and one wall."

[11 Days- from Start to Finish]

'The Vision of the Aethyr LOE'

A Tornado ripping across a desert.

This desert looks like a 'movie stage', a fill-in prop for a low budget
'blue screen epic'.

be Twin Suns
(or Twin Moons)

[Sophia- Twin aspect]

[personal - conversation]

Her hair is as flames.
Her lips are puckered up, and she is inhaling wind.
Another pyramid, formed of sand, like a sand castle- appears.

This female [Babalon?] is nestled on top of it, riding it like a surf board.

She stands on it, and salutes the sky.

She 'demonstrates' the Signs of:

-Osiris Slain

-Isis Mourning

-Typhon

[LVX]

I look upward and see a black hole, and within it, an indigo colored eye.

It grows and I realize she is causing the black hole by inhaling the wind.

She calls herself “Eclipse”...

She is now wearing a war helmet, and holding a black trident.

She has 6 toes on each foot, and is howling uncontrollably.

[very eerie...]

The sky is now a black blanket ‘covering many stars’...

She asks me:

“How old, ye?”

I answer: (truthfully)

“49 years old”

She says:

“Thee the Liber Jubilee” (49)

She asks:

“When thou day of birth?”

I answer: (truthfully again)

“January 19”

She says:

“See It All Born Again”

[THE SYNCHRONICITIES ARE UNCANNY!]

She says:

“I know why you are here,... to die in my arms”

[“Born-Again”...?]

Her lower self turns into a volcano and erupts.

My root chakra is burning hot.

She says to make an offering in her name.

[personal - conversation]

[...inaudible...]

[...]I see a huge "Hallmark Greeting Card" that reads:
"Get Well Soon" -with red roses on the front of the card.

[am I sick?]

Her face is full of serpents, which reach out like tentacles and engulf me. She points and I look and see a window pane.

Just a shattered sheet of clear glass.

It turns sideways and in the thin slice I see an [WILD!] animal.

She says "That is Teloch Vovin, who was Cthulhu, before Cthulhu was"

She says "Leave the poison, here"

[...]She says [...]her name is "VAOAN" [Truth]

[ALL 3 VERY INTERESTING QUOTES!]

I see cities crumbling...earthquakes.

I look down and my body is composed of cities.

She says:

"Liber Typhon meets Liber Loagaeth".

Babalon: "LIBER-TYPHON"

I see Leviathan rising from waters... breaking through streets.

[...]PROPHECIES GIVEN.....[...].....

and I hear the words:

*"Violent Overthrow, Nature's Culling, Oppression, and
...Archetype of Analogy of Anarchy."*

I see the image(s) of Nosferatu, briefly.

[weird?]

[personal - conversation]

My nostrils keep itching [bad!] from the Kundalini racing up the facial meridians, and it disturbs me to keep breaking the Alpha State.

[personal - conversation]

She says "Leave your seed in LOE"

'EIIIIII—Oohhhhh—Eeeeeee'

[Ends]

Not once did She utter the name- Babalon.

Volume # 11

This Book is Volume #11

The Enochian Materials have been around for a few hundred years.

What I will say now, is My Opinion:

We have 2 types of people interested in these Materials.

-Those who sit on the Materials:

Procrastinating over them, mulling over them, contemplating them...

`...But never really doing anything to advance the Materials into a workable format.

It is one step forward and 2 steps back.

Due to this- much of Enochian Magick is still performed like it was over 100 years ago.

-Then, there is the other type...

My goal is to move the sleeping Enochian Egregore- Forward.

In my 11 Attempts- whether I am 100% correct, or 100% incorrect- does not matter.

I am applying New Current to it.

Apply electrical current to an inanimate object and it will move.

If I can shake the Egregore enough, It will roll over.

Morphic Resonance will instill it's magickal properties for the benefit all Enochian Magickians...

When the Egregore moves up a notch- all Enochian Mages will glean the effects of it- and move with it.

Whatever new information can be discovered-will advance everyone else.

If it is static- then I am applying that dynamic jolt.

This Document shares Insight which is very important.
It will make the Enochian Materials much easier to understand.

Thank YOU for participating!

“The Book of Enoch” is sometimes included in Gnostic Bibles.
Compilations of various tracts, depicting Gnostic thought - was the major competitor to “The Church Fathers/Bible-Makers of Judeo-Christendom”

I [and Geoffrey James] believe Dee & Kelley had access to Gnostic texts. The one I will be using is from the 3rd century.
Written in Alexandria Egypt ... which is being burned to the ground [Egypt Uprising- February 2011] ... as I type this.

Irony how History come full circle.

[See My Other Books]

Dee & Kelley also owned “Liber Juratus”, from which they and the Enochian Entities [EE] ‘borrowed’ from.

Dee/Kelley believed the EE gave them “The Book of Enoch”.
On this premise- [Dee searching for extra-biblical literature]
I believe Liber Loagaeth [& all of the EE Doctrines] runs parallel to the Gnostic Knowledge circulating in their own timeframe.

If you have read My Other Books- I showed that Galvah was Sophia.
I also showed similarities between other Enochian characters and Their Gnostic counterparts.

Let's make some Enochian and Gnostic Comparisons:

John Dee's diary - June 8, 1584:

- Jesus was not God.
- No prayer should ever be made to Jesus.
- There is no sin.
- Man's soul goes from one body to another child's ...quickening or animation [Reincarnation]
- “There are as many men and women as are now, have always been alive upon the Earth”
[Not everyone has a Soul...]
- The generation of mankind from Adam and Eve, is not a History, but allegory/analogy
- There's no Holy Ghost.

-The EE would not suffer him to pray to Jesus Christ... but would rebuke him, saying, that he robbed God of his honor

→ There are many assumptions in Enochian study.

Uriel, Gabriel, Raphael, Michael,
were not Enochian Entities.

These were archangels, introducing and sometimes ‘narrating’ and overseeing the communications to obtain the Enochian Materials.

The EE are totally SEPARATE ENTITIES

Liber Mysteriorum Quintas:
“Raphael, or one like him...”

Dee was not even sure who he was addressing quite a few times.

Demons would channel through often.

One demon, Lundrumguffa, gave Dee the wrong Lamen the first time. The archangels stood idly by, and Dee had to banish them himself, even when one was going to attack his own daughter.

Another misconception is the “Enochian Alphabet”

The erroneously labeled “Enochian Alphabet”
Was correctly called-“Adamical” in Dee’s journal.

Speaking of which...

Let’s examine some Gnostic “similarities”...

-IAD IALDabaoth

-Iad Baltoth [God of Justice] - Ialdabaoth

There is also a Gnostic “God of Justice” ...read on...

-Luciftias [Brightness] - Lucifer [Light-Bearer]

-Christeos [Let There Be] - Christ [Logos]

-Babalon [Whore] - Babylon [Beast Riding Harlot]
 (“Book of Revelation”)

-Iehusoz [Mercy] - Iehus [Jesus]

Christeos [Let There Be] Iehusoz [Mercy]
Christ [Logos] Iehus [Jesus]

“Let there be LUX”

Christeos [Let There Be] Luciftias [Brightness]

-Madrid [Iniquity] - Madrid [Spain = Was At War With England ]

So...there must also be an ‘England’ somewhere in the Enochian Language...

-Londoh [Kingdom] – London [England = Dee & Kelley]

---

As long as we are making Comparisons, let’s briefly examine what affect “Liber Juratus”...

a.k.a. = The Sworne Booke of Honorius/Liber Sacer/Sacratus/Consecratus/Grimoire of Honorius/Sloane MSS #313

...might have had:

-Dee took the Sigillum Dei Aemeth “prototype” from Liber Juratus

Compare:

-The 92 chapters of Liber Juratus & the

*92 Governors of the 30 Aethyrs

[*Enochian Entities: "Ohorela Papers" (Paper #2 –Scarlet) By SaToGa]

*"...wherefore we called on generall counsell off all the masters in the which counsell of *811* masters..."* Liber Juratus

-Gematria:

IAO (Iota, Alpha, Omega)

IAO is 10 (Iota) + 1 (Alpha) + 800 (Omega) = 811

IAO = IAD = IA/Dabaoth

Iad.baloth

BalToh = Righteousness...A Strong Gnostic Suggestion

Psalms 82:1 describes a plurality of gods (elōhim), which an older version in the Septuagint calls the "assembly of the gods"

→The Gnostic Terminology of "Aeons" bear a number of similarities to Judaeo-Christian angels, including their roles as servants and emanations of God, and their existence as beings of light.

Aside from the Vedas- the religious texts which are 'richest' in Extra-Terrestrial flavor is the Gnostic texts...

Heptarchia means 7-fold Hierarchy...

Heptarchia Mystica is the Mystery of the 7 Powers

Venus is the #7

Venus plays a large role in the Enochian Materials

King Carmara is King of the Moon

Monday- [Matriarchal] Sabbath Day

King Carmara is also King of Venus

...King Baligon is the King of Venus, though

Prince Hagonel is Prince of Venus and serves King Carmara

King Carmara is the only one that wears a 3-fold Crown as all the other Kings & Princes wear Golden Head Bands.

King Carmara and His Prince Hagonel are special in the Heptarchia Mystica as Their names do not begin with the 'redundant' letter "B" as it is the case with all the other names.

Hagonel and the other Princes shows the Heptagon Stellar, which Dee figures it should be molded from copper.

Now Dee gives Venus 'priority' over the other planets.

The 7 planets are ruled by one King/Prince.

Kelley received these names letter by letter from a cross that is made of 7 letter squares with 49 letters in each of them.

The 49 angelic names, arranged- Tabula Angelorum Bonorum 49
[7x7]

Sevens, Venus and 'the King of the Kings' Carmara of Venus.

Venus was Lucifer because Venus is Brightness...

Luciftias [Brightness] - Lucifer [Light-Bearer]

The First Table of Liber Loagaeth contains this:

Gàscampho:

A word “accidentally” revealed out loud by Kelley.

It was spoken by God to Lucifer:
“Why didst Thou so?”

The context of this Leaf reveals God condemning Lucifer, as there are also relevant parts that speak about everlasting fire, & starting over again.

Occult Students and Biblical Scholars all know that Satan is not Lucifer- it was an allegory of Nebuchadnezzar in Isaiah 14:12

So why is God calling Satan, Lucifer?

Are the Enochian Entities dropping hints, nonchalantly- to cause Kelley to “accidentally slip-up”...?

--I spoke about these “Accidental Slip-Ups with the EE” In My Other Books

We need to identify who this “God” is- then maybe we can figure out why Lucifer is in this most important First Leaf [given last by Galvah]

---

Up to this point-

Liber Loagaeth, for the most part- goes undeciphered.
We can only draw some conclusions

By reviewing Gnostic texts, we can piece together, what the EE have as an agenda with-Dee, Kelley, Politics and what Spiritual Doctrine the EE are pushing for as a One World Religion.

Recall this Doctrine was to be used as a “Flayle” [a whip], to usher in the ‘End of the World’ and ‘Begin a New Aeon’...

ON THE ORIGIN OF THE WORLD (II, 5 AND XIII, 2)

Introduced by

HANS-GEHBARD BETHGE

Translated by

HANS-GEHBARD BETHGE and ORVAL S. WINTERMUTE

The modern title On the Origin of the World is used to name a tractate which has been transmitted without a title but which discusses what this hypothetical title suggests. On the Origin of the World is a compendium of essential Gnostic ideas, a work written in the form of an apologetic essay offering to the public an explanation of the Gnostic world-view. Although the treatise does not represent any known Gnostic system, there are reminiscences of Sethian, Valentinian, and Manichaean themes; the author obviously draws upon a variety of traditions and sources. For example, some sort of connection with the Hypostasis of the Archons (II, 4) is clear, though the precise nature of this relationship is uncertain. On the Origin of the World was probably composed in Alexandria at the end of the third century C.E. or the beginning of the fourth. The place and date of composition are suggested by the juxtaposition of various sorts of materials: the varieties of Jewish thought, Manichaean motifs, Christian ideas, Greek or Hellenistic philosophical and mythological concepts, magical and astrological themes, and elements of Egyptian lore together suggest that Alexandria may have been the place where the original Greek text was composed.

The translation that follows is based on the text of Codex II. The fragmentary parallel texts from Codex XIII and from the British Library may also be consulted.

On the Origin of the World

["The Untitled Text"]

Translated by Hans-Gebhard Bethge and Bentley Layton

Seeing that everybody, gods of the world and mankind, says that nothing existed prior to chaos, I, in distinction to them, shall demonstrate that they are all mistaken, because they are not acquainted with the origin of chaos, nor with its root. Here is the demonstration. How well it suits all men, on the subject of chaos, to say that it is a kind of darkness! But in fact it comes from a shadow, which has been called by the name 'darkness'. And the shadow comes from a product that has existed since the beginning. It is, moreover, clear that it existed before chaos came into being, and that the latter is posterior to the first product. Let us therefore concern ourselves with the facts of the matter; and furthermore, with the first product, from which chaos was projected. And in this way the truth will be clearly demonstrated.

After the natural structure of the immortal beings had completely developed out of the infinite, a likeness then emanated from Pistis [Faith]; it is called Sophia [Wisdom]. It exercised volition and became a product resembling the primeval light. And immediately her will manifested itself as a likeness of heaven, having an unimaginable magnitude; it was between the immortal beings and those things that came into being after them, like [...]: she [Sophia] functioned as a veil dividing mankind from the things above. Now the eternal realm [aeon] of truth has no shadow outside it, for the limitless light is everywhere within it. But its exterior is shadow, which has been called by the name 'darkness'. From it, there appeared a force, presiding over the darkness. And the forces that came into being subsequent to them called the shadow 'the limitless chaos'. From it, every kind of divinity sprouted up [...] together with the entire place, so that also, shadow is posterior to the first product. It was <in> the abyss that it [shadow] appeared, deriving from the aforementioned Pistis.

Then shadow perceived there was something mightier than it, and felt envy; and when it had become pregnant of its own accord, suddenly it engendered jealousy. Since that day, the principle of jealousy amongst all the eternal realms and their worlds has been apparent. Now as for that jealousy, it was found to be an abortion without any spirit in it. Like a shadow, it came into existence in a vast watery substance. Then the bile that had come into being out of the shadow was thrown into a part of chaos. Since that day, a watery substance has been apparent. And what sank within it flowed away, being visible in chaos: as with a woman giving birth to a child - all her superfluities flow out; just so, matter came into being out of shadow, and was projected apart. And it did not depart from chaos; rather, matter was in chaos, being in a part of it.

And when these things had come to pass, then Pistis came and appeared over the matter of chaos, which had been expelled like an aborted fetus - since there was no spirit in it. For all of it [chaos] was limitless darkness and bottomless water. Now when Pistis saw what had resulted from her defect, she became disturbed. And the disturbance appeared, as a fearful product; it rushed to her in the chaos. She turned to it and blew into its face in the abyss, which is below all the heavens.

And when Pistis Sophia desired to cause the thing that had no spirit to be formed into a likeness and to rule over matter and over all her forces, there appeared for the first time a ruler, out of the waters, lion-like in appearance, androgynous, having great authority within him, and ignorant of whence he had come into being.

Now when Pistis Sophia saw him moving about in the depth of the waters, she said to him, "Child, pass through to here," whose equivalent is 'yalda baath'.

Since that day, there appeared the principle of verbal expression, which reached the gods and the angels and mankind. And what came into being as a result of verbal expression, the gods and the angels and mankind finished. Now as for the ruler Yaltabaoth, he is ignorant of the force of Pistis: he did not see her face, rather he saw in the water the likeness that spoke with him.

And because of that voice, he called himself 'Yaldabaoth'.

But 'Ariael' is what the perfect call him, for he was like a lion.

Now when he had come to have authority over matter, Pistis Sophia withdrew up to her light.

When the ruler saw his magnitude - and it was only himself that he saw: he saw nothing else, except for water and darkness - then he supposed that it was he alone who existed.

His [...] was completed by verbal expression: it appeared as a spirit moving to and fro upon the waters. And when that spirit appeared, the ruler set apart the watery substance. And what was dry was divided into another place. And from matter, he made for himself an abode, and he called it 'heaven'. And from matter, the ruler made a footstool, and he called it 'earth'.

Next, the ruler had a thought - consistent with his nature - and by means of verbal expression he created an androgyne. He opened his mouth and cooed to him. When his eyes had been opened, he looked at his father, and he said to him, "Eee!" Then his father called him Eee-a-o ['Yao']. Next he created the second son. He cooed to him. And he opened his eyes and said to his father, "Eh!" His father called him 'Eloai'. Next, he created the third son. He cooed to him. And he opened his eyes and said to his father, "Asss!" His father called him 'Astaphaios'. These are the three sons of their father.

Seven appeared in chaos, androgynous. They have their masculine names and their feminine names. The feminine name is Pronoia [Forethought] Sambathas, which is 'week'.

And his son is called Yao: his feminine name is Lordship.

Sabaoth: his feminine name is Deity.

Adonaios: his feminine name is Kingship.

Elaio: his feminine name is Jealousy.

Oraio: his feminine name is Wealth.

And Astaphaios: his feminine name is Sophia [Wisdom].

These are the seven forces of the seven heavens of chaos. And they were born androgynous, consistent with the immortal pattern that existed before them, according to the wish of Pistis: so that the likeness of what had existed since the beginning might reign to the end. You will find the effect of these names and the force of the male entities in the Archangelic [Book] of the Prophet Moses, and the names of the female entities in the first Book of Noraia.

Now the prime parent Yaldabaoth, since he possessed great authorities, created heavens for each of his offspring through verbal expression - created them beautiful, as dwelling places - and in each heaven he created great glories, seven times excellent. Thrones and mansions and temples, and also chariots and virgin spirits up to an invisible one and their glories, each one has these in his heaven; mighty armies of gods and lords and angels and archangels - countless myriads - so that they might serve. The account of these matters you will find in a precise manner in the first Account of Oraia. And they were completed from this heaven to as far up as the sixth heaven, namely that of Sophia. The heaven and his earth were destroyed by the troublemaker that was below them all. And the six heavens shook violently; for the forces of chaos knew who it was that had destroyed the heaven that was below them. And when Pistis knew about the breakage resulting from the disturbance, she sent forth her breath and bound him and cast him down into Tartaros. Since that day, the heaven, along with its earth, has consolidated itself through Sophia the daughter of Yaldabaoth, she who is below them all.

Now when the heavens had consolidated themselves along with their forces and all their administration, the prime parent became insolent. And he was honored by all the army of angels. And all the gods and their angels gave blessing and honor to him. And for his part, he was delighted and continually boasted, saying to them, "I have no need of anyone." He said, "It is I who am God, and there is no other one that exists apart from me." And when he said this, he sinned against all the immortal beings who give answer. And they laid it to his charge.

Then when Pistis saw the impiety of the chief ruler, she was filled with anger. She was invisible.

She said, "You are mistaken, Samael," [that is, "blind god"]. "There is an immortal man of light who has been in existence before you, and who will appear among your modelled forms; he will trample you to scorn, just as potter's clay is pounded. And you will descend to your mother, the abyss, along with those that belong to you. For at the consummation of your [pl.] works, the entire defect that has become visible out of the truth will be abolished, and it will cease to be, and will be like what has never been." Saying this, Pistis revealed her likeness of her greatness in the waters. And so doing, she withdrew up to her light.

Now when Sabaoth, the son of Yaldabaoth, heard the voice of Pistis, he sang praises to her, and he condemned the father [...] at the word of Pistis; and he praised her because she had instructed them about the immortal man and his light.

Then Pistis Sophia stretched out her finger and poured upon him some light from her light, to be a condemnation of his father.

Then when Sabaoth was illumined, he received great authority against all the forces of chaos. Since that day he has been called "Lord of the Forces".

He hated his father, the darkness, and his mother, the abyss, and loathed his sister, the thought of the prime parent, which moved to and fro upon the waters.

And because of his light, all the authorities of chaos were jealous of him. And when they had become disturbed, they made a great war in the seven heavens. Then when Pistis Sophia had seen the war, she dispatched seven archangels to Sabaoth from her light. They snatched him up to the seventh heaven. They stood before him as attendants. Furthermore, she sent him three more archangels, and established the kingdom for him over everyone, so that he might dwell above the twelve gods of chaos.

Now when Sabaoth had taken up the place of repose in return for his repentance, Pistis [Galvah] also gave him her daughter Zoe [Life] [Madimi], together with great authority, so that she might instruct him about all things that exist in the eighth heaven. And as he had authority, he made himself first of all a mansion. It is huge, magnificent, seven times as great as all those that exist in the seven heavens.

And before his mansion he created a throne, which was huge and was upon a four-faced chariot called "Cherubin". Now the Cherubin has eight shapes per each of the four corners, lion forms and calf forms and human forms and eagle forms, [Magickal Wards] so that all the forms amount to sixty-four forms - and seven archangels that stand before it; he is the eighth, and has authority. All the forms amount to seventy-two.

Furthermore, from this chariot the seventy-two gods took shape; they took shape so that they might rule over the seventy-two languages of the peoples. And by that throne he created other, serpent-like angels, called "Seraphin", which praise him at all times.

Thereafter he created a congregation of angels, thousands and myriads, numberless, which resembled the congregation in the eighth heaven; and a firstborn called

Israel - which is, "the man that sees God"; and another being, called Jesus Christ, who resembles the savior above in the eighth heaven, and who sits at his right upon a revered throne. And at his left, there sits the virgin of the holy spirit, upon a throne and glorifying him. And the seven virgins stand before her, [...] possessing thirty harps, and psalteries and trumpets, glorifying him. And all the armies of the angels glorify him, and they bless him. Now where he sits is upon a throne of light <within a> great cloud that covers him. And there was no one with him in the cloud except Sophia <the daughter of> Pistis, instructing him about all the things that exist in the eighth heaven, so that the likenesses of those things might be created, in order that his reign might endure until the consummation of the heavens of chaos and their forces.

Now Pistis Sophia set him apart from the darkness and summoned him to her right, and the prime parent she put at her left. Since that day, right has been called justice, and left called wickedness. Now because of this, they all received a realm in the congregation of justice and wickedness, [...] stand [...] upon a creature [...] all.

Thus, when the prime parent of chaos saw his son Sabaoth and the glory that he was in, and perceived that he was greatest of all the authorities of chaos, he envied him. And having become wrathful, he engendered Death out of his death: and he [viz., Death] was established over the sixth heaven, <for> Sabaoth had been snatched up from there. And thus the number of the six authorities of chaos was achieved. Then Death, being androgynous, mingled with his [own] nature and begot seven androgynous offspring. These are the names of the male ones: Jealousy, Wrath, Tears, Sighing, Suffering, Lamentation, Bitter Weeping. And these are the names of the female ones: Wrath, Pain, Lust, Sighing, Curse, Bitterness, Quarrelsomeness. They had intercourse with one another, and each one begot seven, so that they amount to forty-nine androgynous demons. Their names and their effects you will find in the Book of Solomon.

And in the presence of these, Zoe, who was with Sabaoth, created seven good androgynous forces.

These are the names of the male ones: the Unenvious, the Blessed, the Joyful, the True, the Unbegrudging, the Beloved, the Trustworthy. Also, as regards the female ones, these are their names: Peace, Gladness, Rejoicing, Blessedness, Truth, Love, Faith [Pistis]. And from these are many good and innocent spirits. Their influences and their effects you will find in the Configurations of the Fate of Heaven That Is Beneath the Twelve. And having seen the likeness of Pistis in the waters, the prime parent grieved very much, especially when he heard her voice, like the first voice that had called to him out of the waters. And when he knew that it was she who had given a name to him, he sighed. He was ashamed on account of his transgression. And when he had come to know in truth that an immortal man of light had been existing before him, he was greatly disturbed; for he had previously said to all the gods and their angels, "It is I who am god. No other one exists apart from me." For he had been afraid they might know that another had been in existence before him, and might condemn him. But he, being devoid of understanding, scoffed at the condemnation and acted recklessly. He said, "If anything has existed before me, let it appear, so that we may see its light."

And immediately, behold! Light came out of the eighth heaven above and passed through all of the heavens of the earth. When the prime parent saw that the light was beautiful as it radiated, he was amazed. And he was greatly ashamed. As that light appeared, a human likeness appeared within it, very wonderful. And no one saw it except for the prime parent and Pronoia, who was with him. Yet its light appeared to all the forces of the heavens. Because of this they were all troubled by it.

Then when Pronoia [Babalon] saw that emissary, she became enamored of him. But he hated her because she was on the darkness. But she desired to embrace him, and she was not able to. When she was unable to assuage her love, she poured out her light upon the earth. Since that day, that emissary has been called "Adam of Light," whose rendering is "the luminous man of blood," and the earth spread over him, holy Adaman, whose rendering is "the Holy Land of Adamantine." Since that day, all the authorities have honored the blood of the virgin. And the earth was purified on account of the blood of the virgin. But most of all, the water was purified through the likeness of Pistis Sophia, who had appeared to the prime parent in the waters. Justly, then, it has been said: "through the waters." The holy water, since it vivifies the all, purifies it.

Out of that first blood Eros appeared, being androgynous. His masculinity is Himireris, being fire from the light. His femininity that is with him - a soul of blood - is from the stuff of Pronoia. He is very lovely in his beauty, having a charm beyond all the creatures of chaos. Then all the gods and their angels, when they beheld Eros, became enamored of him. And appearing in all of them, he set them afire: just as from a single lamp many lamps are lit, and one and the same light is there, but the lamp is not diminished. And in this way, Eros became dispersed in all the created beings of chaos, and was not diminished. Just as from the midpoint of light and darkness Eros appeared and at the midpoint of the angels and mankind the sexual union of Eros was consummated, so out of the earth the primal pleasure blossomed. The woman followed earth. And marriage followed woman. Birth followed marriage. Dissolution followed birth.

After that Eros, the grapevine sprouted up out of that blood, which had been shed over the earth. Because of this, those who drink of it conceive the desire of sexual union. After the grapevine, a fig tree and a pomegranate tree sprouted up from the earth, together with the rest of the trees, all species, having with them their seed from the seed of the authorities and their angels.

Then Justice [GOD OF JUSTICE - Iad Baltoh]
created Paradise,

being beautiful and being outside the orbit of the moon and the orbit of the sun in the Land of Wantonness, in the East in the midst of the stones. And desire is in the midst of the beautiful, appetizing trees. And the tree of eternal life is as it appeared by God's will, to the north of Paradise, so that it might make eternal the souls of the pure, who shall come forth from the modelled forms of poverty at the consummation of the age.

Now the color of the tree of life is like the sun.

GOD OF JUSTICE - Iad Baltoh creates the Garden of Eden and the Tree of Life

And its branches are beautiful. Its leaves are like those of the cypress. Its fruit is like a bunch of grapes when it is white. Its height goes as far as heaven. And next to it [is] the tree of knowledge [gnosis], having the strength of God. Its glory is like the moon when fully radiant. And its branches are beautiful. Its leaves are like fig leaves. Its fruit is like a good appetizing date. And this tree is to the north of Paradise, so that it might arouse the souls from the torpor of the demons, in order that they might approach the tree of life and eat of its fruit, and so condemn the authorities and their angels. The effect of this tree is described in the Sacred Book, to wit: "It is you who are the tree of knowledge, which is in Paradise, from which the first man ate and which opened his mind; and he loved his female counterpart and condemned the other, alien likenesses and loathed them." Now after it, the olive tree sprouted up, which was to purify the kings and the high priests of righteousness, who were to appear in the last days, since the olive tree appeared out of the light of the first Adam for the sake of the unguent that they were to receive.

And the first soul [psyche] loved Eros, who was with her, and poured her blood upon him and upon the earth. And out of that blood the rose first sprouted up, out of the earth, out of the thorn bush, to be a source of joy for the light that was to appear in the bush.

Moreover, after this the beautiful, good-smelling flowers sprouted up from the earth, different kinds, from every single virgin of the daughters of Pronoia. And they, when they had become enamored of Eros, poured out their blood upon him and upon the earth. After these, every plant sprouted up from the earth, different kinds, containing the seed of the authorities and their angels. After these, the authorities created out of the waters all species of beast, and the reptiles and birds - different kinds - containing the seed of the authorities and their angels.

But before all these, when he had appeared on the first the first day, he remained upon the earth, something like two days, and left the lower Pronoia in heaven, and ascended towards his light. And immediately darkness covered all the universe.

Now when she wished, the Sophia who was in the lower heaven received authority from Pistis, and fashioned great luminous bodies and all the stars. And she put them in the sky to shine upon the earth and to render temporal signs and seasons and years and months and days and nights and moments and so forth. And in this way the entire region upon the sky was adorned.

Now when Adam of Light conceived the wish to enter his light - i.e., the eighth heaven - he was unable to do so because of the poverty that had mingled with his light. Then he created for himself a vast eternal realm. And within that eternal realm he created six eternal realms and their adornments, six in number, that were seven times better than the heavens of chaos and their adornments. Now all these eternal realms and their adornments exist within the infinity that is between the eighth heaven and the chaos below it, being counted with the universe that belongs to poverty. If you want to know the arrangement of these, you will find it written in the Seventh Universe of the Prophet Hieralias.

And before Adam of Light had withdrawn in the chaos, the authorities saw him and laughed at the prime parent because he had lied when he said, "It is I who am God. No one exists before me." When they came to him, they said, "Is this not the god who ruined our work?" He answered and said, "Yes. If you do not want him to be able to ruin our work, come let us create a man out of earth, according to the image of our body and according to the likeness of this being, to serve us; so that when he sees his likeness, he might become enamored of it. No longer will he ruin our work; rather, we shall make those who are born out of the light our servants for all the duration of this eternal realm." Now all of this came to pass according to the forethought of Pistis, in order that man should appear after his likeness, and should condemn them because of their modelled form. And their modelled form became an enclosure of the light.

Then the authorities received the knowledge [gnosis] necessary to create man. Sophia Zoe - she who is with Sabaoth - had anticipated them. And she laughed at their decision. For they are blind: against their own interests they ignorantly created him. And they do not realize what they are about to do. The reason she anticipated them and made her own man first, was in order that he might instruct their modelled form how to despise them, and thus to escape from them.

Now the production of the instructor came about as follows. When Sophia let fall a droplet of light, it flowed onto the water, and immediately a human being appeared, being androgynous. That droplet she molded first as a female body. Afterwards, using the body she molded it in the likeness of the mother, which had appeared. And he finished it in twelve months. An androgynous human being was produced, whom the Greeks call Hermaphrodites; and whose mother the Hebrews call Eve of Life [Zoe], namely, the female instructor of life. Her offspring is the creature that is lord. Afterwards, the authorities called it "Beast", so that it might lead astray their modelled creatures. The interpretation of "the beast" is "the instructor". For it was found to be the wisest of all beings.

Now, Eve is the first virgin, the one who without a husband bore her first offspring. It is she who served as her own midwife. For this reason she is held to have said:

It is I who am the part of my mother; and it is I who am the mother.

It is I who am the wife; it is I who am the virgin.

It is I who am pregnant; it is I who am the midwife.
 It is I who am the one that comforts pains of travail.
 It is my husband who bore me; and it is I who am his mother.
 And it is he who is my father and my lord.
 It is he who is my force; What he desires, he says with reason.
 I am in the process of becoming; yet I have borne a man as lord.
 Now these through the will <...> The souls that were going to enter the modelled forms of the authorities were manifested to Sabaoth and his Christ.
 And regarding these, the holy voice said, "Multiply and improve! Be lord over all creatures." And it is they who were taken captive, according to their destinies, by the prime parent. And thus they were shut into the prisons of the modelled forms until the consummation of the age.
 And at that time, the prime parent then rendered an opinion concerning man to those who were with him. Then each of them cast his sperm into the midst of the navel of the earth. Since that day, the seven rulers have fashioned man with his body resembling their body, but his likeness resembling the man that had appeared to them. His modelling took place by parts, one at a time.
 And their leader fashioned the brain and the nervous system. Afterwards, he appeared as prior to him. He became a soul-endowed man. And he was called Adam, that is, "father", according to the name of the one that existed before him.
 And when they had finished Adam, he abandoned him as an inanimate vessel, since he had taken form like an abortion, in that no spirit was in him.
 Regarding this thing, when the chief ruler remembered the saying of Pistis, he was afraid lest the true man enter his modelled form and become its lord.
 For this reason he left his modelled form forty days without soul, and he withdrew and abandoned it. Now on the fortieth day, Sophia Zoe sent her breath into Adam, who had no soul. He began to move upon the ground.
 And he could not stand up.
 Then, when the seven rulers came, they saw him and were greatly disturbed.
 They went up to him and seized him. And he [viz., the chief ruler] said to the breath within him, "Who are you? And whence did you come hither?" It answered and said, "I have come from the force of the man for the destruction of your work." When they heard, they glorified him, since he gave them respite from the fear and the anxiety in which they found themselves. Then they called that day "Rest", in as much as they had rested from toil. And when they saw that Adam could stand up, they were glad, and they took him and put him in Paradise. And they withdrew up to their heavens.

After the day of rest, Sophia sent her daughter Zoe, being called Eve, as an instructor, in order that she might make Adam, who had no soul, arise, so that those whom he should engender might become containers of light.

When Eve saw her male counterpart prostrate, she had pity upon him, and she said, "Adam! Become alive! Arise upon the earth!" Immediately her word became accomplished fact. For Adam, having arisen, suddenly opened his eyes. When he saw her, he said, "You shall be called 'Mother of the Living'. For it is you who have given me life."

Then the authorities were informed that their modelled form was alive and had arisen, and they were greatly troubled. They sent seven archangels to see what had happened. They came to Adam. When they saw Eve talking to him, they said to one another, "What sort of thing is this luminous woman? For she resembles that likeness which appeared to us in the light. Now come, let us lay hold of her and cast her seed into her, so that when she becomes soiled she may not be able to ascend into her light. Rather, those whom she bears will be under our charge. But let us not tell Adam, for he is not one of us. Rather let us bring a deep sleep over him. And let us instruct him in his sleep to the effect that she came from his rib, in order that his wife may obey, and he may be lord over her."

Then Eve, being a force, laughed at their decision. She put mist into their eyes and secretly left her likeness with Adam. She entered the tree of knowledge and remained there. And they pursued her, and she revealed to them that she had gone into the tree and become a tree. Then, entering a great state of fear, the blind creatures fled.

Afterwards, when they had recovered from the daze, they came to Adam; and seeing the likeness of this woman with him, they were greatly disturbed, thinking it was she that was the true Eve. And they acted rashly; they came up to her and seized her and cast their seed upon her. They did so wickedly, defiling not only in natural ways but also in foul ways, defiling first the seal of her voice - that had spoken with them, saying, "What is it that exists before you?" - intending to defile those who might say at the consummation [of the age] that they had been born of the true man through verbal expression. And they erred, not knowing that it was their own body that they had defiled: it was the likeness that the authorities and their angels defiled in every way.

First she was pregnant with Abel, by the first ruler. And it was by the seven authorities and their angels that she bore the other offspring. And all this came to pass according to the forethought of the prime parent, so that the first mother might bear within her every seed, being mixed and being fitted to the fate of the universe and its configurations, and to Justice. A prearranged plan came into effect regarding Eve, so that the modelled forms of the authorities might become enclosures of the light, whereupon it would condemn them through their modelled forms.

Now the first Adam, [Adam] of Light, is spirit-endowed and appeared on the first day. The second Adam is soul-endowed and appeared on the sixth day, which is called Aphrodite. The third Adam is a creature of the earth, that is, the man of the law, and he appeared on the eighth day [...] the tranquility of poverty, which is called "The Day of the Sun" [Sunday]. And the progeny of the earthly Adam became numerous and was completed, and produced within itself every kind of scientific information of the soul-endowed Adam.

But all were in ignorance.

Next, let me say that once the rulers had seen him and the female creature who was with him erring ignorantly like beasts, they were very glad. When they learned that the immortal man was not going to neglect them, rather that they would even have to fear the female creature that had turned into a tree, they were disturbed, and said, "Perhaps this is the true man - this being who has brought a fog upon us and has taught us that she who was soiled is like him - and so we shall be conquered!"

Then the seven of them together laid plans. They came up to Adam and Eve timidly: they said to him, "The fruit of all the trees created for you in Paradise shall be eaten; but as for the tree of knowledge, control yourselves and do not eat from it. If you eat, you will die." Having imparted great fear to them, they withdrew up to their authorities.

Then came the wisest of all creatures, who was called Beast.
[Serpent] And when he saw the likeness of their mother Eve he said to her, "What did God say to you? Was it 'Do not eat from the tree of knowledge'?" She said, "He said not only, 'Do not eat from it', but, 'Do not touch it, lest you die.'"
He said to her, "Do not be afraid. In death you shall not die. For he knows that when you eat from it, your intellect will become sober and you will come to be like gods, recognizing the difference that obtains between evil men and good ones. Indeed, it was in jealousy that he said this to you, so that you would not eat from it."
Now Eve had confidence in the words of the instructor. She gazed at the tree and saw that it was beautiful and appetizing, and liked it; she took some of its fruit and ate it; and she gave some also to her husband, and he too ate it. Then their intellect became open. For when they had eaten, the light of knowledge had shone upon them. When they clothed themselves with shame, they knew that they were naked of knowledge. When they became sober, they saw that they were naked and became enamored of one another. When they saw that the ones who had modelled them had the form of beasts, they loathed them: they were very aware.

Then when the rulers knew that they had broken their commandments, they entered Paradise and came to Adam and Eve with earthquake and great threatening, to see the effect of the aid. Then Adam and Eve trembled greatly and hid under the trees in Paradise. Then the rulers did not know where they were and said, "Adam, where are you?" He said, "I am here, for through fear of you I hid, being ashamed." And they said to him ignorantly, "Who told you about the shame with which you clothed yourself? - unless you have eaten from that tree!" He said, "The woman whom you gave me - it is she that gave to me and I ate." Then they said to the latter, "What is this that you have done?" She answered and said, "It is the instructor who urged me on, and I ate."

Then the rulers came up to the instructor. Their eyes became misty because of him, and they could not do anything to him [Serpent]. They cursed him, since they were powerless. Afterwards, they came up to the woman and cursed her and her offspring. After the woman, they cursed Adam, and the land because of him, and the crops; and all things they had created, they cursed. They have no blessing. Good cannot result from evil.

From that day, the authorities knew that truly there was something mightier than they: they recognized only that their commandments had not been kept. Great jealousy was brought into the world solely because of the immortal man. Now when the rulers saw that their Adam had entered into an alien state of knowledge, they desired to test him, and they gathered together all the domestic animals and the wild beasts of the earth and the birds of heaven and brought them to Adam to see what he would call them. When he saw them, he gave names to their creatures.

They became troubled because Adam had recovered from all the trials. They assembled and laid plans, and they said, "Behold Adam! He has come to be like one of us, so that he knows the difference between the light and the darkness. Now perhaps he will be deceived, as in the case of the Tree of Knowledge, and also will come to the Tree of Life and eat from it, and become immortal, and become lord, and despise us and disdain us and all our glory! Then he will denounce us along with our universe. Come, let us expel him from Paradise, down to the land from which he was taken, so that henceforth he might not be able to recognize anything better than we can." And so they expelled Adam from Paradise, along with his wife.

And this deed that they had done was not enough for them. Rather, they were afraid. They went in to the Tree of Life and surrounded it with great fearful things, fiery living creatures called "Cheroubin", and they put a flaming sword in their midst, fearfully twirling at all times, so that no earthly being might ever enter that place.

Thereupon, since the rulers were envious of Adam they wanted to diminish their [viz., Adam's and Eve's] lifespans. They could not [, however,] because of fate, which had been fixed since the beginning. For to each had been allotted a lifespan of 1,000 years, according to the course of the luminous bodies. But although the rulers could not do this, each of the evildoers took away ten years. And all this lifespan [which remained] amounted to 930 years: and these are in pain and weakness and evil distraction. And so life has turned out to be, from that day until the consummation of the age.

Thus when Sophia Zoe saw that the rulers of the darkness had laid a curse upon her counterparts, she was indignant. And coming out of the first heaven with full power, she chased those rulers out of their heavens, and cast them down into the sinful world, so that there they should dwell, in the form of evil spirits [demons] upon the earth.

[...], so that in their world it might pass the thousand years in Paradise - a soul-endowed living creature called "phoenix". It kills itself and brings itself to life as a witness to the judgment against them, for they did wrong to Adam and his generation, unto the consummation of the age. There are [...] three men, and also his posterities, unto the consummation of the world: the spirit-endowed of eternity, and the soul-endowed, and the earthly. Likewise, the three phoenixes <in> Paradise - the first is immortal; the second lives 1,000 years; as for the third, it is written in the Sacred Book that it is consumed. So, too, there are three baptisms - the first is the spiritual, the second is by fire, the third is by water. Just as the phoenix appears as a witness concerning the angels, so the case of the water hydri in Egypt, which has been a witness to those going down into the baptism of a true man. The two bulls in Egypt possess a mystery, the sun and the moon, being a witness to Sabaoth: namely, that over them Sophia received the universe;

from the day that she made the sun and the moon, she put a seal upon her heaven, unto eternity.

And the worm that has been born out of the phoenix is a human being as well. It is written [Ps 91:13 LXX] concerning it, "the just man will blossom like a phoenix". And the phoenix first appears in a living state, and dies, and rises again, being a sign of what has become apparent at the consummation of the age. It was only in Egypt that these great signs appeared - nowhere else - as an indication that it is like God's Paradise.

Let us return to the aforementioned rulers, so that we may offer some explanation of them. Now, when the seven rulers were cast down from their heavens onto the earth, they made for themselves angels, numerous, demonic, to serve them.

And the latter instructed mankind in many kinds of error and magic and potions and worship of idols and spilling of blood and altars and temples and sacrifices and libations to all the spirits of the earth, having their coworker fate, who came into existence by the concord between the gods of injustice and justice.

[gods of injustice and justice!]

And thus when the world had come into being, it distractedly erred at all times. For all men upon earth worshiped the spirits [demons] from the creation to the consummation

- both the angels of righteousness and the men of unrighteousness. Thus did the world come to exist in distraction, in ignorance, and in a stupor.

They all erred, until the appearance of the true man.

Let this suffice so far as the matter goes. Now we shall proceed to consideration of our world, so that we may accurately finish the description of its structure and management. Then it will become obvious how belief in the unseen realm, which has been apparent from creation down to the consummation of the age, was discovered.

I come, therefore, to the main points regarding the immortal man: I shall speak of all the beings that belong to him, explaining how they happen to be here.

When a multitude of human beings had come into existence, through the parentage of the Adam who had been fashioned, and out of matter, and when the world had already become full, the rulers were master over it - that is, they kept it restrained by ignorance. For what reason? For the following: since the immortal father knows that a deficiency of truth came into being amongst the eternal realms and their universe, when he wished to bring to naught the rulers of perdition through the creatures they had modelled, he sent your likenesses down into the world of perdition, namely, the blessed little innocent spirits. They are not alien to knowledge. For all knowledge is vested in one angel who appeared before them; he is not without power in the company of the father. And <he> gave them knowledge. Whenever they appear in the world of perdition, immediately and first of all they reveal the pattern of imperishability as a condemnation of the rulers and their forces. Thus when the blessed beings appeared in forms modelled by authorities, they were envied. And out of envy the authorities mixed their seed with them, in hopes of polluting them. They could not. Then when the blessed beings appeared in luminous form, they appeared in various ways. And each one of them, starting out in his land, revealed his [kind of] knowledge to the visible church constituted of the modelled forms of perdition. It [viz., the church] was found to contain all kinds of seed, because of the seed of the authorities that had mixed with it.

Then the Savior created [...] of them all - and the spirits of these are manifestly superior, being blessed and varying in election - and also [he created] many other beings, which have no king and are superior to everyone that was before them.

Consequently, four races exist. There are three that belong to the kings of the eighth heaven. But the fourth race is kingless and perfect, being the highest of all. For these shall enter the holy place of their father. And they will gain rest in repose and eternal, unspeakable glory and unending joy. Moreover, they are kings within the mortal domain, in that they are immortal. They will condemn the gods of chaos and their forces.

Now the Word that is superior to all beings was sent for this purpose alone: that he might proclaim the unknown. He said, "There is nothing hidden that is not apparent, and what has not been recognized will be recognized." And these were sent to make known what is hidden, and the seven authorities of chaos and their impiety. And thus they were condemned to death.

So when all the perfect appeared in the forms modelled by the rulers, and when they revealed the incomparable truth, they put to shame all the wisdom of the gods. And their fate was found to be a condemnation. And their force dried up. Their lordship was dissolved. Their forethought became emptiness, along with their glory.

Before the consummation of the age, the whole place will shake with great thundering. Then the rulers will be sad, [...] their death. The angels will mourn for their mankind, and the demons will weep over their seasons, and their mankind will wail and scream at their death. Then the age will begin, and they will be disturbed. Their kings will be intoxicated with the fiery sword, and they will wage war against one another, so that the earth is intoxicated with bloodshed. And the seas will be disturbed by those wars. Then the sun will become dark, and the moon will cause its light to cease. The stars of the sky will cancel their circuits. And a great clap of thunder will come out of a great force that is above all the forces of chaos, where the firmament of the woman is situated. Having created the first product, she will put away the wise fire of intelligence and clothe herself with witless wrath. Then she will pursue the gods of chaos, whom she created along with the prime parent. She will cast them down into the abyss. They will be obliterated because of their wickedness. For they will come to be like volcanoes and consume one another until they perish at the hand of the prime parent. When he has destroyed them, he will turn against himself and destroy himself until he ceases to exist.

And their heavens will fall one upon the next and their forces will be consumed by fire. Their eternal realms, too, will be overturned. And his heaven will fall and break in two. His [...] will fall down upon the [...] support them; they will fall into the abyss, and the abyss will be overturned. The light will [...] the darkness and obliterate it: it will be like something that has never been. And the product to which the darkness had been posterior will dissolve. And the deficiency will be plucked out by the root [and thrown] down into the darkness. And the light will withdraw up to its root. And the glory of the unbegotten will appear. And it will fill all the eternal realm.

When the prophecy and the account of those that are king becomes known and is fulfilled by those who are called perfect, those who - in contrast - have not become perfect in the unbegotten father will receive their glory in their realms and in the kingdoms of the immortals: but they will never enter the kingless realm. For everyone must go to the place from which he has come. Indeed, by his acts and his knowledge, each person will make his [own] nature known.

Demiurge:

The Ophites & Sethians taught the creation of Earth is by 7 Archons..& their leader is "Yaldabaoth"
[also known as "Yaltabaoth" or "Ialdabaoth"]

Apocryphon of John [120-180 AD] - the Demiurge arrogantly declares that he has made the world by himself:

Now the archon (ruler) who is weak has three names.
The first name is Yaltabaoth, the second is Saklas ("fool"), and the third is Samael. And he is impious in his arrogance which is in him.

For he said, "I am God and there is no other God beside me," for he is ignorant of his strength, the place from which he had come.

He is Demiurge and maker of man, but as a ray of light from above enters the body of man and gives him a soul, Yaldabaoth is filled with envy; he tries to limit man's knowledge by forbidding him the fruit of knowledge in paradise.

The Demiurge, fearing lest Jesus, whom he had intended as his Messiah, should spread the knowledge of the Supreme God, had him crucified by the Romans.

At the consummation of all things all light will return to the Pleroma.
But Yaldabaoth, the Demiurge, with the material world, will be cast into the lower depths.

In Pistis Sophia Yaldabaoth has already sunk from his high estate and resides in Chaos, where, with his forty-nine demons, he tortures wicked souls in boiling rivers of pitch, and with other punishments.
He is an archon with the face of a lion, half flame and half darkness.
Yaldabaoth is frequently called "the Lion-faced", leontoeides, with the body of a serpent. We are told also that the Demiurge is of a fiery nature, the words of Moses being applied to him, "the Lord our God is a burning and consuming fire," a text used also by Simon.

Under the name of Nebro (rebel), Yaldabaoth is called an angel in the apocryphal Gospel of Judas. He is first mentioned in "The Cosmos, Chaos, and the Underworld" as one of the 12 angels to come 'into being to rule over chaos and the underworld'.

He comes from heaven, his "face flashed with fire and whose appearance was defiled with blood".

Nebro creates six angels in addition to the angel Saklas to be his assistants. These six in turn create another twelve angels "with each one receiving a portion in the heavens."

According to Marcion, the title God was given to the Demiurge, who was to be sharply distinguished from the higher Good God.

The former was díkaíos, severely just, the latter agathós, or loving-kind; the former was the "god of this world" (2 Corinthians 4:4), the God of the Old Testament, the latter the true God of the New Testament. Christ, though in reality the Son of the Good God, pretended to be the Messiah of the Demiurge, the better to spread the truth concerning His heavenly Father.

The true believer in Christ entered into God's kingdom, the unbeliever remained forever the slave of the Demiurge.

Aeon:

In many Gnostic systems, the Aeon are the various emanations of the superior God & often in male-female pairings called syzygies.

Some identify their number as being thirty. The aeons as a totality constitute the pleroma, the "region of light". The lowest regions of the pleroma are closest to the darkness; that is, the physical world- such as TEX

Archon:

In late antiquity some variants of Gnosticism used the term Archon to refer to several servants of the Demiurge. In this context they may be seen as having the roles of the angels and demons of the Old Testament.

According to Origen's Contra Celsum, a sect called the Ophites posited the existence of seven archons, beginning with Iadabaoth or Ialdabaoth, who created the six that follow: Iao, Sabaoth, Adonaios, Elaios, Astaphanos and Horaíos.

Galvah:

Madimi:

Genesis 2 (King James Version)

17 But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die.

The Lord God (Yahweh / IHVH) says... that the Day Adam eats from the tree of knowledge,.. is the Day that Adam would die.

Genesis 3 (King James Version)

1 Now the serpent was more subtil than any beast of the field which the LORD God had made. And he said unto the woman, Yea, hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden?

3 But of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die.

4 And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die:

The serpent [Gnostic “Beast” & “Instructor”] informs Adam & Eve that they would NOT die the Day they eat of the tree.

5 For God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil.

The serpent also promises them that not only will they NOT die that Day- but their eyes will be opened, & become like god.

7 And the eyes of them both were opened

The Serpent was Truthful here

22 And the LORD God said, Behold, the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil.

& the Serpent was Truthful here.

Genesis 5 (King James Version)

5 And all the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years: and he died.

Obviously, Adam did NOT die the Day he ate from the tree.

& the Serpent was Truthful here.

So, the very First Liar in the bible was Lord God (Yahweh / IHVH)

John 8 (King James Version)
44 When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it.

Jesus keeps the Lie, too.

Isaiah 45:6,7 (King James Version)
6 That they may know from the rising of the sun, and from the west, that there is none beside me. I am the LORD, and there is none else.
7 I form the light, and create darkness: I make peace, and create evil: I the LORD do all these things.

But...doesn't everyone, including Jesus himself, say Satan is the entity who causes evil?
...and is the original liar?

Yahweh says there is NO ONE ELSE though, Just "Him"

The Serpent (Satan/HVHI) actually told the Truth-wanting Adam & Eve to lose their original bondage of ignorance, and have their "eyes opened" so they can be like god.

Yahweh admits that "Now they have become as one of Us"

Satan means 'Adversary'...But who's adversary?

He tried to help Adam & Eve to Evolve into Godhood.

Satan was not Adam & Eve's 'adversary'.

Satan did destroy Yahweh's [the Demiurge] plan to keep Adam & Eve in bondage though.

Maybe, Satan is only Yahweh's 'Adversary'?

Obviously, Satan was the original 'Truth Teller'.

We know now, that Jesus was in on the original Lie conspiracy, as well.

Who else?

Revelation 12 (King James Version)

7 And there was war in heaven: Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels,

8 And prevailed not; neither was their place found any more in heaven.

9 And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him.

Satan, who was a serpent and got promoted to becoming a dragon- is cast out, along with his Angels

(Not Demons, but 'Angels')

It says Satan was 'the Deceiver'.

But, we now know, Yahweh & Jesus were the Deceivers.

Now, a whole puppet regime of Liars are in place, in heaven.

So, who has 'Demons'?

The Truth Tellers who tried to elevate Adam & Eve into god status?

Or the puppet master regime who Lies and tries to enslave humanity with guilt?

Isaiah 45:6,7 (King James Version)

6 That they may know from the rising of the sun, and from the west, that there is none beside me. I am the LORD, and there is none else.

7 I form the light, and create darkness: I make peace, and create evil: I the LORD do all these things.

If Yahweh makes "Darkness" & Lucifer means "Light Bearer"... were we being Lied to, all along?

2 Corinthians 11:3 (King James Version)

3 But I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtilty, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ.

Wait...'Beguiled'?
Who was the original 'Liar'?

Obviously, we have a huge conspiracy being perpetrated upon us, & for a very long time.

The Liars are being portrayed as the Truth-Tellers...&
vice-versa.

If demons Lie...who's team are they on?

How many events in the bible involve "angels" slaughtering thousands?

Who sent these 'destroying angels'?

When demons are cast out of 'possessed individuals', in whose name are they cast out in?

Jesus' name...

Wait, is not Jesus in on the Original Lie?

Perchance these demons are, in fact, really 'Angels'...who follow along with Deceiving everyone?

They get expelled in the name of Jesus, who we know is also in on the whole Scam.

→ Let's review briefly...

what's been discussed up this point.

---

- Gabriel the ArchAngel is the harbinger of New Material that will alter Religio-Political Events.
- There were at least 7 Entities [all “Big Shots] who spoke on the Liber Loagaeth
- To bring some sort of temporary closure to Loagaeth, we can assume, at least, partially- that it is picking up the slack of Dee & Kelley finding other Gnostic texts- such as “The Book of Enoch”. Some Gnostic Bibles include many of the pseudo-Enoch writings. Some even contain the Kabbalah [I own a couple of them, myself]. Since then, many Gnostics Texts have found their way into modern circulation. This maybe the reason Liber Loagaeth goes undeciphered and unused. The discovery of the Gnostic Texts have ‘superseded’ Them & is no longer a requirement for the Enochian Entities.

April 21st, 1584- Gabriel says:

"Man in his Creation, being made Innocent, was also authorized and made partaker of the Power and Spirit of God... until that Choronzon (for so is the true name of that mighty Devil) envying his felicity, and perceiving that the substance of his lesser part was frail and unperfect in respect of his pure Esse, began to assail him, and so prevailed: that offending so became accursed in the sight of God; and so lost the Garden of felicity, the judgement of his understanding: but not utterly the favour of God, and was driven forth (as your Scriptures record) unto the Earth which was covered with brambles"

The Enochian Material leans towards the Old and New Testament, when convenient, to keep Dee interested. The EE used many plays in the same way to keep Dee enticed. The Enochian Materials also contain a wealth of Gnostic Doctrines. Many of the Names and character descriptions are almost identical.

We have Ialdabaoth, the Demiurge who is the Biblical Yahweh/IHVH.

Sabaoth - Jesus.

Sabaoth: Hebrew term used in the New Testament (Rom. 9.29; James 5.4) & in the title of God, translated in the Bible as "Lord of Hosts" (Isa. 1.9)

Various personalities of Galvah, Madimi [Aspects of Sophia=Wisdom]

Various aspects of the Choronzon, Death Dragon-Teloch Vovi[m]n- the Beast- the Instructor...and how to meet Him in ZAX.

We have Babalon and Babylon who is, most likely- Pronoia.

We have a God of Justice [Iad Baltoh] who creates the Garden of Eden. We also have a God of Injustice, too.

These Archons & Aeons are Angels, and Demons.
But most are just called, generic Gods.

Psalms 82:1 describes a plurality of gods (elōhim), which an older version in the Septuagint calls the "assembly of the gods"

If we can correctly assume that the Enochian Entities represent Gnostic Forces rather than Old Testament/New Testament Currents- we can grok a lot of information here.

First, the Bible makes it clear nothing new maybe added to it's 66 Chapters. So another "Angelic Revelation" is something we do not need- plus, it would be considered "Satanic" by adding.

Gabriel already gave Mohamed the Koran, and it started wars up till today.

We just do need some senile Jehovah threatening us with more out dated laws.

But- as the cliché goes:
“The Proof is in the Pudding!”

Enochian Practitioners can attest to the fact that these Enochian Entities are Not Preachy.

The EE bring with Them, strong Gnostic Doctrine.
Gnostic- Gnosis, is KNOWLEDGE.

Biblical threats are NOT knowledge- they are consequences.

Much of the Gnostic/EE current is Daoism.

If we try to tie up some loose ends...

The EE were always on some type of Time Restraint ...a schedule. They had an Agenda, and They used tactics that can be described as sometimes: misleading, vague and impatient.

The EE IAD, resembles Ialdabaoth.
The Heptarchia Mystica – the 7 Rulers, closely resemble Ialdabaoth’s ‘co-rulers’. [Groups of 7]

The 30 Aires/Aethyrs resemble the Gnostic schematic of the Universes and It’s inhabitants.

The WatchTowers are the Hierarchies.

And, all this is tied to Liber Loagaeth as discussed in My Prior Books.

Back to:

Luciftias [Brightness] - Lucifer [Light-Bearer]

The First Table of Liber Loagaeth contains this:

Gàscampho was a word “accidentally” revealed out loud by Kelley.

It was spoken by God to Lucifer:

“Why didst Thou so?”

The context of this Leaf reveals God condemning Lucifer, as there are also relevant parts that speak about everlasting fire, & starting over, again.

Occult Students and Biblical Scholars all know that Satan is not Lucifer- it was an allegory of Nebuchadnezzar in Isaiah 14:12

So why is God calling Satan, Lucifer?

We need to identify who this “God” is- then maybe we can figure out why Lucifer is in this most important First Leaf

This First Leaf was given last...

[which is really first because Enochian is read like Hebrew]

...it was the ushering in of Christ and the New Kingdom.

Now, let's get down to basics, and cut to the chase.

The Enochian Entities are pacifying Dee and Kelley.

Dee gave the EE a hard time in completely Liber Loagaeth- basically Dee was hoping either Galvah or some other EE would help him with the completion of the Book.

Kelley accidentally slips up and says “Lucifer” out loud.
Dee winds up finishing the Book, later on- and the EE send him and Kelley off to another place- never speaking about it again.

Everybody was disappointed in everybody at this junction.

The Enochian Entities wanted Gnosticism out of the box, and into the World. The Church father’s religion is not a spiritual system, but is rather a ball and chain...spiritual imprisonment- which Galvah/Sophia was all too familiar with.

Compare:

“The Daughter of Fortitude” to “The Thunder, Perfect Mind”

Daughter of Fortitude

I am the daughter of fortitude, & ravished every hour, from my youth, for behold, I am understanding, & science dwelleth in me : & the heavens oppress me,
They covet and desire me with infinite appetite few or none that are earthly have embraced me for I am shadowed with the circle of the sun : and covered with the morning clouds: My feet are swifter than the winds, & my hands are sweeter than the morning dew. My garments are from the beginning: & my dwelling place is in my self. The lion knoweth not where I walk : neither do the beasts of the field understand me. I am deflowered & yet a virgin. I sanctify & am not sanctified happy is he that embraceth me. for in the night season
I am sweet, in the day full of pleasure my company is a harmony of many cymbals
And my lips sweeter than health itself. I am a harlot for such as ravish me : and a virgin with such as know me not : for lo I am loved of many : & I am a lover to many: and as many as come unto me as they should do, have their entertainment. Purge your streets o you sons of men, & wash your houses clean
Make your selves holy, & put on righteousness
Cast out your old strumpets, & burn their clothes Abstain from the company of other women that are defiled, that are sluttish, & not so handsome, & beautiful as I. And then will I come & dwell amongst you. And behold I will bring forth Children unto you: & they shall be the sons of comfort
I will open my garments, & stand naked before you that your love may be more enflamed toward me.
As yet, I walk in the clouds, As yet, I am carried with the winds : And can not descend unto you for the multitude of your abominations, & the filthy loathsomeness of your dwelling places. Behold these fowre, who is he, that shall say, they have sinned : or unto whom shall they make account? Not unto you, you sons of men, nor unto your children : for unto the lord belongeth the Judgment of his servants
Now therefore, let the earth give forth her fruits unto you : And let the mountains forsake their barrenness where your footsteps shall remain. happy is he that saluteth you : & cursed is he that holdeth up his hands against you. & power shall be given unto you from hence forth to resist your enemies : & the lord shall always here you in the times of your troubles. And I am sent unto you to play the harlot with you : And am to enrich you with the spoils of other men : prepare for me, for I come shortly. Provide your Chambers for me that they may be sweet & cleanly : for I will make a dwelling place amongst you : and I will be common with the father & the son, yea and with all them that truly favoereth you for my youth, is in her flower and my strength is not to be extinguished with man. Strong am I above & below. Therefore, provide for me. for behold I now salute you. And let peace be amongst you : for I am the Daughter of Comfort. Disclose not my secrets unto women : nether let them understand how sweet I am. for all things belongeth not unto every one I come unto you again.

The Thunder, Perfect Mind

I was sent forth from the power, and I have come to those who reflect upon me, and I have been found among those who seek after me.
Look upon me, you who reflect upon me,
and you hearers, hear me.
You who are waiting for me, take me to yourselves.
And do not banish me from your sight.
And do not make your voice hate me, nor your hearing.
Do not be ignorant of me anywhere or any time. Be on your guard!
Do not be ignorant of me.
For I am the first and the last.
I am the honored one and the scorned one.
I am the whore and the holy one.
I am the wife and the virgin.
I am <the mother> and the daughter.
I am the members of my mother.
I am the barren one and many are her sons.
I am she whose wedding is great,
and I have not taken a husband.
I am the midwife and she who does not bear.
I am the solace of my labor pains.
I am the bride and the bridegroom, and it is my husband who begot me.
I am the mother of my father and the sister of my husband and he is my offspring.
I am the slave of him who prepared me.
I am the ruler of my offspring.
But he is the one who begot me before the time on a birthday.
And he is my offspring in [due] time,
and my power is from him.
I am the staff of his power in his youth, and he is the rod of my old age.
And whatever he wills happens to me.
I am the silence that is incomprehensible and the idea whose remembrance is frequent.
I am the voice whose sound is manifold and the word whose appearance is multiple.
I am the utterance of my name.
Why, you who hate me, do you love me,
and hate those who love me?
You who deny me, confess me, and you who confess me, deny me.

 You who tell the truth about me, lie about me, and you who have lied about me, tell the truth about me.
 You who know me, be ignorant of me, and those who have not known me, let them know me.
 For I am knowledge and ignorance.
 I am shame and boldness.
 I am shameless; I am ashamed.
 I am strength and I am fear.
 I am war and peace.
 Give heed to me.
 I am the one who is disgraced and the great one.
 Give heed to my poverty and my wealth.
 Do not be arrogant to me when I am cast out upon the earth, and you will find me in those that are to come.
 And do not look upon me on the dung-heap nor go and leave me cast out, and you will find me in the kingdoms.
 And do not look upon me when I am cast out among those who are disgraced and in the least places, nor laugh at me.
 And do not cast me out among those who are slain in violence.
 But I, I am compassionate and I am cruel.
 Be on your guard!
 Do not hate my obedience and do not love my self-control.
 In my weakness, do not forsake me,
 and do not be afraid of my power.
 For why do you despise my fear and curse my pride?
 But I am she who exists in all fears and strength in trembling.
 I am she who is weak,
 and I am well in a pleasant place.
 I am senseless and I am wise.
 Why have you hated me in your counsels?
 For I shall be silent among those who are silent, and I shall appear and speak,
 Why then have you hated me, you Greeks?
 Because I am a barbarian among the barbarians?
 For I am the wisdom of the Greeks and the knowledge of the barbarians.
 I am the judgement of the Greeks and of the barbarians.
 I am the one whose image is great in Egypt and the one who has no image among the barbarians.
 I am the one who has been hated everywhere and who has been loved everywhere.
 I am the one whom they call Life,
 and you have called Death.
 I am the one whom they call Law,
 and you have called Lawlessness.
 I am the one whom you have pursued, and I am the one whom you have seized.
 I am the one whom you have scattered,
 and you have gathered me together.
 I am the one before whom you have been ashamed, and you have been shameless to me.

 I am she who does not keep festival, and I am she whose festivals are many.
I, I am godless,
 and I am the one whose God is great.
 I am the one whom you have reflected upon,
 and you have scorned me.
 I am unlearned,
 and they learn from me.
 I am the one that you have despised,
 and you reflect upon me.
 I am the one whom you have hidden from,
 and you appear to me.
 But whenever you hide yourselves,
 I myself will appear.
 For whenever you appear,
 I myself will hide from you.
 Those who have [...] to it [...] senselessly [...].
 Take me [...] understanding] from grief.
 and take me to yourselves from understanding and grief.
 And take me to yourselves from places that are ugly and in ruin, and rob from those which are good even though in ugliness.
 Out of shame, take me to yourselves shamelessly;
 and out of shamelessness and shame,
 upbraid my members in yourselves.
 And come forward to me, you who know me and you who know my members, and establish the great ones among the small first creatures.
 Come forward to childhood, and do not despise it because it is small and it is little.
 And do not turn away greatnesses in some parts from the smallnesses, for the smallnesses are known from the greatnesses.
 Why do you curse me and honor me?
 You have wounded and you have had mercy.
 Do not separate me from the first ones whom you have known.
 And do not cast anyone out nor turn anyone away [...] turn you away and [...] know] him not.
 What is mine [...].
 I know the first ones and those after them know me.
 But I am the mind of [...] and the rest of [...].
 I am the knowledge of my inquiry, and the finding of those who seek after me,
 and the command of those who ask of me, and the power of the powers in my knowledge of the angels, who have been sent at my word, and of gods in their seasons by my counsel, and of spirits of every man who exists with me,
 and of women who dwell within me.
 I am the one who is honored, and who is praised,
 and who is despised scornfully.
 I am peace, and war has come because of me.
 And I am an alien and a citizen.
 I am the substance and the one who has no substance.
 Those who are without association with me are ignorant of me, and those who are in my substance are the ones who know me.
 Those who are close to me have been ignorant of me, and those who are far away from me are the ones who have known me.

 On the day when I am close to you, you are far away from me, and on the day when I am far away from you, I am close to you.
     [I am ...] within.
     [I am ...] of the natures.
 I am [...] of the creation of the spirits.
     [...] request of the souls.
 I am control and the uncontrollable.
 I am the union and the dissolution.
 I am the abiding and I am the dissolution.
     I am the one below,
     and they come up to me.
 I am the judgment and the acquittal.
     I, I am sinless,
     and the root of sin derives from me.
 I am lust in [outward] appearance, and interior self-control exists within me.
 I am the hearing which is attainable to everyone and the speech which cannot be grasped.
     I am a mute who does not speak,
     and great is my multitude of words.
 Hear me in gentleness, and learn of me in roughness.
     I am she who cries out, and I am cast forth upon the face of the earth.
     I prepare the bread and my mind within.
     I am the knowledge of my name.
     I am the one who cries out,
     and I listen.
 I appear and [...] walk in [...] seal of my [...].
     I am [...] the defense [...].
     I am the one who is called Truth and iniquity [...].
 You honor me [...] and you whisper against me.
 You who are vanquished, judge them [who vanquish you] before they give judgment against you, because the judge and partiality exist in you.
 If you are condemned by this one, who will acquit you?
 Or, if you are acquitted by him, who will be able to detain you?
     For what is inside of you is what is outside of you, and the one who fashions you on the outside is the one who shaped the inside of you.
 And what you see outside of you, you see inside of you;
     it is visible and it is your garment.
     Hear me, you hearers and learn of my words, you who know me.
 I am the hearing that is attainable to everything;
     I am the speech that cannot be grasped.
     I am the name of the sound and the sound of the name.
     I am the sign of the letter and the designation of the division.
     [...] the great power.
 And [...] will not move the name.
     [...] to the one who created me.
     And I will speak his name.
     Look then at his words and all the writings which have been completed.

Give heed then, you hearers and you also, the angels and those who have been sent,
and you spirits who have arisen from the dead.
For I am the one who alone exists, and I have no one who will judge me.
For many are the pleasant forms which exist in numerous sins, and incontinencies,
and disgraceful passions,
and fleeting pleasures,
which [men] embrace until they become sober and go up to their resting place.
And they will find me there,
and they will live,
and they will not die again.

Valentinus assumed, as the beginning of all things, the Primal Being or Bythos, who after ages of silence and contemplation, gave rise to other beings by a process of emanation. The first series of beings, the Aeons, were thirty in number, representing fifteen syzygies or pairs sexually complementary.

One common form is outlined below:

To understand the generation of the thirty Aeons from the Ogdoad, we have only to take the first eight numbers and add them up, leaving out six—for it is the Episemon and not a letter of the usual Greek alphabet:—

$$1 + 2 + 3 + 4 + 5 + 7 + 8 = 30$$

Each of these 30/91 revolving and rotating machines are unique, with Their Own Laws, Governments and Rulers...
91 Zones- 92 Governors- 30 Aires/Aethyrs

“Enochian Entities - Book B” – By SaToGa
Volume #2

In the “ZAX Vision”, the EE explained it as:
 *This is the Analogy of Correlation*
 (This Volume: “ZAX Vision: Get Thee Behind Me- Satan!”)
 “Think of the 18 Calls as The Keys that Open the Tumblers
 of the Loagaeth cities.
 The WatchTowers contain It’s occupants, &
 the Governors of the 30 Aethyrs” [the 19th Key]
 The Holy Table- is as the -Loagaeth & 30 Aethyrs.
 The 7 Ensigns- is as the -Heptarchial Mystica
 Sigillum Dei Aemeth- is as the -WatchTowers
 Microcosm- is as the –Macrocosm
 The EE Infrastructure: “Knitting Together”
 30 Aethyrs are “of” the Cities of Loagaeth
 Previously, I wrote:
 “Dee’s diaries are vague in establishing a direct link between the Enochian Keys/Calls and the Watchtower tablets.”
 The WatchTowers contain the ‘Census’ [inhabitants] of the 30 Aethyrs, 91 Parts and Loagaeth.
 Think of the WatchTower as a telephone directory.
 Find the occupant and dial it in!
 The EE were very interested in the World’s Kingdoms.
 We see this as an interest because the EE Hierarchy is composed of a “Theocracy”- like the 12 Tribes of Israel.
 EE has Kings, Seniors, Princes, Ministers and of course,
 God(s)...and a God of Justice
 (Scales of Balance)
 The purpose of Loagaeth:
 Circulating it’s Energy Matrix/Theocratic Kingdom .. then- “The End of the World”.
 Again...
 “But in the same instant when Adam was expelled, the Lord gave unto the world Her time, and placed over Her Angelic keepers, Watchers & Princes”
 “As an instrument of the thrashing...This Doctrine is a Flayle”
 “Therefore you may do anything” –Mapsama

I am not one to critique others, nor their path.

I am under the banner of 'live and let live'.

I started my Enochian path as most, as you can see from the group's Home/Introduction page.

However, as I am learning this material via the EE, There's a difference in manner on all magickal fronts.

Playing the devil advocate here, all I can say is from Dee to ascertain the following...

The EE have stated emphatically, that magick, aside from ceremonial magick.

I am aware Dee was in possession of grimoires, and the EE have that material.

I am also under the assumption that "if it is not broken, don't fix it."

To the casual practitioner, if you are getting results, keep it.

To the hard-core audience -if you are getting mediocre results, then what I posted.

I have seen in some reads, comments about B = 7.

Subject: ***Uneasiness of it all...

I realized I am @ a point with the Enochian and Heptarchic more than 'routine'. I have always taken a 'sabbatical' for resting the psyche and nervous systems.

Letting all I discovered settle in, and moving on to the next.

Now, I can't. Rather, I won't.

Magick is a path, but Enochian has become, my life. The connection with the knowledge I have received, is astounding. and more than I originally hoped for. I have practiced magick and always felt teased, as coming away with mixed reservations all my time to.

I also think (feel) that Enochian is a lonely path, as much as on life's mundane road, likely, never heard of Enochian.

Mages who do work with the EE, are usually not willing to go outright, and seldom do. [I am talking about the 'meat and potatoes' of their quest- not just the basics. Sometimes I wonder- if they just do not have anything new. Perchance, like myself, they too, were warned against giving the EE have not sanctioned...?"]

The introverted lingering after effects- even more so, with the residents of said Aethyrs, WatchTowers.

The pulling away and preparation of EE Ritual is an all-consuming process.

As I posted on another thread, these EE are definitely seen as inhabitants- nothing internal, hardwired here.

External, but encompassing the elements within me/us.

I have witnessed, many times, an uneasiness about Their realm. They are the fabric of everything- extraterrestrial and interdimensional.

They know it all...Watchers...

Their agenda, is Evolution, and that is the Apocalyptic scenario.

Them. Your world ends, and begins a new, once the threshc breached by the EE.

EE have shown me scenes of devastation- allegory and real future.

EE are scientists and historians...once telling me mankir Madimi makes it clear- EE's creation is of Another Kind.

They are an Evolutionary Scourge, that whips, tames and sametime.

Opening Rite continues...

Call of the Aethyrs: TEX

Immediately, under the Lamen, I feel intense heat.
I feel like I am having a heart attack- no pain, just heart to bolt from my temple to summon an ambulance.

I cycle from Beta to Alpha, repeatedly.

Suddenly, I hear a calm voice telling me, assuring me, I from intense energy.]

Vision opens of a volcano erupting,... I am wrapped in cold lava gushes upon me, burying me.

[Obviously, heart attack seems imminent!]

I'm thinking I have been duped and now I am done!

[Again, I am reassured.]

I am buried alive, under cooling lava.

I ask for help, or guidance- and another voice says, clear

"There will be no help for you"...

(Personal conversation ensues)

This buried alive vision lasts for what seems to be a couple (After wards, I check my voice recorder log, and in actual seconds passed. The whole TEX session, minus the preliminary

Numerology is exact- that "34:43" - 7/7 is legit and amazing

The buried alive heaviness subsides- and I fall, supine-

[There are quite a few inactive scenes in this explorative darkness and hear nothing.]

I am in a desert.
White sand.
Aleister Crowley, dressed as an Arab, passes perpendicular me.

[I feel...maybe,...this was a replay of an Akashic recording]

I am pulled upwards, and I see an island with palm trees.

I am inside an old basement (?) and see a dim light bulb. the glowing filament is right in my face. I am now one with the filament, and am inside the glass bulb. A voice says I am trapped and limited within my confines. I feel this heat.

(Personal conversation ensues)

Shifting scenes of islands, bodies of water...I am under the sky...I see stars, celestial bodies, simultaneously.

I see a female eyeball, left profile.

I experience more scene shifts.

Another eyeball seen, with long white eyelashes, all corners 'watches me')

I now meet the cartoon personality (little guy with mustache of Milton Bradley's "Monopoly" game.

(I played Monopoly only once, about 40 years ago as a child. Definitely not something that should be in my recent memory)

(Personal conversation ensues)

He shifts back and forth into the cartoon character of "Wile E. Coyote" (I know!)

(Personal conversation ensues)

Now, I am watching a female with long painted fingernails play Monopoly and suddenly I am inside the small 'silence' piece. I am being driven around the game board, and just another cavern.

I see glowing green eyes. I walk and see bright orange light- active lava, but silent this time around.

I fly upwards out of what appears to be the introductory volcano

I see a male lion approaching me. Then I am somewhat inside the lion's back and grow large. I look down at the lion and he looks back, exposing his belly.

An angel lifts me up and says "we have work to do"... (Telepathically I asked prior for an Initiation of TEX)

We are flying fast. I am on a beach, no sand, just black pebbles. I look and see fallen skyscrapers, buildings destroyed

Ominous silence, and it is snowing. I hear "Ice-Age".

I believe a different angel continues on with me...

(Personal conversation ensues)

Flying with this EE, extremely fast...I see Old England as dressed in 1880's attire.

(I never been to England, but I 'knew I was there'.)

Flying.....loud wind gushes.....

I see what appears as 'primitive man' and hear and 'read "barMUda".

(MU, as in Lemuria? Bar, as in "son of"...not sure...)

Again I hear "Ice-Age".

I see dinosaurs, then darkness and what appears as a stil Bang'.

Now, in linear terms, I am moving forward in time, again.

I see once more, primitive men, like cavemen.

One of them is standing in a body of water, (a beach?) ar of the water, as if hunting for food.

He rips the fish open [vertically/long ways down], and a it.

He smells it and it rings.

He notices me, and hands me the phone.

I get dizzy, spinning...

An angel lifts me and flies me to a mountain composed of 'cartoon-esque' glass shards of stone...

[The English language doesn't always have the equivalent what I seek to describe from my Enochian experiences.]

(Personal conversation ensues)

I am on level ground, looking up at Luna.

Over all, what the Enochian Entities [EE] have been telling me is true. There are not many individuals who the EE sanction. It has become very apparent to me, this truth.

Enochian Magic is not one of the large 'sub-categories' you see.

For many reasons, some being:

- It is difficult to learn as a solo individual
- There are not many 'good' books that go in depth
- The internet web sites share 'copy&paste' paragraphs, rehashed
- Not much discussion on forums, due to fragile egos and closed minds
- Hybrid Neo-Enochian, mixed from Golden Dawn, Crowley, Aleister Crowley, etc. abounds.
- Sensationalism and "Enochian Horror Stories"
- Excuses that "Material is Missing"
- The Judeo-Christian embedded stigma often associated with witchcraft

In my article "Enochian Trends", I have examined the rare Enochian Contact.

The ratio of Enochian Contact in comparison to Earth's population is very low. However, what if we can increase that ratio by using an alternative method?

I have noticed that EE use hypnagogic/hypnopompic/R.E.M. sleep states to their advantage.

EE communicate via visions, which constitute a major part of their Enochian Contact.

EE maintain 'visible' vision/sight is a prerequisite to a direct Enochian Contact.
-This utilizes the Pineal chakra.

Kelley often spoke of the 'angels stirring within his brain'.
Again, referencing my article:

"Who are the Enochian Entities?"...I made a slight argument against these theories.
Angels [in most Western World Magick] are God's Servitors.

Enochian Entities make the strong argument that all magick is not necessarily false.
[Madimi lays hints that the EE are from a different Order of magick).

What if Magick was not the only tool that procures EE Contact?

Various 'ritual magick structures/systems' have been utilized, but there is no definitive ritual structure. Dee and Kelley used prayer.

We do know Dee prayed a lot.

Prayer does induce an 'altered state of consciousness'.

It appears the 'ritual EE contact operation' need not have a complex structure. This being the reason so many claim contact using different methods.

Golden Dawn methods, Chaos Magick and Shamanism, as well as direct 'genuine' EE Contact.

Reciting an EE Key/Call and closing your eyes while kicking your feet can bring contact...

What is the key component then for EE Contact?

-Altering one's "State of Consciousness".

What happens, 'Chemically', during an altered state of consciousness?

What happens, 'Chemically', during hypnagogic/hypnopompic

<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dimethyltryptamine>

"N,N-Dimethyltryptamine (DMT) is a naturally occurring member of the tryptamine family. DMT is found not only in several trace amounts in humans and other mammals, where it is one of the essential amino acid tryptophan[...] The natural function of its presence remains undetermined. Structurally, DMT is analogous to the neurotransmitter serotonin (5-HT), the hormone melatonin, and other tryptamines, such as 5-MeO-DMT, bufotenin, and psilocin.

Many cultures, indigenous and modern, ingest DMT as a psychoactive either in its natural or synthesized forms. When DMT is inhaled in a low dose, its subjective effects can range from short-lived mild states to powerful immersive experiences, which include a complete loss of connection to conventional reality, which may be so extreme as to be ineffable. DMT is also the primary psychoactive in ayahuasca, an Amerindian brew employed for divinatory and healing purposes. Ayahuasca combines DMT with an MAOI, an enzyme inhibitor that is orally active.

Several speculative and yet untested hypotheses suggest that DMT is produced in the human brain and is involved in certain psychiatric and neurological states. DMT is naturally occurring in small amounts in human cerebrospinal fluid, and other tissues of humans are thought to play a role in mediating the visual effects of natural dreams and near-death experiences, religious visions and other mystical states. A biochemical mechanism for this was proposed by the medical researcher Rick Strassman, who suggested in 1988 that DMT might be connected to certain phenomena: brain DMT levels would be periodically elevated during dreaming and possibly other natural states of mind.

A new hypothesis proposed is that in addition to being involved in states of consciousness, endogenous DMT may be involved in normal waking states of consciousness."

-For the Record:

I am not stating Dee and Kelley experimented with DMT or not. Then again, I am not saying they did not, either.

Both men had access to many chemicals in their 'Alchemical Laboratory'. We also know Dee traveled around, a lot...

Having keen mind ability to alter one's consciousness does not require any drugs.

-For the Record:

*I personally use NO drugs, whatsoever*

Dee and Kelley were both excellent magicians, and Kelley had a strong scrying/vision.

Taking all the above into consideration...exactly "what" would happen when someone experiments with DMT?

Where do these DMT entities dwell?

Where is their landscape located?
Is it 'hard wired' into the brain?

Or is it someplace, else?

Are these Hallucinogen 'fly zones' accessible without drugs?
Are they inter dimensional and/or extraterrestrial?

Where does the 'Shamanic mind' go in a sweat lodge or vision quest?

<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dimethyltryptamine>

"Dr. Rick Strassman, while conducting DMT research in the University of New Mexico, advanced the hypothesis that a trip from the pineal gland prior to death or near death was the death experience (NDE) phenomenon. Several of his test subjects reported NDE-like audio or visual hallucinations. His explanation for the possible lack of panic involved in the clinical setting and the differences between those administered and those encountered in natural cases.

Several subjects also reported contact with 'other beings' that were insectoid or reptilian in nature, in highly advanced technology where the subjects were 'carried', 'probed', 'tested', 'manipulated', 'dismembered', 'taught', 'loved' and even 'raped' by these beings. He notes the strong similarities of these bodily tests/invasions to psychedelic experiences throughout time, outlined in Graham Hancock's "Supernatural").

Basing his reasoning on the unreferenced and unsupported evidence that enzymatic material needed to produce DMT is found in the pineal gland (evidence in mammals), and moreover in substantially greater concentrations in any other part of the body, Strassman has speculated that the pineal gland. Currently there is no published reliable scientific evidence supporting this hypothesis.

Writers on DMT include Terence McKenna, Jeremy Narby and others.

In his writings and speeches, Terence McKenna recounts experiences that he sometimes describes as "Self-Transforming Machine Elf Encounters". McKenna believed DMT to be a tool that could be used to explore the mind and allow for communication with other-worldly entities.

Other users report visitation from external intelligences and receive information. These Machine Elf experiences are said to be a minority of DMT users and some people report never seeing anything of that nature".

Subject: [Exorcism and Consecration \["Non-Hybrid Neo-Eno"\]](#)

It became readily apparent to myself [and one other] that our 'other magicks' needed an overhaul.

Once Enochian went full circle, the energies did not converge

If you have read my other articles, you will understand I
They state all other magick is black [besides Their own].

I personally do not use a "Hybrid Neo-Eno".

EE instructed me to perform an Enochian Exorcism to rid n stagnant residue from left over Solomonic magick(s) I hav [Sure I always LBRP, etc..]

Still, I definitely felt an energy matrix I was not accus PSI settled.

Then all my furniture was to be anointed by an Enochian C It was all sort of a 'Reset Switch'.

My (our) temple is now solely dedicated to Enochiana.

[I write this merely for those who are having problems wi Contact.]

I received an email today asking me if Enochian Magic can

I suspect this question stems indirectly from my article being a Higher Magic.

The Heptarchial Mystica is an upgrade to Solomonic magick [In My Own Opinion]

So, if you ever used the Goetia and had good results, you acquire similar results.

 (I think I just coined a *new term LOL)

The WatchTower system of Enochian can also bring mundane

However, I will deliberately give vague answers to these I embrace Enochian as a sacred rite in and of itself. [I personally had some phenomenal usage of the trick and though...]

I will attest to Enochian protecting the mage.

The 'system' seems to have a hard wired/built-in "LBRP - matrix"...i.e., your aura gets some mean meridians ;)

The Apocryphon of John

(The Secret Book of John - The Secret Revelation of John)

The Apocryphon of John is commonly referenced by the Book of John and The Secret Revelation of John, depending "Apocryphon" is translated. There are four surviving Coptic text: two shorter version found in the Berlin Codex; and two longer version, found in Nag Hammadi Codex II and prepared by Dr. Wisse for the Nag Hammadi Library in Egypt manuscripts to produce a single text.

When I, John, heard these things I turned away from place. And I grieved greatly in my heart, saying, "How t appointed, and why was he sent into the world by his Fat Father who sent him, and of what sort is that aeon to wh what did he mean when he said to us, 'This aeon to which type of the imperishable aeon, but he did not teach us c what sort it is."

"And the Sophia of the Epinoia, being an aeon, conceived herself and the conception of the invisible Spirit and failed to bring forth a likeness out of herself without the consent which had not approved - and without her consort, and without the agreement, though the person of her maleness had not approved, and without agreement, and she had thought without the consent of the knowledge of her agreement, (yet) she brought forth. And her invincible power which is in her, her thought did not remain out of her which was imperfect and different from her mother she had created it without her consort. And it was dissimilar to its mother, for it has another form.

"And when she saw (the consequences of) her desire, she saw of a lion-faced serpent. And its eyes were like lightning and she cast it away from her, outside that place, that no one could see it, for she had created it in ignorance. And she was in a luminous cloud, and she placed a throne in the middle of the cloud which might see it except the holy Spirit who is called the most high. She called his name Yaltabaoth.

"This is the first archon who took a great power from her and removed himself from her and moved away from the places where she became strong and created for himself other aeons with which he which (still) exists now. And he joined with his arrogance and begot authorities for himself. The name of the first one of the generations call the reaper. The second one is Harma, and the third one is Kalila-Oumbri. He found the woman as she was preparing herself to be a lord over her, though he did not know the mystery which was in her, the holy decree. And they were afraid to blame him. And he cast them out of paradise into gloomy darkness. And the chief archon saw the virgin, and he knew that the luminous Epinoia of life had appeared in her. And he was of ignorance. And when the foreknowledge of the All noticed this, and they snatched life out of Eve.

"And the chief archon seduced her and he begot in her the first and the second (are) Eloim and Yave. Eloim has a bear-face and a cat-face. The one is righteous but the other is unrighteous. And Yave he set over the fire and the water, and he set over the water and the earth. And these he called with names, and he called Abel with a view to deceive.

"Now up to the present day, sexual intercourse continues with the chief archon. And he planted sexual desire in her who belongs to the Father through intercourse the copies of the bodies, and he insinuated the counterfeit spirit.

"And the two archons he set over principalities, so that they might be over the tomb. And when Adam recognized the likeness of the Epinoia, he begot the likeness of the son of man. He called him the Son of Man, the way of the race in the aeons. Likewise, the mother also she begot the likeness of the son of man, and a copy of those who are in the light. And she will prepare a dwelling place for the aeons which will cause them to drink water of forgetfulness, from the chief archon. And he might not know from where they came. Thus, the seed remains in the darkness, assisting (him), in order that, when the Spirit comes forth, he may raise up and heal him from the deficiency, that that he (again) become holy and faultless."

And I said to the savior, "Lord, will all the souls be brought into the pure light?" He answered and said to me, "Great your mind, for it is difficult to explain them to others from the immovable race. Those on whom the Spirit of life (whom) he will be with the power, they will be saved and worthy of the greatness and be purified in that place from the involvements in evil. Then they have no other care but alone, to which they direct their attention from here or from jealousy or desire and greed of anything. They are not except the state of being in the flesh alone, which they expectantly for the time when they will be met by the real. Such then are worthy of the imperishable, eternal life and endure everything and bear up under everything, that they fight and inherit eternal life."

I said to him, "Lord, the souls of those who did not whom the power and Spirit descended, (will they be rejected) said to me, "If) the Spirit (descended upon them), they saved, and they will change (for the better). For the power every man, for without it no one can stand. And after that the Spirit of life increases and the power comes and strength one can lead it astray with works of evil. But those on whom spirit descends are drawn by him and they go astray."

And I said, "Lord, where will the souls of these go of their flesh?" And he smiled and said to me, "The soul become stronger than the counterfeit spirit, is strong and and, through the intervention of the incorruptible one, taken up to the rest of the aeons."

And I said, "Lord, those, however, who have not known where will their souls be?" And he said to me, "In those who has gained strength when they went astray. And he burdened to the works of evil, and he casts it down into forgetfulness comes out of (the body), it is handed over to the authorities being through the archon, and they bind it with chains and and consort with it until it is liberated from the forge of knowledge. And if thus it becomes perfect, it is saved."

And I said, "Lord, how can the soul become smaller nature of its mother or into man?" Then he rejoiced when he said to me, "Truly, you are blessed, for you have understood made to follow another one (fem.), since the Spirit of life saved through him. It is not again cast into another flesh."

And I said, "Lord, these also who did not know, but will their souls go?" Then he said to me, "To that place of poverty go they will be taken, the place where there is no will be kept for the day on which those who have blasphemed tortured, and they will be punished with eternal punishment."

And I said, "Lord, from where did the counterfeit spirit to me, "The Mother-Father, who is rich in mercy, the holy the One who is merciful and who sympathizes with you (pl) the foreknowledge of light, he raised up the offspring of his thinking and the eternal light of man. Suffice to say, personal life problems dampened the full effect it might have had.

Also, utilizing all 3 systems did not work exactly as I intended. I felt as if the energies were causing 'antipodal tension' in the aura.

I brought this to EE's attention and I will attempt it again [Their suggestion]

-It will be awhile before I attempt something of this magnitude [I am currently experiencing somewhat of an 'energy hangover']
 Only because I had promised to post an update to this 'event' so.

The Enochian Entities [EE] also share some 'Biblical Prophecies'

Here's one prophecy I feel needs addressing:

The antichrist appearance is immanent.

If these EE were "angels of Yahweh", I am certain the EE

22) "when a prophet speaks in the name of the LORD, if the word does not come to pass, that is the thing which the LORD has not

[Christmas Eve- 12/24/2007]

My work with EE has revealed some insight into Their Sys Alphabet.

Kelley received the Enochian Alphabet by EE in a thrice-
(3 sets) x (7 letters)

People are used to seeing "Cardinal, Mutable, Fixed" as Zodiac...

The sequence of:
-Cardinal [create, begin]
-Fixed [change/maintain]
-Mutable [changing to something else, end/destroy]
..are parts of all the patterns we experience.

Zodiac Influence -Cardinal Qualities:

1st Set of 7 Letters:

B, C/K, G/J, D, F, A, E

*"Cardinal" - [from the French "cardo"] = a 'hinge', that turns. (It is the most important part)

Example:

In the Hept. Myst. System, A majority of names begin with my contention that the "B" changes in cycles. Also, Carmara drops the "C" and is Marmara.

See my earlier article here:

--The cycling of the letters could be considered "hinge-

Planet Influence -Mutable Qualities:

2nd Set of 7 Letters:

M, I/Y, H, L, P, Q, N

*"Mutable" = "subject to change".

Example:

His bigger name is Carmara, that is pronounced Marmara k ("M" remains silent).

--The "bigger name" has the Zodiac "C" rather than the I "Subject to Change"

Element Influence [Including Aethyrs] -Fixed Qualities:

3rd Set of 7 Letters:

X, O, R, Z, U/V/W, S, T

*"Fixed" = securely placed/fastened - implies unchanging

--Quite a few 'power words' of the Enochian Keys contain Calls exert 'tension and torque' on the Element Qualities [and 30 Aethyrs].

Example:

"ZACARe ca od ZAMRAN" amplifies my Temple and My Aura ar
"Hybrid works".

This is an expanded re-post of an earlier article I wrote from my yahoo diary:
 [I received an email request for it- so here it is]

GBR/Heptagram incorporates Heptagrams and WatchTower Seal. It does not use the *Order of the Tabula Recensa.

*See my previous article for the reason why:
 "Reformed Great Table Not for Magic?"
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/enochianmagic/message/1>

This will Banish 'pre-existing PSI residue' from others. However, it will Not Banish EE energy.

This is a 'condensed' rite, granted to me by EE.

Erect an astral cube:

Visualize clearly, finite glowing borders.
 East-Red
 South-Black
 West-White
 North-Green

Visualize clearly:

-You are 'standing on' Red Silk, which you know is an 'e Table'.
 [Recall, the structure of the Holy Table, complete with and 7 Ensigns of Creation 'create a 3D effect with power 'multi_dimensionally']

-The sky is neutral, awaiting your astral impression.

[Use some type of energy circulation exercise here]
I do a modified Macrocosmic Orbit with pore breathing.
I then 'absorb' the 4 WatchTowers within me.
Across me is the Black Cross-
[similar to the "Qabalistic Cross/Crux" exercise]

[When you recite the First & Second Enochian Key, you will these steps correctly- Vibration is an understatement!]

East- a Red flaming Heptagram appears*.
Within the Heptagon- see the [appropriate] WatchTower seal
[Note; A Heptagon will be inside the Heptagram]

South- a Black flaming Heptagram appears.
Within the Heptagon- see the WatchTower seal.

West- a White flaming Heptagram appears.
Within the Heptagon- see the WatchTower seal.

North-- a Green flaming Heptagram appears.
Within the Heptagon- see the WatchTower seal.
(The "B"s must be in Enochian Letters!)

[*I possess 5 Enochian Element Wands- you don't need the mandatory for this rite. They are a carry over from other use them here]

Recite the First Enochian Key:

At each WatchTower Seal-
Call/'Vibrate through' [penetrate the veil] with the appropriate
& King Name
[Use Mercy or Severity- depending on the working]

[#Optional- I added the following 2 steps, myself]
#Recite the Second Enochian Key:
#Call the Table of Union and 'see' it open upon the ceiling
Enochian Letters.

! Important- if you choose to not use the above #options after you recite the above, 1st Key-

The 4 WatchTowers spin Clock-Wise/Deosil like a "square"
You can feel your '*whole temple start to move'- [eventually]

(*A "Tesseract" working EE has given me, but will not allow yet, will be posted when I am able)

[#Optional- I added the following, myself]
-#Try to see/feel brilliant white light exploding through your body- like a nuclear weapon was detonated and the energy through the ceiling.

[You can use this as a general stand alone rite- or continue desired working at this point]

Is the Enochian Material just another rehash of prior grimoires?
 Are the EE the same angels from, let's say, the "Heptameron"?
 Enochian Magic was forbidden to Dee and Kelley.

Why?

We know Dee and Kelley had access to these older grimoires.

To postulate that Dee and Kelley had prior communication with "other grimoires" is not far fetched.

So, why was Enochian Magic forbidden to Dee and Kelley?

If 'Oip-Teaa-Pdoce' was just 'other angel with a different name',
 Dee/Kelley 'were not allowed' to evoke this EE in ritual.

Why weren't they given a ritual format to communicate with them?

Mapsama tells them to be patient.

Gabriel tells them they will never understand the magnitude of the delivered to them.

Kelley believed the EE to be deceivers, even though he was aware of of older grimoires.

Kelley, being the EE 'contact', knew there was a difference between 'other angels'..

[Kelley was an experienced magickian, scribe and necromancer]

If EE are the same angels of other grimoires, why was Kelley forbidden?
 Why should we even believe Kelley at all, then?

--Are we to believe after several years of Dee and Kelley's work that they accomplished was bringing to the magickal world 'just by contacting the same angels from other grimoires'?

Ironically, if this is true, how come there really is no problem with contacting the EE?

[Other grimoires provide insight into contacting their 'angels']

Gabriel makes it clear:

The Doctrine delivered to Dee and Kelley is a "flayle".
 "Thrashing". [TFR page #161]

This is all about Transformation.

Comparing the above to, let's say- the "Heptameron", might be interesting.

Certainly the Heptarchia Mystica can be used to achieve the same.

as well as using the WatchTower 'cacodaemons' for personal gratification.

But, that is a very small part of the Enochian Material. [The EE did not condone the summoning of WatchTower 'evil

The Enochian Entities make it clear all other systems of Own Materials] is black...

Ave tells them God sent false and deceiving angels to punish black magick.

These "false and deceiving angels to punish man" would be the Heptameron, according to Ave.

Ave also speaks about the 150 lions- "spirits of wickedness which are the fallen angels who taught men "demonic magick

To categorize the EE as "the same angels from other grimoires EE 'fallen angels' who are "spirits of wickedness, error

In EE's defense--This is why I personally, would NOT lump them in with the 'evil crowd'- if we are to believe what Ave says, anyway..

The Enochian Materials is not a system, per se, but rather a collection of Universes within Universes.

Keys to explore them and the communication of it's Dwelling. It is about Transformation and Evolving.

It is the Highest Magick [if It can even be called "Magick"]

Saying EE are the same angels of other grimoires limits their power. [I personally would not use a Tree of Life diagram for them]

The Heptameron, on the other hand, is:

-Consecrations and Benedictions

-Conjuration

- "The Spirits of the Air... their nature is to procure riches; to cause one to obtain favour and benevolence; to cause men to be loved; to raise men to honors; to carry or take away riches

- "The Spirits of the Air of Munday ...their nature is to cause things from place to place; to make horses swift, and to cause persons both present and future..."

An Enochian Magickian knows the EE energies can never fully be contained and will continue to linger.

The 'Solomonic circles', however, contain their "own" energy and are tight, allowing no 'PSI residue' to bleed through-out the end.

This article was my attempt, my argument, [and *my own conclusion] that the Enochian Entities [EE] are NOT the same entities of older grimoires. No one is capable of labeling them self an expert regarding Enochian Materials.

It is too much of an open book for absolute closure.

An opinion becomes fact when proof is presented.

Until now, it is all conjecture.

I am always open minded.

If valid proof was presented, I would gladly concede in not provide just another redundant avenue to express wha circulation.

Although the intention is laudable, in my opinion it would be of more value to prepare a transcript of the diaries contained in MSS 1 & 2 rather than relying on Casaubon's flawed version. The MSS are relevant as a number of fallacies have been perpetuated.

An example of a couple of errors:

The word 'Loagaeth' in Liber Mysteriorum (& Sancti) Part 1 was rendered 'Logaeth' by Casaubon; accordingly, Casaubon's version is now in common use.

The name 'Coronzon' which appears in TFR is actually 'Coronzon' in the relevant diary (hence the variant spelling shown in Laycock's Dictionary; any Thelemites care to comment on the gematria).

Furthermore, there are a number of interesting marginalia and own emphasis of various sections of the texts which may be of aspects of the material. An approach such as Clay Holder's Libri Mysteriorum would therefore be of particular value in to prepare. The only problem with the MS diaries is legibility the diaries in Sloane MS 3188 Dee's handwriting is poor, and in places and parts of the MSS have decayed. As a result, it is useful in filling certain gaps in the extant MSS.

From what I can personally ascertain, this work was long overdue. There is much confusion on how to format, read and write correctly in Enochian.
Many Mages want to construct their own rituals in the Enochian Language and it seems there are many incorrect notions being given out in the advice department.

The 9/11 magic show, utilizing the latest ac propaganda, tricked many people into military and politi otherwise reject, solidifying support in the United Stat wars aggression. The attacks also provided the rationale administration takeover of the Bill of Rights and the Cc

The events of September 11th heralded a dark, new standard of affairs. A New World Order, much discussed by Americans in the years preceding the events of 9/11, began at Ground Zero in Manhattan. It began, including a war on an idea--Terror. While one can see the evils that were wrought from the smoldering ruins of the World Trade Center, is there a darker, more sinister agenda at work? Is there a more magical connection to the occult?

The Great Beast

Aleister Crowley (1875-1947), the foremost occultist of the 20th century, dedicated his life to the dark arts. A wealthy, Cambridge-educated traveler, Crowley (rhymes with holy) associated with the luminaries of his era, including such noted figures as E. W. Dyer, W. B. Yeats and H. L. Mencken. Fully committed to the transformation of the entire world, Crowley (also known as the Great Beast 666) wrote books detailing his vision of the ideal society: the strict maintenance of a patriarchal aristocracy ruling over a society of Darwinian killing of the unfit. According to the Beast, his message to the masses: "You will observe that I am advocating a social revolution. And so I am!"

Is there a connection between Crowley, 9/11 and the New World Order? Has been overlooked? Has Crowley influenced the ideology of the New World Order? Is there a secret numerical code in the events of 9/11 not known to the general public? Is there a deeper meaning to the numbers 11, 77, 93, 175 the day of the event? Why are those numbers relevant to the occult?

The 9/11 Working

If one considers the multitude of numerically significant numbers in the life of Aleister Crowley, the certainty of occult influence in the events of 9/11 can be concluded. Each of the plane numbers involved in the events of 9/11 are directly to the prime numbers of Crowley's system. The numbers are respectively: 11, 77, 93, 175. Aleister Crowley wrote about these numbers specifically, and emphasized their importance as follows:

11:

"Firstly", 11 is the number of Magick in itself. It is the key to all types of operation.

"Secondly", it is the sacred number par excellence. It is written in the Book of the Law:

"...11, as all their numbers who are of us." [1]

77:

The sublime and supreme septenary in its mature manifestation is written through matter...written in Hebrew Ayin Zayin (OZ)...Capricorn Tarot; which is the picture of the Goat of the Sabbath (Baphomet).

77 also represents half of the formulation of sexual magick and the Kabbalah.[3] It is also the 77 infernal names of Satan in the Satanic Bible by Anton LaVey.[4]

93:

The cabalistic gematria[5] values of the Greek words Theos (God) and, Aiwass[6] in Crowley's magical system equate to 93.

"The matter is of extreme importance; because Aiwass of the Law repeatedly makes use of correspondences in Grimoires, 93 --- Agape, Love, 93. 718 = Stele 666, and so on. The word spelled in Hebrew has the value 93." [7]

175:

Liber 175 in Crowley's magical system is a ritual used for the adoration.

"There are three main methods of invoking any deity:

The first method consists of devotion to that deity. If the deity is mystical in character, they may not be dealt with in this manner. A perfect instruction exists in Liber 175.

The second method is the straightforward ceremonial invocation.

The third method is the dramatic, perhaps the most effective. Certainly it is so to the artist temperament, for it appeals through his aesthetic sense." [1]

These numbers are essential to the occult, magical system of Crowley. Thus, Crowley's most important numbers, or "prime numbers," were inserted in to the 9/11 event intentionally. The likelihood that these numbers appear at random are infinitesimal. I also argue that the numbers 666 and 175 represent a signaling function to all Crowley's occult community that the events were an "inside job."

Thus, based on the numerical markers, we can observe the influence upon the events of 9/11 and sense the hidden, occult event. To better understand Crowley's connection to Sept 11, an explication of this hidden tie is contained in my book Prophet of Evil: Aleister Crowley, 9/11 and the New World Order, available on Kindle at www.occult911.com.

Arkansas Game and Fish Press Release:

BEEBE, Ark.-- Saturday night, ringing in the New Year to meaning for the citizens of Beebe. Around 11:30 p.m., the Arkansas Game and Fish Commission began getting reports falling from the sky in the city limits of Beebe.

Officers estimated that over 1,000 birds had fallen out before midnight. Most of the birds were dead, but some were still alive. Officers arrived. The blackbirds fell over a one-mile area. A wildlife officer Robby King responded to the reports and collected the birds. "Shortly after I arrived there were still birds falling from the sky," King said. King collected about 65 dead birds that will be sent to the Livestock and Poultry Commission lab and the National Wildlife Research Center in Madison, Wis.

The AGFC has flown over the area to gauge the scope of the incident and to see if other birds found outside of the initial area.

AGFC ornithologist Karen Rowe said that strange events similar to this have occurred a number of times across the globe. "Test results were inconclusive, but the birds showed physical trauma and they had all been hit by lightning or high-altitude hail," Rowe said.

I am sure this individual is trying to help me.

Maybe, this was this person's initial intent since the beginning of our conversations.

Perhaps this person's own innate paranoia got the best of them.

Maybe this person's emotions were 'tweaked' due to the fact that they needed a release.

I will never know as all communication was halted on their part.

Of course I will comply and respect their wish.

The updated news email also said they would pray for me.

Although the intention is laudable, in my opinion it wou value to prepare a transcript of the diaries contained i

September 11th - The Occult Connection
 October 25th, 2010

William Ramsey

On September 11th, 2001, four rogue commercial airplanes of the eastern United States, headed toward high value targets in Washington, D.C. Two of the planes, Flights 11 and 175, struck the World Trade Center in lower Manhattan, and within an hour, both mass towers should have withstood the impact of each plane) exploded into dust. Flight 77 (or some other aircraft) struck the Pentagon, killing 200 military personnel. Another commercial airplane, Flight 93 (shot down) in the skies above Pennsylvania.

The 9/11 attacks upon the people of the United States, carried out by radical Muslims, initiated revolutionary change in the world. The September 11 attacks led to:

1. An imperial presidency in the United States.
2. Two wars of aggression in Iraq and Afghanistan, and numerous conflicts and assassinations throughout the world.
3. The renunciation of individual and human rights in the name of national security.
4. The use of torture and the elimination of 900 years of legal tradition and revocation of habeus corpus.
5. Massive increases in military spending.
6. An innovative, technocratic, cradle-to-grave surveillance system.

The events of September 11th heralded a dark, new standa affairs. A New World Order, much discussed by American e preceding the events of 9/11, began at Ground Zero in Ma began, including a war on an idea--Terror. While one car evils that were wrought from the smoldering ruins of the darker, more sinister agenda at work? Is there a more ma connection to the occult?

The Great Beast

Aleister Crowley (1875-1947), the foremost occultist of dedicated his life to the dark arts. A wealthy, Cambridge traveler, Crowley (rhymes with holy) associated with the luminaries of his era, including such noted figures as E Yeats and H. L. Mencken. Fully committed to the transfor of the entire world, Crowley (also known as the Great Be books detailing his vision of the ideal society: the str maintenance of a patriarchal aristocracy ruling over a s Darwinian killing of the unfit. According to the Beast, over the masses: "You will observe that I am advocating revolution. And so I am!"

Is there a connection between Crowley, 9/11 and the New been overlooked? Has Crowley influenced the ideology of there a secret numerical code in the events of 9/11 not general public? Is there a deeper meaning to the numbers the day of the event? Why are those numbers relevant to

The 9/11 Working

If one considers the multitude of numerically significar Aleister Crowley, the certainty of occult influence in t be concluded. Each of the plane numbers involved in the directly to the prime numbers of Crowley's system. The r are respectively: 11, 77, 93, 175. Aleister Crowley wrot numbers specifically, and emphasized their importance as 11:

"Firstly", 11 is the number of Magick in itself. to all types of operation.

"Secondly", it is the sacred number par excellenc is written in the Book of the Law:

"...11, as all their numbers who are of us."[1]

77:

The sublime and supreme septenary in its mature n through matter...written in Hebrew Ayin Zayin (OZ)...Caprice Tarot; which is the picture of the Goat of the Sabbath c

77 also represents half of the formulation of sexual mag and the Kabbalah.[3] It is also the 77 infernal names of Satanic Bible by Anton LaVey.[4]

93:

The cabalistic gematria[5] values of the Greek words The (Love) and, Aiwass[6] in Crowley's magical system equate

"The matter is of extreme importance; because Aiw of the Law repeatedly makes use of correspondences in Gr Will, 93 --- Agape, Love, 93. 718 = Stele 666, and so or spelt in Hebrew has the value 93."[7]

175:

Liber 175 in Crowley's magical system is a ritual used t adoration.

"There are three main methods of invoking any deity:

The first method consists of devotion to that dei mystical in character, they may not be dealt with in thi perfect instruction exists in Liber 175.

The second method is the straightforward ceremoni

The third method is the dramatic, perhaps the mos certainly it is so to the artist temperament, for it app through his aesthetic sense."[1]

These numbers are essential to the occult, magical syste Crowley. Thus, Crowley's most important numbers, or "pri inserted in to the 9/11 event intentionally. The likeli appear at random are infinitesimal. I also argue that th and 175 represent a signaling function to all Crowley's occult community that the events were an "inside job."

Thus, based on the numerical markers, we can observe the influence upon the events of 9/11 and sense the hidden, event. To better understand Crowley's connection to Sept explication of this hidden tie is contained in my book I Crowley, 9/11 and the New World Order, available on King www.occult911.com.

World Powers Stunned After Message From "God" Broadcast

A mysterious Russian Space Forces (VKS) report circulating states that on 28 January our world was "officially" extraterrestrial/ inter-dimensional intelligence source "beacons" descended upon the world's holiest city American State of Utah, home to The Church of Latter Day delivering a rapid energy pulse of information that, our "Be of no fear as [we-it-I] return".

This report states that the subjective personal pronouns messages (we-it-I) are all inclusive and related to species on our Earth.

Most astounding of all were that these communication "video" videotaped in action by hundreds of people in both Jerusalem evidenced by the many postings of this mysterious event such sites around the world. [Jerusalem video of this event and here. Utah video of this event can be viewed here.]

In the videos taken of this mysterious event in Jerusalem can be seen descending upon the Dome of the Rock [photos hovering over it, then, suddenly, giving off a "burst" accelerating at great speed upwards where it joined other objects in the sky before they all disappear into the heavens.

In the video taken of this mysterious event in Utah, like objects were seen dropping white-lighted communication "ground" where they gave off "bursts" of energy before the heavens.

The locations where these events occurred, Jerusalem and note due to their historic religious significance relating to the faiths of Judaism, Christianity, Islam and The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (aka LDS Church, Mormons).

The Dome of the Rock in Jerusalem is especially important to have been the location of Solomon's Temple (aka The First Temple) by Nebuchadnezzar II, king of the Babylonian Empire, after the destruction of Jerusalem in 587 BC. It is the holiest site of the Hebrews as well as the Temple Mount.

In the Islamic faith, the Dome of the Rock is called Al-Aqsa Mosque, one of the most revered sites of that religion. It is told that the Prophet Muhammad flew on the winged steed, named Buraq [photo 4th left], and he was accompanied by the Archangel Gabriel. His journey continued from the Temple Rock through the Seven Heavens to Allah. He met earlier prophets in each of the Heavens. Muhammad then asked about the number of times each believer is to pray each day and the number five was agreed on. Muhammad returned safely to Mecca the next night.

During the Crusades the Dome of the Rock was given to the Cistercian Augustinian religious order, who turned it into a church. The Dome of the Rock Mosque became a royal stable. The Knights Templar set up their headquarters in the Al-Aqsa Mosque adjacent to the Dome for much of the 12th century. The "Templum Domini", as they called it, was featured on the Order's Grand Masters and it became the architectural model for churches across Europe. Many Christians believe, and Ron Wyatt confirms, that the Dome of the Rock was, also, the place where Pontius Pilate was born.

The Mormon Church is linked to Jerusalem as their faith teaches that Jesus Christ (bottom left) will return there in the End of Days and that he will enter the doors of the Temple in Lake City, Utah, Temple where he will enter the doors of the Temple on the East side of that building. One of the LDS Church's major prophets, Angel Moroni is, also, depicted on many of their temples in Jerusalem too.

This VKS report further states that the energy pulse of these "beacons" was broadcast at the frequency value of 1420.40575177 MHz, identically emulating the strong narrowband radio signal known as the Wow! Signal. R. Ehman, on August 15, 1977, while working on a SETI project at the radio telescope of The Ohio State University and referring to it as the "Wow! Signal".

Note: Two different values for the Wow! Signal frequency have been reported: 1420.356 MHz (J. D. Kraus) and 1420.4556 MHz (J. R. Ehman). The frequency of 1420.40575177 MHz is significant for SETI searches because, it is reasonably common element in the universe, and hydrogen resonates at this frequency. Extraterrestrials might use that frequency on which to transmit. The frequency of the Wow! Signal matches very closely with the frequency of the hydrogen line which is at 1420.40575177 MHz. The bandwidth of the signal (each column on the printout corresponds to a 10 kHz-wide frequency band) is only present in one column). The original printout of the Wow! Signal (3rd left), complete with Jerry Ehman's famous exclamation "Wow!", is available from the Ohio Historical Society.

Most interesting to note about this report is how closely it matches the growing evidence that the ancient "gods" (who the myth says have helped humanity through other catastrophes in history) not only left a sort of early warning system in the form of the Wow! Signal.

Satan is the Westernized form of Shaitan.

Shaitan [hidden] is of the djinn/genie and djinn have been in ancient arabic lore much longer than Christianity has been.

Satan is a christian egregore.

The concept is a corruption of Lucifer... a true creator manifestation.

Christianity is a work of deception, confusing people from the truth. You are what you think- and religion is the epitome of self-imprisonment.

January 2011: Activists in Egypt call for an uprising in their own country, to protest against poverty, unemployment, government corruption and the rule of president Hosni Mubarak, who has been in power for three decades.

January 25:

On a national holiday to commemorate the police forces, Egyptians take to the streets in large numbers, calling it a "day of rage".

Thousands march in downtown Cairo, heading towards the offices of the ruling National Democratic Party, as well as the foreign ministry and the state television. Similar protests are reported in other towns across the country.

After a few hours of relative calm, police and demonstrators clash; police fire tear gas and use water cannons against demonstrators crying out "Down with Mubarak" in Cairo's main Tahrir Square.

Protests break out in the Mediterranean city of Alexandria, the Nile Delta cities of Mansura and Tanta and in the southern cities of Aswan and Assiut, witnesses say.

Hours after the countrywide protests begin, the interior ministry issues a statement blaming the Muslim Brotherhood, Egypt's technically banned but largest opposition party, for fomenting the unrest - a claim that the Muslim Brotherhood denies.

Protest organisers heavily relied on social media outlets such as Facebook and Twitter.

The interior minister says three protesters and a police officer have been killed during the anti-government demonstrations.

January 26: A protester and a police officer are killed in central Cairo as anti-government demonstrators pelt security forces with rocks and firebombs for a second day, according to witnesses.

Police use tear gas, water cannons and batons to disperse protesters in Cairo. Witnesses say that live ammunition is also fired into the air.

Mubarak's offer not to serve a believed to be much sixth term as Head of State is not higher [Reuters] enough.

US President Barack Obama praises the Egyptian military for their patriotism and for allowing peaceful demonstrations. He says only the Egyptian people can determine their leaders.

Shortly after his speech, clashes break out between pro-Mubarak and anti-government protesters in the Mediterranean city of Alexandria, Al Jazeera's correspondent reports.

Khalid Abdel Nasser, son of the former Egyptian president Gamal Abdel Nasser, joins the protest in Tahrir Square.

Motaz Salah Al Deen, spokesman for Egypt's opposition Al Wafd Party, says a self-described "new national coalition for change" has been formed.

Number of protesters in Cairo's Tahrir Square are revised to more than a million people. Thousands more take to the streets throughout Egypt, including in Alexandria and Suez.

February 2: Preparations begin for another day of demonstrations against President Hosni Mubarak's regime. The army is still deployed with tanks throughout different positions in and around Tahrir Square.

Google improves its speak2tweet technology for the people in Egypt.

The Los Angeles Times reports that the Boston entrepreneur Hadid Habbab has called for volunteers to help find his missing friend, Google executive Wael Ghonim, who went missing during the protests of the past week.

Clashes between anti-government and pro-Mubarak protesters break out in Alexandria.

Internet services are at least partially restored in Cairo after a five-day blackout aimed at stymieing protests.

Egypt's newly appointed vice-president says anti-government protests must stop before dialogue can begin with opposition groups.

Violent clashes rage for much of the day around Tahrir Square in central Cairo. Up to 1,500 people are injured, some of them seriously, and by the day's end at least three deaths are reported by the Reuters news agency quoting officials.

Pro-democracy protesters say the military allowed thousands of pro-Mubarak supporters, armed with sticks and knives, to enter the square.

February 3: Bursts of heavy gunfire early aimed at anti-government demonstrators in Tahrir [Liberation] Square, leave at least five people dead and several more wounded, according to reports from Cairo.

Sustained bursts of automatic weapons fire and powerful single shots begin at around around 4am local time (02:00GMT) and continue for more than an hour.

February 4: Hundreds of thousands of anti-government protesters gather in Cairo's Tahrir Square for what they have termed the "Day of Departure".

Chants urging Hosni Mubarak to leave reverberate across the square, as the country enters its eleventh day of unrest and mass demonstrations.

February 5: Thousands who remain inside Tahrir Square fear an approaching attempt by the military to evacuate the square.

Differing reports of how many have died in the last 11 days of protests and clashes surface.

The Egyptian health minister says 11 people have died, while the United Nations says 300 people may have been killed across the country since protests began. News agencies have counted more than 150 dead in morgues in Alexandria, Suez and Cairo.

Reuters quotes Egyptian state TV as saying "terrorists" have targeted an Israel-Egypt gas pipeline in northern Sinai.

The leadership of Egypt's ruling National Democratic Party resigns, including Gamal Mubarak, the son of Hosni Mubarak. The new secretary-general of the party is Hossam Badrawi, seen as a member of the liberal wing of the party.

February 6: The Muslim Brotherhood says in a statement that it "has decided to participate in a dialogue round in order to understand how serious the officials are in dealing with the demands of the people".

Banks officially re-open for 3.5 hours, and traffic police are back on the streets in Cairo, in attempts to get the capital to start returning to normal.

Al Jazeera correspondent Ayman Mohyeldin is detained by the Egyptian military. He is released seven hours later, following a concerted appeal by the network and Mohyeldin's supporters.

Protests continue in Tahrir Square; there are reports of gunshots fired by the army into the air near the cordon set up inside the barricades, near the Egyptian museum.

Leaked US diplomatic cables suggest Omar Suleiman, the vice-president, long sought to demonise the opposition Muslim Brotherhood in his contacts with skeptical US officials.

Reports say Hillary Clinton, the US secretary of state, spoke with Egyptian prime minister Ahmed Shafiq (on February 5), emphasising the need to ensure the legitimate aspirations of the Egyptian people are met, also stressing that incidents of harassment and detention of activists and journalists must stop.

February 7: Thousands are camping out in Tahrir Square, refusing to budge. While banks have reopened, schools and the stock exchange remain closed.

A symbolic funeral procession is held for journalist Ahmed Mahmoud, shot as he filmed the clashes between protesters and riot police from his Cairo office. Protesters are demanding an investigation into the cause of his death.

Egypt's government approve a 15 per cent raise in salaries and pensions in a bid to appease the angry masses.

Wael Ghonim, a Google executive and political activist arrested by state authorities, is released; some see him as a potential figurehead for the pro-democracy camp.

February 8: Protesters continue to gather at Tahrir Square, which now resembles a tented camp. Protesters in the capital also gather to protest outside parliament.

The city sees possibly the biggest crowd of demonstrators, including Egyptians who have returned from abroad and other newcomers mobilised by the release of activist Wael Ghonim.

Omar Suleiman, the vice-president, warns that his government "can't put up with continued protests" for a long time.

Separately, Suleiman also announces a slew of constitutional and legislative reforms, to be undertaken by yet to be formed committees.

Ban Ki-moon, the UN chief, says genuine dialogue is needed to end the current crisis, adding that a peaceful transition is crucial.

February 9: Labour unions join protesters in the street, with some of them calling for Mubarak to step down while others simply call for better pay. Masssive strikes start rolling throughout the country.

Famous Arab pop star Tamer Hosni visits Tahrir Square, but protesters are unimpressed and angered. Hosni previously made statements telling the demonstrators to leave the square, saying that Mubarak had offered them concessions.

Thirty-four political prisoners, including members of the Muslim Brotherhood, were released on Tuesday, according to Egyptian state television.

Human Rights Watch says that 302 people have been killed since the start of Egypt's pro-democracy uprising. Based on visits to a number of hospitals in Egypt, the organisation says that records show the death toll has reached 232 in Cairo, 52 in Alexandria and 18 in Suez.

Attributing the information to Egyptian security officials, Reuters reports that several protesters suffered gunshot wounds and one was killed when 3,000 protesters took to the streets in Wadi al-Jadid, where clashes from the previous nights carried over to the early hours.

Citing medics, AFP news agency reports five were dead and 100 are wounded in the clashes that have been going on for two days.

Ahmed Aboul Ghiet, Egypt's foreign minister, tells al-Arabiya network on Wednesday that the Egyptian army could step in to "protect the country from an attempt by some adventurers to take power".

And in an interview with American public broadcaster PBS, Aboul Ghiet says that he is "infuriated" by the US's initial response to the unrest in the country, and that he finds the Obama administration's advice on political transition "not at all" helpful."

February 10: The newly appointed Culture Minister, Gaber Asfour, quits. His family says it's due to health reasons but Egypt's main daily newspaper al-Ahram says Asfour, who is also a writer, was criticised by his literary colleagues for taking the post. He was the only new face in the new cabinet.

The Egyptian prime minister forms a committee that will gather evidence on "the illegitimate practices" that resulted from the events of recent weeks. The committee will receive reports from citizens and civil society organisations and then present a report to the public prosecutor.

Protesters in Tahrir Square waved their shoes in dismay as Mubarak said he was staying in power [Reuters]

The criminal court in Egypt has endorsed the decision of banning three former ministers from leaving the country and the government has also frozen their assets.

The security chief for the Egyptian city of Wadi al-Jadid (New Valley) is sacked and the police captain who ordered police to shoot at protesters is arrested and will be tried.

Amid rumours that he will be stepping down tonight, Mubarak gives a televised speech which he says is "from the heart". He repeats his promise to not run in the next presidential elections and to "continue to shoulder" his responsibilities in the "peaceful transition" that he says will take place in September.

Protesters in Tahrir Square react with fury when Mubarak says he's remaining in power until September. Protesters wave their shoes in the air, and demand the army join them in revolt.

February 11: After tens of thousands people take to the streets across Egypt in angry protests, Hosni Mubarak resigns as president and hands over power to the army.

The announcement is made by Omar Suleiman, the vice-president, just after 16:00 GMT.

Earlier in the day, masses of protesters had descended on the state television building in Cairo and the presidential palace in Heliopolis, as well as in Tahrir Square.

February 12: People celebrate in Tahrir Square until early morning. Pro-democracy protesters start to clean the square.

The country's new military rulers promise to hand power to an elected, civilian government and pledged that Egypt will remain committed to all international treaties - in an apparent nod to its 1979 peace treaty with Israel.

State television says travel bans are being imposed on several of the country's former ministers, including the former prime minister Ahmed Nazif, who was sacked by Mubarak before he stepped down.

February 13: Soldiers try to remove the remaining protesters in Tahrir Square and their tents are dismantled. Traffic flows through the square for the first time since the protests began.

The cabinet spokesman says the cabinet, appointed when Mubarak was still in office, will not undergo a major reshuffle and will stay to oversee a political transformation in the coming months.

About 2,000 policemen hold a protest outside the interior ministry, demanding better wages and trying to clear the bad reputation they have.

Some other public sector workers and bank employees are also protesting in Alexandria and other cities.

February 14: Protesters leave Tahrir Square in the morning but a few thousands return later, most of them protesting against the police.

Police, ambulance drivers and other workers are holding separate demonstrations.

The military leadership issues "Communique No 5", calling for national solidarity and criticising strike action. It urges workers to play their role in reviving the economy.

Chapter 1 Introduction

The Heptarchia Mystica, or “mystical heptarchy”, represents a mostly neglected corner of the well-known Enochian magical system revealed to John Dee and Edward Kelley in the late sixteenth century, Dee’s only completed grimoire that details the angels attributed to the seven ancient planets. While most modern Enochian magicians are aware of its existence, it is neglected in the sense that very few magicians work with the angels of the heptarchy and for the most part regard them as historical curiosities or some sort of “warm-up” to the later Enochian material that Dee and Kelley received. Because of this I and the members of my magical working group decided to embark on a thorough investigation of this portion of the Enochian magical system starting in 2006. What we found is that the mystical heptarchy represents a powerful and elegant system of ceremonial magick that can be used to accomplish a wide variety of practical objectives.

I draw a distinction between ceremonial and ritual magick. To most people, and even many practitioners, “ritual magick” and “ceremonial magick” are synonymous, with “ceremonial magick” being the more common term. However, there is an important difference in meaning between the two. In a magical and/or spiritual context, Ritual is defined as:

1. an established or prescribed procedure for a religious or other rite.
2. a system or collection of religious or other rites.
3. observance of set forms in public worship.
4. a book of rites or ceremonies.
5. a book containing the offices to be used by priests in administering the sacraments and for visitation of the sick, burial of the dead, etc.
6. a prescribed or established rite, ceremony, proceeding, or service: the ritual of the dead.

Ceremony, on the other hand, is defined somewhat differently in the same context:

2. a formal religious or sacred observance; a solemn rite: a marriage ceremony<sup>1</sup>.

Essentially, the difference between the two is that a ritual consists of the necessary instructions for performing a ceremony, whereas a ceremony refers to a specific performance of a given ritual. As I see it, this implies that ceremonial magicians perform pre-existing magical rituals, while ritual magicians write, develop, and test their own magical forms. This distinction is analogous to that found in my own professional field of software development. The ceremonial magician can be thought of as an end-user who runs applications, whereas the ritual magician is akin to a programmer who writes them.

Ceremonial magicians generally work from grimoires, adhering as closely as possible to the ritual as specified in the text. Two recent books<sup>2</sup> have suggested that this ceremonial approach is superior to more eclectic modern ritual methods because the grimoires of the Medieval period that date before about 1350 represent a living tradition of magical practice and in effect represent a “lost art” that can only be restored by practicing from the original source materials. Whether or not this is true the aspiring ceremonial magician faces with a significant problem — many of these texts are incomplete at best and after being copied from master to student for centuries have accumulated numerous errors. In some cases modern scholars have been able to reconstruct a likely version of the original text, but in other cases this task has simply proved to be too difficult.

What ceremonial magicians really need is a set of lab notes, or if you will, the “source code” for the old grimoires themselves. While we must jump forward two hundred and twenty-some years from the 1350 cutoff in order to find Dee and Kelley’s Enochian system, it is quite literally the only example we have of a complex magical system where the original transcripts of the spiritual operations that led to its creation are still available. This leads to a lot of controversy among practitioners and scholars, but the material is also a goldmine for magicians everywhere — the original building blocks of the system are laid out for study in their original context. This system is also by most accounts particularly effective, and in fact enjoys a fearsome reputation among even those magicians who practice the modern form of the system that was modified and elaborated upon by the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn and later by Aleister Crowley.

The “Heptarchia Mystica” represents the only portion of the Enochian system that was ever assembled into something resembling a workable grimoire. Despite this, many magicians contend that the spirits of the Heptarchia are “inaccessible” or difficult to conjure. I have found that this is true to some extent when working with the “Heptarchia Mystica” as written, since Dee assembled it for his own use and included few details regarding his opening and closing procedures which he presumably knew by heart. Furthermore, incorporating certain portions of Dee’s later and more widely-used Enochian material seems to enhance the effectiveness of Heptarchial rituals, as do certain ceremonial forms drawn from modern magical practices. These have been included, as the purpose of this book is to present the most effective possible system of Heptarchial magick.

Chapter 2 A Brief History

Most of the material in this chapter can be found in other books covering the history of Enochian magick in greater detail. As this book is a practical manual, this section is merely an outline of this unique magical system's rich history and background.

John Dee and Edward Kelley

Dr. John Dee, England's most famous Renaissance magician compiled the spirit diaries. They cover a period from 1581 to 1588 and detail his magical operations in which he attempted to enter into communication with the divine. The vast majority of these magical operations were undertaken with the help of Edward Kelley, a scryer who was able to see and hear the spiritual beings conjured by Dee into a shewstone, or crystal. Apparently Dee was one of the first magicians to make use of this technique, and it has permeated our popular culture — even in children's stories, magicians and fortune-tellers use crystal balls to see into the spirit world. Over the course of seven years, various Angels appeared to Dee and Kelly and began teaching them a new system of magick that is today referred to as Enochian, after the biblical patriarch Enoch who “walked with God” following the flood of Noah and was privy to the secrets of the divine world. In his diaries, Dee makes mention of his desire to communicate with God in the same manner in order to obtain the secrets of the natural world, and notes that the shewstone was given to him by the same archangel Uriel who is said to have instructed the Biblical Enoch. At one time a stone believed to be the original shewstone was kept with the Dee collection at the British museum, but it was recently stolen and has not been seen since.

Some sources have described Kelley in a rather unfavorable light, painting him as a charlatan who essentially conned the pious and gullible Dee into believing that he could communicate with spirits. As far as I can tell, the argument that Kelley made the whole thing up is not very tenable. The system appears to be far too comprehensive and consistent for such a thing to be possible without some sort of “mystery grimoire” from which he could have read back memorized sections over time. Various modern occultists have advanced or advocated this theory from time to time, but it can be easily debunked by the fact that no such grimoire or anything similar to it has ever been found to exist. Despite incorporating some elements that appear to have been common to several Renaissance grimoires, the Enochian system is original enough in its structure and use of symbols that it appears to be a unique creation. It is clear that Kelley was instrumental in some way to the creation of the system — from looking at the fragments that have survived of Dee’s work with Barnabus Saul, the scryer who worked with Dee prior to Kelley, it is clear that it was not until Kelley’s arrival that Dee’s magical operations produced anything especially profound. Furthermore, after Kelley’s departure in 1588, no records of any significant magical operations performed by Dee have surfaced, although Dee did continue his diaries working with other scryers and a few later fragments of fairly pointless spirit communications survive.

From the historical record, it is clear that both Dee and Kelley share the credit for the success of the magical operations that produced the Enochian system, and as far as I can tell, most modern skeptics are unable to come up with anything more plausible than the story as explained in the spirit diaries themselves — that Dee conjured the spirits into the crystal and Kelley communicated with them as they taught the Enochian system of magick. It is a real testament to the genius of the system that it has survived to this day in myriad forms taught by various magical orders and organizations.

Meric Causaubon

The first publication of any portion of the spirit diaries was "A True and Faithful Relation of What Passed of Many Years Between Dr. John Dee and Some Spirits", edited by Meric Causaubon, in 1659. Causaubon was not an occultist and had no interest in preserving Dee and Kelly's work. He published this portion of the diaries to show that "minions of the Devil" could mislead even a man as intelligent and pious as John Dee. Clearly by this reasoning, the average uneducated person ought not attempt direct communion with the divine and instead seek wisdom from the church. At the same time, however, Causaubon indulged in a bit of tabloid-style promotion of his book, cautioning readers that the volume could be considered "a work of darkness," which of course aroused the curiosity of the public. Regardless of Causaubon's motives, he did play an important role in preserving the spirit diaries for modern occultists, and would perhaps be scandalized that this has become his only real contribution to history.

Elias Ashmole:

Another figure who played a prominent role in the survival of the original documents that comprise the spirit diaries is Elias Ashmole. Ashmole was a contemporary and friend of Meric Causaubon's, but unlike Causaubon he was a noted esotericist and likely a magician of some sort. I suspect that he encouraged Causaubon to publish the spirit diaries, not to debunk Dee's work but to preserve the diaries for posterity. Ashmole obtained the original copy of the diaries in an unusual manner, which is described in his preface to Dee's "Mysteriorum Liber Primus". Briefly, the documents had been hidden in a secret drawer in a cedar chest that had belonged to Dee. The chest was sold to a Mr. Jones, who eventually discovered the drawer after hearing something rattling around inside the chest. According to the account, approximately half of the papers were lost "under Pyes and other like uses," though it is important to note that few gaps of any significant size can be found in the portion of the diaries relating to Dee and Kelly's operations. The papers were taken out of the house during the great fire of London, which the chest itself did not survive. Following Mr. Jones' death, his wife went on to marry Thomas Wale, a friend of Ashmole's. Wale traded the diaries to Ashmole in exchange for a copy of a book entitled "The Institution, Lawes & Ceremonies of the Most Noble Order of the Garter" in 1672. Ashmole preserved the originals and also made additional copies of the diaries, all of which currently reside in the British Museum.

"Dr. Rudd" and the Treatise on Angel Magic:

This late seventeenth-century book was supposedly written by a "Dr. Rudd," though most scholars credit it to one Peter Smart, who was an occultist of the period and most likely used Rudd as a pen name. It is significant to the Enochian system only because of the influence it has had on later occultists including the members of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. It is a synthetic work that brings together various schools of magic and attempts to cross-reference them to each other, usually in a fairly obvious manner along planetary and elemental lines. The book takes many liberties with the Enochian material, such as attributing the signs of Geomancy to the sixteen sub-quadrants of the Watchtowers along elemental lines, and attributing Goetic demons to the seven Ensigns of Creation along planetary and zodiacal lines. This is an interesting book from a historical standpoint, in that it clearly demonstrates the eclectic nature of the various schools of Angelic magic at the time of its publication, but its Enochian scholarship is highly questionable.

The Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn:

The first known modern magical order to teach a system incorporating Enochian elements was the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, founded by Dr. Wynn Wescott, Dr. William Woodman, and Samuel L. MacGregor Mathers in England in the year 1887. Israel Regardie published the once secret Golden Dawn teachings in 1937, resulting in the Golden Dawn system becoming one of the most popular systems of ritual magick ever practiced. In fact, many magicians immediately associate Enochian magick with the Golden Dawn, and the version of Enochian taught by that order has become a sort of de facto standard in the magical community. This is not necessarily a bad thing, except that it is important not to lose sight of the fact that the Golden Dawn system is not Enochian magick as taught by the Angels to Dee and Kelly. It is a modern synthesis of many traditions and systems, only one of which is found in the Enochian material.

Aleister Crowley:

The English magician Aleister Crowley is another figure who is often associated with the Enochian system in modern times. Demonized by the press of his day, Crowley has been represented at various times as an evil sorcerer, a Satanist, and “the wickedest man in the world.” The first published biography of Crowley, John Symonds’ “The Great Beast”, drew heavily from the popular press and as such served to perpetuate many of the bizarre and inaccurate claims made regarding Crowley during his lifetime. To some extent, Crowley seemed to relish media attention and often gave his critics just enough information to ensure they would assume the worst, though his reputation has suffered among the general public and many occultists as a result. Crowley began his magical career as a Golden Dawn initiate and borrowed heavily from the teachings of that order in his own magical work, so the Enochian system he worked with is more a “dialect” of the Golden Dawn system than his own creation. According to his “Confessions”, one of Crowley’s regrets was that he had never managed to publish a comprehensive and correct version of the work of Dee and Kelly, which implies that he was aware of the shortcomings of the Golden Dawn material that he did publish in “The Equinox”.

Crowley’s most impressive piece of work on the Enochian system is “The Vision and the Voice”, in which he details visions of the thirty Aires, or Aethyrs, regions of the magical universe that span from the material realm to that of divine source. This is a brilliant, visionary work that highlights Crowley’s remarkable scrying abilities; at one point he claimed to be the reincarnation of Edward Kelley. In fact, “The Vision and the Voice” contains material that is much more true to the original system of Enochian magick than any of the earlier Golden Dawn embellishments, and I think a very good argument can be put forth that Crowley was really in contact with the same entities as were Dee and Kelley. Much of the material in “The Vision and the Voice” influenced Crowley’s ideas concerning his own religion/philosophy of Thelema, and there are many parallels between modern Thelemic magick and the original Enochian system. While the original system is very Christian in character, as a Thelemite I have nonetheless had much success working with the system along the original lines with a few modifications to the prayers and conjurations.

Neither Crowley nor the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn worked extensively with the spirits of the "Heptarchia Mystica", but rather focused on working with the spirits of the Great Table, which map to the four quarters of the universe known as "watchtowers" in modern parlance, and the Aires. Most modern Golden Dawn and Thelemic magicians do the same, which I believe is why the heptarchial Kings and Princes are often ignored or passed over. The objective of this book is to inspire more magicians to work with these particular entities, as they are quite effective at producing practical magical results and inhabit realms that are relatively unexplored compared to those of other Enochian entities. Diligent performance of the rituals found in this book will enable you to join in this ongoing magical research that seeks to uncover and utilize the power of this remarkable grimoire.

Chapter 3 Source Material

There is a fair amount of debate among scholars concerning the actual origins of the Enochian system. The system is original in many ways, but it is far from completely unique.

It incorporates many elements that are similar to those found in other grimoires and texts of magick that were available in the sixteenth century. This is especially true of the mystic heptarchy, which shares a number of common features with other planetary grimoires of the time. Certain of these works are mentioned explicitly within the text of the spirit diaries themselves, and those are the works on which I have focused in my search for influences upon the Enochian system. In addition, it is likely that Dee had copies of most of the grimoires that were in print during his lifetime, since his library at Mortlake was one of the finest in Europe and magick was an area of special interest to him.

Three Books of Occult Philosophy*, by Henry Cornelius Agrippa:

These three books comprise the defining work on the state of magical philosophy in the early sixteenth century. Many of the attributions it details are still used by modern magicians today. The most widely available edition of the “Three Books” is edited by Donald Tyson and is available from Llewellyn.

Agrippa’s Fourth Book of Occult Philosophy:

There is some debate over whether or not the Fourth Book was actually written by Agrippa himself. It was denounced as a fraud shortly after its publication by one of Agrippa’s students in 1567, but some debate still continues concerning its authorship. Regardless of its true origin, the Fourth Book expounds a system of magick based on the symbols and ideas contained in the “Three Books”, which contain much source material but no formal ritual practices. Llewellyn published an edition of the “Fourth Book”, also edited by Donald Tyson, in 2009.

The Sworn Book of Honorius:

This book is a fairly conventional grimoire from the Medieval or Renaissance period. It contains a seal that is remarkably similar to John Dee’s Sigillum Dei Aemeth — the lineal figures are identical, but the names written on it are different than those written on the Enochian version. In this case, we need not speculate on the nature of this influence. According to the spirit diaries, the angels directed Dee to the seal in this book and explained that it was the form that was to be used in the construction of the Sigillum, and then proceeded to communicate the correct names that were to be written upon it.

The Steganographia, by Trithemius:

Trithemius was a Hermetic magician and philosopher of the early sixteenth century who is believed to have been Agrippa’s teacher, so it is likely that he worked with the system that is detailed in Agrippa’s “Three Books”. He also wrote several books of his own, including the fascinating “Steganographia”. This book is, on the surface, a conventional grimoire that resembles many of the others in publication, but it also contains an intricate system of cryptography. There is in effect an entire second book encoded within the text of the grimoire itself.

Apparently Trithemius originated the idea of a secure socket layer long before computer technology existed. His idea was to encrypt a message that he wished to send using the system outlined in the “Streganographia” and then summon a spirit, give it the encrypted message, and send it to another magician far away who knew the key to the cipher. This individual would then receive the message from the spirit and decrypt it, with the decryption itself serving as a sort of checksum that proved the message was genuine. It was a far cry from today’s secure Internet servers, but the basic idea is the same. There is no word on whether or not the technique worked since none of Trithemius’ experimental notes have ever been found.

The Almadel:

There is no reference in the spirit diaries to the “Almadel”, another of the grimoires that was in print in the early sixteenth century, but there are many similarities between the system detailed in this book and the mystic heptarchy. The system described in the “Almadel” uses a “Table of Art,” a square table with a large hexagram in the center reminiscent of the Enochian Holy Table, and contains lists of planetary spirits that are called on specific days of the week, just like the Kings and Princes of the “Heptarchia Mystica”.

While you can perform perfectly satisfactory Enochian rituals using just the ritual template in this book and the accompanying texts, there are a number of excellent works available on the Enochian system that go into more detail regarding how and why all of the components are assembled the way they are, why the temple is set up the way it is, how the various conjurations were received, and so forth. John Dee and Edward Kelley have interesting stories of their own above and beyond the seven years they spent detailing their angelic communications, and understanding their motivations will give you greater insight into the way that everything fits together. The following are books that I have enjoyed and recommend as part of a thorough course of Enochian studies.

“Enochian Vision Magick” by Lon Milo DuQuette. Published by Red Wheel/Weiser. Lon DuQuette works using the Golden Dawn/Crowley system and covers how to use it later in the book, but his analysis of the Enochian temple furniture and implements is superb. His opening procedure for Enochian rituals also adapts easily to originalist work, and he does a good job explaining some of the changes and additions made to the Enochian system by the Golden Dawn and Aleister Crowley.

“John Dee’s Five Books of Mystery”, edited by Joseph H. Peterson. Published by Red Wheel/Weiser. This book includes the sections of Dee’s spirit diaries that describe the angels of the “Heptarchia Mystica” and which detail most of the Enochian temple furniture. Joseph Peterson is an excellent Enochian scholar and this is the best available edition of the source material. Peterson is also the creator of the artwork depicting the Enochian temple implements that is reproduced in this book.

“Enochian Evocation” by Geoffrey James, published by Heptangle. The original Heptangle edition is out of print, but a facsimile of the book was published as “The Enochian Magick of Dr. John Dee” by Llewellyn and it is currently available under the original title from Red Wheel/Weiser. All three editions are the same in terms of content, and I’m not sure why Llewellyn decided to change the title when they published their edition.

“The Hieroglyphic Monad (Monas Hieroglyphica)” by John Dee. The current edition is published by Kessinger and available in both English and the original Latin. This work is not directly related to the Enochian material, but it gives a good overview of Dee’s ideas about symbols and sacred geometry.

These three are currently out of print, but they contain a lot of good material if you can find them.

“A True and Faithful Relation of What Passed for Many Years Between Dr. John Dee and Some Spirits” by Meric Casaubon. Facsimile edition published by Magickal Childe.

“The Heptarchia Mystica of John Dee”, edited by Robert Turner. Published by Aquarian Press.

“Elizabethan Magic: The Art and the Magus” by Robert Turner. Published by Element.

While you need not delve into the inner workings or history of the Enochian system in order to get good magical results, in my experience after a few successful workings most magicians generally develop an interest in doing so.

Chapter 4 The Angelic Language

One of the defining characteristics of the Enochian system that sets it apart from other magical systems is that it includes a unique language described as the language of the Angels. Dee and Kelly were told that this was the language spoken by humanity prior to Adam and Eve's expulsion from the Garden of Eden. Dee's notes show that this language consists of twenty-one letters, though as is the case with English some letters can have multiple sounds. Notably, the letter called Gon (I) can be pronounced with a long E vowel sound or a consonant Y, and the letter called Van (V) can be pronounced as a U vowel or consonant V. The letter called Ceph (Z) is sometimes, though not always, pronounced as the syllable "zod," and sometimes as the consonant Z. Otherwise, Dee's pronunciation notes show that most of the words are pronounced as though written in English. This is true of all the spirit names found in the "Heptarchia Mystica" as well as the language found in the recitations known as the Angelic Keys or Calls, which will be discussed in Chapter 9.

A quick glance through the Angelic text of the Keys reveals that the words are occasionally difficult to pronounce aloud because as many as three or four consonants are strung together in places. The Golden Dawn solution to this “problem” was to insert extra vowel sounds between the consonants. Using this system, the beginning of the First Key, which is written “OL SONF VORSG GOHO IAD BALT,” would be pronounced “ola sonuf vaoresagi goho iada balata” instead of according to Dee’s notes, which show that the line is pronounced pretty much as written. I personally prefer the original pronunciation to the longer and more elaborate Golden Dawn pronunciation, and in this case I am a great believer in remaining true to the historical record even when working with Golden Dawn-style Enochian. I do occasionally insert Golden Dawn vowel sounds when pronouncing Angelic words and names, but only between consonant groups that produce a clear glottal stop.

Furthermore, I have found that the more you speak Angelic the easier it becomes to pronounce the words as written. For example, take the word VORSG from the example in the previous paragraph. SG is a sound that does not commonly occur in English, and it seems even more tongue-twisting with the R added to it. One tends to naturally say it as “VORSAG” or “VORSUG,” adding an additional syllable between the S and G in much the same way as the Golden Dawn system recommends. However, try saying VORSK. This seems much easier to pronounce because RSK does exist in English and we native speakers are more familiar with it. To say VORSG as written, just replace the K sound with a hard G sound and practice a bit. You will find that while RSG is less familiar it is actually no more difficult to pronounce than RSK. Most of the apparently difficult sounds in the Angelic language can be sounded out in similar ways. In addition, regardless of what the “correct” pronunciation might or might not be, Lon Milo DuQuette makes the good point that as long as you are making a real attempt to speak the language of the angels they should take an interest in you and respond. He uses the analogy that if a mouse were to hop up on a chair and start speaking English you would pay attention, even if it spoke with a thick accent that was hard to understand<sup>1</sup>.

Aaron Leitch, author of “Secrets of the Magical Grimoires”, has recently come out with his own set of pronunciation notes for the Angelic language, and while for the most part his interpretation of Dee's pronunciation notes is reasonably good there are a couple of glaring problems with it. First of all, there is very little evidence supporting his contention that Angelic letters are ever pronounced by just saying the name of the English letter. I first came across this idea in Leo Vinci's now out of print Enochian dictionary "Gmicalzoma" and concluded that it made little sense even back then. For example, in the First Key Leitch contends that DS should be pronounced "dee-es" rather than the more natural "des" or "das" and that CA should be pronounced "see-ay" rather than the obvious "kah." He also contends that NAZPSAD be pronounced "nays-pee-sad" rather than the obvious "nahz-psad" on the grounds that P and S don't combine, so you should just say "pee" for the middle syllable of the word. PS actually combines fine phonetically and is not hard to pronounce; as with SG in the VORSG example, English speakers just are not used to it because it is not a common sound in our language. Try it a few times and you will see what I mean.

While I will say that Leitch should be commended for working off Dee's pronunciation notes rather than the Golden Dawn pronunciation, there are a number of other examples in his lexicon that are questionable at best. He contends that VORSG be pronounced "vorzh" even though the final G is clearly present in Dee's pronunciation notes, that POAMAL should be pronounced "poh-mal" rather than "poh-ah-mal" even though both the O and A appear in Dee's pronunciation notes, and that CICLE should be pronounced "sii-kayl" rather than "kee-kleh" based on the usage of LE in several other unrelated Angelic words. This last idea starts to drift into the same territory as Geoffrey James' attempts in "Enochian Evocation" to "correct" the Angelic Keys by resolving what he saw as inconsistencies in the language, when we as non-native Angelic speakers do not necessarily know which sounds should be consistent with each other. Imagine if somebody decided to go through the English language and correct the inconsistencies between different pronunciation of "ough" — through, enough, bough, thorough, and so forth. Who is to say that Angelic is any more regular?

While Dee's notes are sufficiently ambiguous that some of Leitch's pronunciations could very well be more correct than mine, his claims that his version is the first in history to follow the proper principles and that all other scholars working on the pronunciation of the Angelic Keys have “passed over Dee’s phonetic notations in silence”<sup>2</sup> should not be taken at face value, especially the latter statement. Geoffrey James published the pronunciation notes themselves in “Enochian Evocation” as far back as 1983, Lon Milo DuQuette referred to them in “Angels, Demons, and Gods of the New Millenium” in 1997 and of course in his latest book on the subject, 2008’s “Enochian Vision Magick”, and even David Griffin, head of one of the Golden Dawn lineages, referred to them in “The Ritual Magic Manual” published in 1999. In fact, in the late 1990’s there was something of a movement among Enochian authors to implement Dee’s pronunciation notes in place of the system used by the Golden Dawn, and it surprises me that any Enochian scholar could remain unaware of these publications while studying the system in any detail. Furthermore, just about every online article about Angelic pronunciation at least touches on Dee’s notes, and this has been the case for many years.

This table shows the twenty-one Angelic letters along with their names, English equivalents, and sounds.

While most of the tables of letters that are drawn in the spirit diaries are shown with English letters, I use the Angelic characters shown on Table 3 whenever possible for building actual temple implements. The Angelic characters are sigils of a sort in their own right that embody the energy of each letter. In this sense, each name can be viewed as a collection of forces. Treating these names as collections of sigils is also useful in the making of talismans, which is discussed in more detail in the chapter on ritual techniques. One of the oddities of the Angelic alphabet is that the name of each letter does not necessarily bear any relation to its sound. This is relevant to the use of letters as sigils since I have found in my own ritual work that these sounds can be used as mantras to call upon the pure force of each letter. However, the individual characteristics of these forces have proved elusive to classify in any concrete or systematic manner. Such attributions are not described in any way in the Spirit Diaries themselves.

There have been many systems of attributions proposed for the Angelic alphabet. The earliest such system that I am aware of is found in Rudd's aforementioned "Treatise on Angel Magic". The system Rudd proposed attributed sixteen of the Angelic letters to the signs of geomancy, and this formed the basis of the later Golden Dawn system of Enochian gematria, or numerology. I have also seen several attempts to relate the Angelic alphabet to the Hebrew alphabet, though this immediately brings up the problem that there is an extra Hebrew letter that must be accounted for. From the standpoint of Qabalistic magick, it would be very desirable to do this because once any alphabet can be mapped to its Hebrew equivalent it can be linked into centuries of Hermetic attributions including the Tree of Life and the Tarot.

I was originally excited by Geoffrey James' publication of one of Dee's versions of the handwritten Angelic alphabet that showed 22 letters, like Hebrew, with the consonant Y as the 22nd letter instead of an alternate pronunciation of the vowel I.<sup>3</sup> However, this does not correspond to the version of the alphabet communicated to Dee and Kelly during their actual operations. It appears to be either a mistake or an attempt by Dee himself to syncretize the Angelic alphabet with Hebrew. The following table shows the Qabalistic attributions determined by the Golden Dawn with Crowley's later additions drawn from "The Vision and the Voice". This system leaves many of the paths empty and doubles up several of the letters, which presents problems for magicians trying to work with the Enochian attributions of the Tree of Life.

Table 3 Angelic Alphabet with Attributions

Crowley often used this technique to convert English words into their Hebrew equivalents, and the same will work for the Angelic alphabet. Dee and Kelly were told that Angelic language was in some sense the precursor to Hebrew, so doing this is not much of a deviation from the original revelation. It is not a direct one-to-one correspondence, but it is relatively straightforward. Note that the “English” given for the Hebrew is approximate and simplified, and does not really do justice to the complexity of the Hebrew language in which many of these letters have multiple correct pronunciations depending upon their usage.

While musing on the attributions of the letters is a bit of a departure from the practical mission of this book, working with Enochian gematria of whatever sort is a good way to become more familiar with the letters and the possible relationships between them. One good way to test a spirit that you have summoned is to ask for a word or number, and then later go back to a reference like Crowley’s “Sephir Sephiroth”<sup>4</sup> or a more recent work like “Godwin’s Cabalistic Encyclopedia”<sup>5</sup> and see if the number or the valuation of the word corresponds with ideas related to the spirit’s supposed nature.

Chapter 5 The Enochian Temple

*H*eptarchial operations are performed using a complex set of temple implements that are detailed in John Dee's "Five Books of Mystery". Many modern magicians contend that Enochian magical operations can be worked without any special implements at all, and I will admit that I did so on occasion when I was first exploring the system and some of those workings were indeed successful. However, as I find my magical results significantly improved by the addition of the various temple pieces I highly recommend their use. Furthermore, I have found that much of the "scary" reputation that the Enochian system has acquired over the years seems to be related to people working it without any of the equipment. The next time someone tells you a horror story about a friend or acquaintance who had terrible things happen to them after an Enochian ritual, ask if the person in question even wore an Enochian ring, let alone used the full temple setup. If the story is true, the answer will likely be no.

The angels of the Enochian system are generally accommodating in nature and thus they will tend to adapt themselves to the temple arrangement into which they are summoned. Because of this, your collection of equipment need not be absolutely complete or perfect in order to work with the system, but I have found that the more you have, the better your results become. It is better to have more pieces even if you have to compromise a bit on materials — the ring, for example, is supposed to be made from gold and that is quite an expensive proposition. While a gold ring will certainly produce the best results, I have found that substitute materials such as brass still work reasonably well as long as they have some sort of solar affinity.

The Enochian Ring:

For the proper working of Enochian magick, the Magician must wear a ring inscribed with a specific arrangement of shapes and letters as shown below. The Angels told Dee and Kelly that this was the ring used by Solomon to work miracles, although this seems historically unlikely since the letters appear to be those of the English alphabet. I have used a ring with the English characters for many years with good results, and this is the form that most Enochian magicians who wear rings use, but it may be that the letters are supposed to be transcribed into Angelic to obtain the “true” ring.

The notes on the session in which the design of the ring was obtained are not very helpful; they simply include an illustration by Dee showing the design with Latin characters, whereas the Lamem, shown later in the text, includes diagrams in both the Latin and Angelic alphabets.

The letters on the four corners, taken clockwise from the upper left, form the name PELE, which is mentioned in a book that we know Dee worked with because he refers to it in the spirit diaries themselves — Henry Cornelius Agrippa’s “Three Books of Occult Philosophy:”

...and in the book of Judges, the Lord saith, my name which is Pele which signifieth with us, a worker of miracles, or causing wonders.<sup>1</sup>

The ring is supposed to be made from pure gold, but for financial reasons I have used rings made from other less expensive metals over the years. My first ring was made of silver and suffered an odd fate. After about a year of doing Enochian rituals every week or so, a portion of the band seemed to actually physically disintegrate to the point where a metal-smith friend of mine pronounced it too badly damaged to be worth repairing. According to him, there were micro-fractures all around the band and the ring looked as though it had been pounded on repeatedly with a hammer. As a result, I do not recommend silver for the ring, unless the band is very thick and strong. A friend of mine also has a silver ring with a much thicker band, but oddly enough at some point over the last few years it broke in the same place despite lasting quite a bit longer than mine.

My next ring had a thicker band and was made from a brass. This ring lasted much longer than the silver one and is still intact. Both of those rings seemed to work fine with the Enochian system, so my conclusion is that gold is not an absolute requirement. However, according to the original sources, the use of a ring is absolutely required. The Angels told Dee and Kelly when describing the ring, "Without this, thou shalt do nothing."<sup>2</sup> I have read several books on the system which have understated the importance of the ring, and one which discusses using an "astral ring," which is among the silliest things I have ever heard on this topic. To work the system you will want to use an actual physical ring. Since it does not absolutely need to be of gold, the expense need not be a prohibitive one — make it out of shiny gold cardboard from a craft store if you must, but be sure to wear it. The ring must be worn when doing any sort of Enochian ritual, and in fact I wear mine most of the time.

The addition of the V and L to the letters of PELE may be related to some of Aleister Crowley's Thelemic writings, in that the letters P, V, E, E, L, and L, when transliterated into Hebrew gematria, sum to 156 (Pe = 80, Vav = 6, Heh = 5, Heh = 5, Lamed = 30 and Lamed = 30). 156 is also the numeration of the goddess Babalon (Beth = 2, Aleph = 1, Beth = 2, Aleph = 1, Lamed = 30, Ayin = 70, and Nun = 50), who Crowley attributes to Binah, the sphere of Saturn, on the Tree of Life. BABALON is also a word in the Angelic language meaning “to the wicked,” which may allude to Saturn’s role as a malefic influence in astrology. This relationship also shows up in the “Heptarchia Mystica”, in which BNAPSEN, the King attributed to Saturn, explains that through his power the magician may cast out the power of all wicked spirits and may know the doings and practices of evil men.

PELE is actually spelled Peh Lamed Aleph in Hebrew, for a total of 111, which gives different symbolism than the value of the four-letter form. The four-letter form, though, makes the name more similar in structure to the Tetragrammaton, YHVH, and changes the gematria of the transliterated name to 120, which has some interesting numerical properties of its own. 120 can be broken down as  $2 * 6 * 10$ . 2 corresponds to Chockmah, the sphere of the Zodiac; 6 is Tiphareth, the sphere of the Sun; and 10 is Malkuth, the sphere of the elements. Since the Sun is often used to represent planetary energies as a whole, the number 120 can be viewed as a union of elemental, planetary, and zodiac forces, the basic building blocks of the western magical tradition and of the Enochian system.

The circle with a single horizontal line running across it is surprisingly not a symbol that appears in any of the medieval grimoires that Dee was known to possess. It is similar to the alchemical symbol for salt, except that in that symbol the line is contained completely within the circle. Visually, it looks similar to a crude representation of the planet Saturn, which may be related to the symbolism of Babalon mentioned above. Perhaps, though, the best explanation of it can be found in Dee’s own writing, the “Monas Hieroglyphica”:

THEOREM I

It is by the straight line and the circle that the first and most simple example and representation of all things may be demonstrated, whether such things be either non-existent or merely hidden under Nature’s veils.<sup>3</sup>

3. John Dee, The Hieroglyphic Monad (York Beach, ME: Red Wheel/Weiser, 2000), 9.

Since gold is the metal associated with the sun, I think a case can be made that the ring represents a combination of the energies of the Sun and those of Saturn. There is a reference to a ring attributed to the Sun or Saturn in Agrippa's "Fourth Book of Occult Philosophy", which was published only a few years before Dee began his scrying experiments:

But he that is willing always and readily to receive the oracles of a dream, let him make unto himself a ring of the sun or of Saturn for this purpose.<sup>4</sup>

Dee's goal from the beginning was communication with the Angels, which "the Oracles of a Dream" would clearly accomplish, and this appears to have been his primary motive in practicing magick. Perhaps Dee, Kelley, or the Angels themselves decided to do the "Fourth Book" one better and create a ring that combined the energies of these two planetary intelligences.

I recently re-read the original communications regarding the ring and noticed something interesting that may undermine the possible BABALON association, but which opens up another possible set of attributions. The angels did not tell Dee to put a letter V and a letter L on the circle, but "a thing like a V with an L below."<sup>5</sup> They added that the ring had four letters on it, PELE. So perhaps the V and L are not letters but shapes. The V could represent an angle of 60 degrees while the L could represent an angle of 90 degrees. A 60 degree angle is the angle of a triangle when extended into a figure, and the angle of 90 degrees is the angle of a square when extended in the same manner. One of the oddities on the Qabalistic Tree of Life is that there is no path connecting the sphere of Saturn, Binah, with that of Jupiter, Chesed, resulting in the division between the upper three spheres and the lower seven that is referred to as the Abyss. The number of Binah is 3 and that of Chesed is 4, so linking the angle of a triangle to that of a square could geometrically symbolize the opening of the missing path that might allow the divine light to descend more efficiently and cross the boundary between the potential and actual universes.

The Lamen:

Like the ring, the lamen should also be worn when performing Enochian rituals. There are two versions of the lamen; according to the Angels, the first was said to have been given by an “illuding spirit”<sup>6</sup> and is not part of the Enochian system. It is similar in form to some goetic symbols, and in that regard appears to more closely resemble sigils from other medieval grimoires than it does the symbols found in the Enochian material.

The “True” lamen presented to Dee and Kelly later looks much more like an Enochian device. It is made up of a grid of Angelic characters arranged in a particular order.

The lamen was supposed to be drawn on parchment, which in those days referred to paper made from animal hide. My original lamen was made from white tagboard, with the Angelic characters on one side and English characters on the other. I went on to construct the lamen I currently use later, which is a brass plate with the Angelic characters engraved on one side. Both are worn around the neck on a cord or chain such that they hang over the chest, covering the anahata chakra or heart center.

The Robe:

According to the spirit diaries, the robe worn when working with the Enochian system should be white, unadorned, and, if possible, made from linen. I use a simple white linen tau-shaped robe, which conforms exactly to the text, but was expensive to make and is rather scratchy. I have also used robes made from other natural fibers such as cotton, which are easy to procure and less expensive, with good results. The plain white robe is described in several of the medieval grimoires and represents purity and holiness, which is why it is simple and unadorned.

The Holy Table:

The Holy Table is the centerpiece of an Enochian temple. The Angels specified that it should be approximately three feet square with legs of the same height, and made from “sweet wood.” One writer, Geoffrey James, has suggested cedar,<sup>7</sup> which was sometimes referred to as “sweet” during the period in question. On the top of the Table is painted a set of lineal figures and Angelic characters in yellow. A likely influence on this design can be found in the “Almadel”, which makes use of a square table with a large hexagram in the center, although the design uses Hebrew characters and also incorporates four pentagrams at the corners.

The Holy Table represents Tiphareth, the sphere of the Sun on the Tree of Life, as can be easily ascertained from Hermetic Qabalistic attributions. Yellow is the color of Tiphareth, and the hexagram, which is prominently displayed in the center of the table, is its lineal figure. These attributions are still in use among ritual magicians today and can be found in Agrippa’s “Three Books of Occult Philosophy”. Also, the Table occupies the center of an Enochian temple, and Tiphareth is the central sphere on the Tree of Life.

One of the difficulties in constructing a working table is that some of the figures in Meric Causaubon’s “True and Faithful Relation” are inverted right to left. While the letters of the table itself are switched, other diagrams that appear in the same image are not inverted or reversed. This suggests that the reversal was either a deliberate blind on the part of Causaubon to keep magicians from using the system effectively or a serious error on the part of the printer. For whatever

Not being a great woodworker, my Holy Table is just a tabletop. It is a three-foot square piece of high-grade red oak plywood, trimmed with decorative molding and finished with mahogany-tinted tung oil. I used bright yellow acrylic paint for the diagrams and characters, which produces a nice luminous effect by candlelight in contrast to the darker wood. My attempts to add legs that could be easily removed failed miserably and resulted in a Table that could barely stand, so I finally gave up and found a table of about the right size to serve as a base for the tabletop. Removable legs are useful should you ever want to put a very heavy object, or even a person, onto the Table for some specific ritual purpose, because once they are removed the tabletop can be placed directly on the floor of the temple.

The Sigillum Dei Aemeth:

The image is large to show the detail and on its own page to facilitate photocopying. The asterisk below the Y/14 square near the bottom of the diagram indicates that some experts believe the number in the square should be 15 rather than 14.

The Sigillum Dei Aemeth ("True Seal of God") is a pantacle, or disk, that is placed in the center of the Holy Table. It should be nine inches in diameter and made from pure wax, though paraffin may be an acceptable modern substitute. The top bears the design at left (fig. 4), which may be easier to cast in some fashion than manually engrave into the wax due to its complexity.

The bottom, on the other hand, bears the design shown below, which is much simpler and not at all difficult to engrave by hand. Mine was originally cast without it, so I manually cut the design into the back of my Sigillum as part of the consecration ritual. I have yet to see a Sigillum for sale anywhere that has a properly engraved bottom, so if you buy one somewhere be aware that you will probably have to cut or engrave the design on the back side yourself.

Figure 5.
Bottom of Sigillum Dei Aemeth.
It is sized to match the previous diagram, again for photocopying purposes.

Exotic materials aside, one way to construct your own Sigillum right now is to photocopy both sides out of this book and paste them together or onto something like a wooden or cardboard disk. The result is not as impressive as a full-sized wax pantacle, but it should prove serviceable. You could also melt down some wax in a cake pan or kettle of the right size to form it into a disk and then glue the photocopied top and bottom onto it.

Colin Campbell has recently published a book entitled "The Magic Seal of Dr. John Dee" in which he puts forth the idea that Dee made several errors in constructing what has become the standard representation of the Sigillum.<sup>8</sup> I attended a lecture by Campbell in 2009 in which he explained what those errors were and how they could be rectified in order to make the device more effective than it already is. While I usually find that new hypotheses about the Enochian system are full of speculation, especially when they contradict the original Dee material, I was very impressed with Campbell's research and his rationale for concluding that a more correct version of the Sigillum could indeed be constructed. As a result I highly recommend that you pick up and read through Campbell's book, especially if you are planning on carving your own wax Sigillum rather than copying the one shown here.

Dee noted regarding the Sigillum Dei Aemeth that "Oute of this Circle shall no creature pass."<sup>9</sup> What I have found in ritual is that the Table amplifies and collects magical energy and the Sigillum contains it. The basic form of the Sigillum is that of a pentagram, symbolizing the elemental or microcosmic world, surrounded by a heptagram, symbolizing the action of the seven ancient planets and the macrocosmic world. Various Angelic names can be extracted from the outer ring, though the names of these Angels do not appear to figure prominently in the Enochian Conjurations or Invocations. These names, their complex method of extraction, and their deep and multifaceted symbolism are fully explained in Lon Milo DuQuette's "Enochian Vision Magick", and rather than expounding all of them here I instead direct you to DuQuette's work which is the most excellent and complete expostulation of the Sigillum that I have ever come across.<sup>10</sup>

In addition to the primary Sigillum that occupies the center of the Holy Table, smaller copies of it, four and a half inches in diameter, should be placed under each of the Tables's four legs. As my Table lacks permanent legs I generally omit this portion of the temple setup, but my suspicion is that if your construction skills are superior to mine you will find that having them adds to the effectiveness of the temple setup.

Smaller images of the top and bottom are shown here, again for photocopying purposes. They can be constructed in the same manner as the larger version.

The Ensigns of Creation:

The Ensigns of Creation are seven talismans that are placed on the Holy Table surrounding the Sigillum Dei Aemeth. They were originally supposed to be made from purified tin, but later Dee and Kelly were told to paint them onto the table itself using blue for the lines and red for the characters and letters. My compromise solution is tagboard; I like being able to have separate talismans that can be removed and used as planetary talismans for rituals that do not require the table, but at the same time tin can be difficult to procure and work with. The seven Ensigns are arranged evenly around the Sigillum Dei Aemeth as shown here.

The attribution of each Ensign can be inferred from the wheel of the mystical heptarchy; considering their number as well as their placement on the Table and their close association with the Heptarchial Angels, it is clear that the Ensigns are planetary in nature. By comparing the position of each planet on the wheel to the location of each Ensign the following attributions can be determined. The images of the Ensigns shown here can be photocopied, just like those of the Sigillum.

On my own Holy Table, I sometimes augment the Ensigns by placing a candle of the color of each planet as found in Aleister Crowley's "Liber 777" on top of the appropriate Ensign. There is no real justification for this in the Dee and Kelly material itself, but I find it to be useful for keeping in mind which planet occupies which position on the Table.

The Shewstone:

Dee and Kelly used a Shewstone, or scrying crystal much like the fairy-tale "crystal ball," to communicate with the Enochian angels. The stone was placed in the center of the Holy Table, on top of the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, and Kelly, a scryer, then concentrated on the stone and would see visions of the Angels, who instructed him in the workings of the Enochian system. It is in this manner that virtually all of the Enochian source material was received. Dee's obsession with scrying and communication has been picked up by many modern practitioners of Enochian magick, and from reading some accounts one might be led to think that this is all the system is good for. In fact, the Enochian system is also an incredibly powerful system of practical magick and you do not need to be able to scry well in order to cast practical spells that are likely to work.

The center of the Holy Table, directly above the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, is the focal point of any ritual involving the Table. Dee and Kelly were primarily interested in obtaining knowledge of the Enochian system itself via communication with the Angels, so for the most part their rituals used the shewstone as the central focus of all their work. In Enochian sorcery, you will want to use a variety of objects. I use candles fairly often, normally of a color related by Qabalistic attributions to the intended result of the ritual. I have also used crystals, and for healing rituals I often set the table on the floor of the temple and have them sit within the Table itself holding Sigillum. Also, if you are empowering a talisman or other magical implement the object that is to receive the charge should be used as the focus.

In effect, the Sigillum acts much like the triangle used in Goetic operations. It is a microcosm of the universe that the magician can control by summoning spirits such as the heptarchial angels into the area directly above it. In order to cast spells at a distant target you will want to place a magical link such as a photograph onto the Sigillum along with the candle or any other additional focus. The use of magical links in this manner is a basic practical technique, and relies on the two primary laws of sympathetic magick, Contagion and Similarity. A contagion link is created when two objects come into contact, and a similarity link is created between two objects that resemble one another. In a ritual context, then, one may represent the other. For example, let's say that you were casting a healing spell on someone not present in the temple. If you have a photograph of the person you can place it in the center of the Sigillum and then the angel you summon will be able to affect him or her through the link.

The Cloth:

The Sigillum, Ensigns, and Holy Table should be covered with a cloth of either red silk or "changeable red and green silk," presumably some sort of double-weave. Dee recommends both in different places in the diaries and as far as I can tell either will work. Most modern magicians who assemble temples use red cloth and there is some flexibility in terms of material. Silk, which Dee was directed to use, is best but natural fibers of whatever sort such as cotton will also work. Something as simple as a small red blanket could work for this purpose. The design drawn by Dee shows tassels on the corners of the cloth, but keep in mind that the cloth should not be large enough for the cloth or tassels to reach the floor.

The Carpet:

The floor under the Holy Table should likewise be covered with a red carpet also made from silk. It is possible to find oriental-style rugs made from red silk, and though they are expensive they are just about the best solution to the problem. You can also use something like a sheet of red fabric or a red blanket, but make sure that you can walk comfortably around the Holy Table without disturbing the carpet too much or tripping over it. This is a case where it probably is better to work without the carpet than to try and make do with light fabric that could easily distract you in the middle of reading the Keys or Conjurations.

The Book:

Dee was told to make a book containing all of the prayers, invocations, and conjurations that he and Kelley received so that he could read the various texts in ritual. In this, at least, your task is already done, at least for those involving the spirits of the Heptarchia Mystica — you're holding that book in your hands right now. The ritual template in the next chapter contains all of the necessary page references to flip back and forth between the appropriate texts for any sort of operation supported in the system in order to work with the system, but I have found that the more you have, the better your results become. It is better to have more pieces even if you have to compromise a bit on materials — the ring, for example, is supposed to be made from gold and that is quite an expensive proposition. While a gold ring will certainly produce the best results, I have found that substitute materials such as brass still work reasonably well as long as they have some sort of solar affinity.

Chapter 6 Heptarchial Ritual Temple

*I*t is my intention that you as an aspiring magician should be able to pick up this book and begin working magick right away. Some authors are more cautious than I am in this regard, but in my experience much of that fear comes from the thoroughly outdated magical paradigms of previous centuries. Magick was once thought to be dangerous, not just to the practitioner's soul but also to everyone around him or her. It was believed that this was because magick was ruled by demonic forces that looked for any opportunity to get out of hand and wreak havoc. In addition, the power of magick was thought to be related to secrecy, in that hidden knowledge was considered to be more powerful than public knowledge. It was thus believed that the exposure of magical techniques would undermine their efficacy.

Both of these ideas are fundamentally incorrect. The first is rooted in the paranoid worldview of the medieval church that gave rise to the Inquisition and witchcraft trials, and the second has restricted magical development for over a thousand years. Today we finally can see how the rise of the Internet and related communications technology contribute to the growth of magical ideas rather than sapping their strength. Practiced properly, magick is both a science and an art — not a hard science like physics, but maybe a soft one like psychology in its early days. Magicians keep journals of their practices, carefully noting their successes and failures, and whenever possible conduct empirical experiments to test their progress. If enough working magicians were to share their results, the resulting knowledge base would allow for more formal research into the nature of magical powers and might even allow us to duplicate magical effects using some sort of technology.

There is a third class of argument against jumping in and doing magick right away that I find particularly annoying, and that is the person who claims that you are somehow “degrading the art” by using it for practical purposes. These people are generally either profoundly unsuccessful people who treat their poverty like a badge of office, trust fund kids who have never really needed to work at making a living, or simply individuals who want to feel spiritually superior without doing any work. The whole point of this argument is either to justify what on the outside looks like failure, or to keep the person making it from being exposed as an inferior practitioner with delusions of grandeur. The bottom line is that there is nothing virtuous about suffering, and there is nothing wrong with using magical powers to set up your life so that you are richer, happier, and more successful. Even from a purely theurgic point of view a stress-free life contributes positively to the successful pursuit of spiritual illumination. You can spend a bunch of time meditating to lower your stress, or you can set up your Enochian temple and conjure away the root of the problem. Better still, you can do both.

Finally, the most vehement opposition to magical practice usually comes from professional skeptics. I have no problem with people who are genuinely skeptical and based on their own experience have found little use for spiritual practice in their own lives. However, there is a certain species of skeptic who delights in debunking any phenomenon that lies beyond the controlled experimentation of the scientific method, even going so far on occasion as to dishonestly rig the game in their favor. Such people see magick as at best a waste of time, and at worst a hopeless and outdated superstition, leading them to ridiculously insist that astrology columns in newspapers, or television programs about the paranormal will, inevitably lead to the burning of accused witches in modern America. Such skeptics do perform valuable services such as exposing confidence artists masquerading as magicians, but I also find them irrationally closed-minded about any phenomenon that is uncommon or outside what they consider normal experiences. My advice to anyone who is interested in magick but finds skeptical arguments compelling? Try it and see for yourself if it works, and never let a good debater talk you into denying your own experiences.

The angels made it clear to Dee and Kelley that much of the Enochian material was intended to be read from the book, so the entire ritual text does not necessarily need to be memorized by the aspiring Enochian magician. The ritual templates in this chapter incorporate ideas from my own professional field of software development and are technical documents that will allow you to perform Enochian rituals right out of this book. Simply start at the beginning and work your way through, flipping to the appropriate page as instructed. It is useful to get bookmarks of some sort that you can use to mark the template along with the other sections of text that you will be reciting for each ritual that you perform. Having used other less organized books for this purpose, I have found that this technique makes rituals flow much more smoothly than having to scan through page numbers between the various ritual sections.

This template uses the standard Enochian temple setup detailed in Chapter 4, which you should assemble to the best of your ability including as many elements as you can practically incorporate. Wear the Enochian ring, lamen, and white robe. Place the focus of your spell in the center of the Sigillum on top of the cloth so that it is visible. You will begin the ritual standing to the west of the Holy Table facing east, and the Table should be oriented in such a way that with the cloth off you can read the letters on it right side up. When working these rituals you always face the Holy Table when performing the Keys and conjurations, so that when you are casting to the east you should stand to the west of the Table, when casting south you should stand to the north of the Table, and so forth.

Note that the template marks a number of the steps as “optional.” These consist of modern ceremonial forms and procedural modifications such as the use of the First and Second Angelic Keys, none of which are drawn from the text of the “Heptarchia Mystica”. I have found that in my own work these additions profoundly enhance the effectiveness of the heptarchial system, but at the same time I understand that they may not be appealing to magicians who would rather work with the old grimoires as written. Such magicians should feel free to skip these optional steps.

I. Heptarchia Mystica Ritual Template

0. Preparation

Set up the Enochian temple to the best of your ability as described in Chapter 5. Wear the Enochian ring, robe, and lamen. Stand to the west of the Holy Table facing east.

1A. Opening the Temple — Ceremonial (optional)

- A. Perform the banishing AOEVEAE pentagram ritual (page 67). Alternatively, you may open the temple with the Golden Dawn Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram or Aleister Crowley’s Star Ruby.
- B. If you intend your ritual to have a macrocosmic effect that extends beyond the psychological realm, perform the invoking MADRIAX hexagram ritual (page 70). Alternatively, if you opened with the LBRP you should perform the Lesser Invoking Ritual of the Hexagram, or if you opened with the Star Ruby you should perform the Star Sapphire. The combination of a banishing pentagram ritual and an invoking hexagram ritual forms an operant field as explained in Chapter 6.

1B. Opening the Temple — Devotional

Perform the Prayer of Enoch (page 76). This prayer may be performed on its own to open the temple, or it may follow the ceremonial opening performed as step 1A.

2. The Preliminary Invocation

A. Perform the NAZ OLPIRT energy work exercise (optional) (page 82).

B. Perform the original or revised Oration to God (page 85).

3. The Opening Keys (optional)

A. For an evocation, intone the First Key in Angelic followed by English. (page 92).

B. For an invocation, intone the Second Key in Angelic followed by English (page 93).

C. For a ritual including both evocatory and invocatory elements, perform the First Key (page 92) followed by the Second Key (page 93). If you are working with another person like Dee and Kelley did, with one person acting as magician and the other as scryer, the magician should read the First Key followed by the scryer reading the Second Key.

4. Tuning the Space

A. Your ritual should be scheduled so that it is being performed on the appropriate day and during the proper planetary hour as explained in Chapter 10.

B. Perform the Greater Ritual of the Hexagram corresponding to the King or Prince that you are evoking as shown in Chapter 10 (optional). Note that the planetary attribution will match that of the day for the Kings, but will be different for the Princes. Also, this ritual should only be performed here if the temple was opened using the ceremonial method.

5. The Conjuration

Place the appropriate talisman for the King or Prince on the floor and stand upon it. Then intone the appropriate conjuration based on the following table.

| Day of the Week | King    | Conjuration | Prince  | Conjuration |
|-----------------|---------|-------------|---------|-------------|
| (Any)           | Carmara | Page 124    | Hagonel | Page 133    |
| Sunday          | Bobogel | Page 125    | Bornogo | Page 134    |
| Monday          | Blumaza | Page 126    | Bralges | Page 135    |
| Tuesday         | Babalel | Page 127    | Befafes | Page 136    |
| Wednesday       | Bnaspol | Page 128    | Blisdon | Page 137    |
| Thursday        | Bynepor | Page 129    | Butmono | Page 138    |

Table 4. The Kings and Princes

6. The Charge to the Spirit

Deliver the Charge to the spirit or spirits that you have personally composed according the instructions given in Chapter 12 (page 143).

7. Closing the Temple

- A. Perform the License to Depart (page 152).
- B. For rituals opened using the ceremonial method, conclude the MADRIAX (page 70) and AOEVEAE (page 67). Alternatively, if the ritual was opened with the Golden Dawn Lesser Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram, perform the Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram for a ritual that has only an external target or the Qabalistic Cross by itself for a ritual that is intended to affect the magician exclusively or both the magician and an external target. For the Star Ruby/Star Sapphire the same rules apply — close with either the Star Ruby or that ritual's form of the Qabalistic Cross depending upon the ritual's target.
- C. Declare the temple closed. The ritual is now complete.

Chapter 7 Opening the Temple

The most basic ceremonial opening forms used by modern magicians are the Lesser Ritual of the Pentagram and Lesser Ritual of the Hexagram that originated with the magicians of the Golden Dawn tradition. The original rituals that I have included in this chapter can be used in a similar manner, and have the added advantage that they are truly Enochian rituals tailored for the Enochian system. I will, however, make a quick mention of a correction to what is usually taught as the proper way to perform these two rituals because this correction informs the design of my Enochian opening rituals. Pentagram and hexagram rituals can be performed as either banishing or invoking rituals. Most teachers will tell you that you should open and close your rituals with the Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram followed by the Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Hexagram. In fact, this combination of rituals does not work well for most magical operations, and I am unsure whether it represents a deliberate misrepresentation or a corruption of the original Golden Dawn rituals.

I started researching the Golden Dawn ritual forms many years ago and was confused by how little material was available on the invoking versions of these rituals and when they should be used. In Aleister Crowley's "Liber O vel Manus et Sagittae" I found it curious that he covered the Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram followed by an explanation of the Lesser Invoking Ritual of the Hexagram. I went ahead and decided to try this combination despite all of the recommendations against it, and was absolutely blown away by my results — all of a sudden my practical magical work got a whole lot better. I set up a number of objective probability tests and, sure enough, the LBRP/LIRH was amazing. I could not get anywhere near the same level of effectiveness with the LBRP/LBRH. When I discovered this I asked around the magical community and, sure enough, most of the magicians who I knew who were able to get good results using the Golden Dawn forms had figured out the same thing.

So what could be going on here? My best guess is that most modern writers do not understand how to use these two rituals correctly, and this may even be the reason that many traditional grimoire practitioners argue that the Golden Dawn methods do not work, or at least do not work well. The Lesser Ritual of the Pentagram represents the psychological realm or microcosm and the Lesser Ritual of the Hexagram represents the physical realm or macrocosm. Together the rituals set up a space in which the relationship between microcosm and macrocosm is defined. I refer to this space as a Field. The four combinations of the banishing and invoking forms of the two rituals set up four different fields that correspond to specific classes of magical operations.

Banishing Field (LBRP/LBRH):

This is how most magicians begin their rituals when working with the Golden Dawn forms. It is, in effect, the "full shutdown" — it clears mental and spiritual forms from both the interior and exterior worlds. It can be used to completely cleanse a temple, banish spirits permanently, or neutralize a magical effect that is targeting the magician. What it also does, though, is shut down any ongoing spells that the magician has running unless they are bound to talismans or some anchor other than the magician's personal consciousness. If you are casting a spell that you want to work over the next week, do not end the ritual with this combination under any set of circumstances unless you're convinced you made a mistake and want to stop the spell. The effect that you just set in motion will be negated the minute that the banishing field goes up.

Invoking Field (LIRP/LIRH):

This combination energizes all ongoing magical effects, and can be used to begin a ritual that you want to operate in both the interior and exterior worlds. A good example of this is a spell to get a good job. You want the spell to affect your psyche in such a way that you seem more confident and capable, but you also want it to shift probabilities in the material world so that the right opportunity will come your way.

Centering Field (LIRP/LBRH):

This combination sets up a field in which the interior world is engaged while influences from the exterior world are neutralized. This field is ideal for exclusively psychological magical work of all sorts.

Operant Field (LBRP/LIRH):

This field clears the interior world and then merges it with the exterior world, setting up a space in which thought more easily becomes material reality. All of the energy of a spell cast within this field is targeted on the macrocosm and the resulting probability shifts show that magick done this way just influences the outside world better — significantly better.

Of these four the operant field is the primary field that you should be using when working with Enochian sorcery, and as a result this is the field that is set up when you follow the instructions in the template. You should always banish before you invoke, and thus the centering and invoking fields should be preceded by an initial LBRP. This makes their use somewhat more cumbersome, since the sequence you wind up with is LBRP/LIRP/LIRH and LBRP/LIRB/LBRH.

The Lesser Ritual of the Pentagram:

This ritual can be found in just about any introductory book on ritual magick, particularly those covering the Golden Dawn and Thelemic traditions. While I am including the text of the ritual and some brief notations here for the sake of completeness, if you are a beginning magician you should do some additional research regarding how to do the visualizations, vibrations, breathing, and so forth correctly.<sup>1</sup> It should be committed to memory rather than read out of this book or any other.

1. Stand facing east. With the thumb of your right hand touch your forehead and intone ATEH (ah-TAY). Then trace down the center of your body to your genital area and intone MALKUTH (mal-KOOT), trace back up to the center of your chest then over to your right shoulder and intone VE GEBURAH (VAY geh-boo-RAH), then trace across to your left shoulder and intone VE GEDULAH (VAY geh-doo-LAH). Finally, clasp your hands over the center of your chest and intone LE OLAHM, AMEN (LAY oh-LAHM, ah-MEN). This first section is called the Qabalistic Cross and can be performed on its own as a basic centering exercise. As you trace, visualize a cross of glowing white brilliance forming over your body, representing the Qabalistic Tree of Life.

*Figure 15.
Banishing Pentagram of Earth*

*Figure 16.
Invoking Pentagram of Earth*

2. In the east, trace the appropriate Pentagram of Earth and vibrate YHVH (yah-WAY or Yod Heh Vav Heh). The pentagram should be visualized as formed from living fire.

---

1. One of the most popular introductory books of all time on Golden Dawn magick is Donald Michael Kraig's Modern Magick (St. Paul, MN: Llewellyn, 2010), originally published in 1988 and now in its third edition. Kraig is a good writer and covers a lot of material. However, his method of teaching certain rituals such as the Lesser Hexagram differs substantially from mine. He teaches that you should open every ritual with both the LBRP and LBRH – the banishing field – which in my experience substantially limits your magical power. If you decide to study his book and like his reasoning go ahead and see if his method works better for you, but my suspicion is that it will not. In terms of what modern GD orders teach, his method is much more standard than mine, but the experimentation that I've done comparing them is quite extensive and my field method always comes out ahead in terms of practical results.

3. Turn to the south. Trace the appropriate Pentagram of Earth and vibrate ADNI (ah-doh-NYE).
4. Turn to the west. Trace the appropriate Pentagram of Earth and vibrate AHIH (eh-hi-YAY).
5. Turn to the north. Trace the appropriate Pentagram of Earth and vibrate AGLA (ah-guh-LAH).
6. Return to face the east. Extend your arms in the form of a cross and intone:

Before me RAPHAEL (rah-fay-EL),
Behind me GABRIEL (gah-bree-EL),
On my right hand MICHAEL (mee-kye-EL),
On my left hand URIEL<sup>2</sup> (oo-ree-EL).
For about me flames the pentagram,
And in the column stands the six-rayed star.

As you vibrate the name of each Archangel visualize the appropriate figure standing in the corresponding direction. Raphael in the east wears a yellow robe and holds a caduceus wand, Gabriel in the west wears a blue robe and holds a chalice, Michael in the south wears a red robe and holds a flaming sword, and Uriel in the north wears a black robe and holds a scythe.

For the final two lines, you first visualize a pentagram forming over your body and then on the last line visualize yourself standing within a vertical hexagonal pillar of light inscribed with a hexagram. For the pentagram visualization, imagine yourself as Leonardo Da Vinci's Vitruvian Man with an upright pentagram inscribing the circle in the drawing. For the hexagram visualization, imagine your entire body within a round column of light extending from floor to ceiling and beyond. The hexagram then inscribes the cross-section of the pillar at a right angle relative to the vertical plane of the pentagram.

7. Repeat step 1, the Qabalistic Cross.

2. Most magical orders teach the final Archangel name as AURIEL rather than URIEL. I like to use the latter name for Enochian operations because John Dee notes URIEL as the fourth Archangel rather than AURIEL.

The Lesser Ritual of the Hexagram:

Like the Lesser Ritual of the Pentagram, this ritual can be found in most introductory books on Golden Dawn and Thelemic magick. As with the Lesser Ritual of the Pentagram you will want to commit it to memory. Also, before using this ritual you will want to do some additional research above and beyond the instructions given here if you are unfamiliar with it. The main pitfall to watch out for is authors who teach that you should open or close rituals using only the banishing form. As I mentioned at the beginning of this chapter, this method will greatly undermine your ability to work effective magick.

1. Stand facing east following the performance of the Lesser Ritual of the Pentagram. Intone the following:

*INRI – Yod Nun Resh Yod.
Virgo, Isis, mighty mother,
Scorpio, Apophis, destroyer,
Sol, Osiris, slain and risen,
Isis, Apophis, Osiris, IAO.*

This section is called the Keyword Analysis.

2. Give the Sign of Osiris Slain, extending both arms in the form of a cross. Say:

Osiris slain!<sup>3</sup>

Then give the Sign of the Mourning of Isis. With open hands bend both elbows at 90 degree angles, raising the right forearm to point up and dropping the left forearm to point down. The right palm should be up and facing forward and the left should be down and facing backwards. Turn slightly to your left and look down. Say:

The Mourning of Isis!

Then give the Sign of Apophis and Typhon, raising both arms straight above your head and holding them apart at an angle of about sixty degrees. The wrists should be straight, the hands open, and the palms toward each other. Say:

3. The traditional Golden Dawn teaching regarding the first four statements in this section is to add "The Sign of" to the beginning of each. In practice I find this to be choppy and awkward, so when using this ritual I perform it as shown here.

Then give the Sign of Osiris Risen. Cross your arms on your chest, left over right, like an Egyptian mummy. The hands should be open with your right palm on your left shoulder and your left palm on your right shoulder. Say:

Osiris risen!

Repeat the Sign of Osiris Slain and say:

L – V – X – LUX.

Repeat the Sign of Osiris Risen and say:

The light of the Cross.

This section is called the Signs of LVX.

- Trace the appropriate Hexagram of Fire in the east as you vibrate ARARITA. The two upward triangles should be visualized in red.

The Star Ruby and Star Sapphire:

Rather than the Golden Dawn ritual forms, Thelemic magicians may prefer to use the Star Ruby, Aleister Crowley's improved version of the Lesser Ritual of the Pentagram, and the Star Sapphire, which corresponds to the Ritual of the Hexagram. These rituals are not included here but can be found in Crowley's works<sup>4</sup> and also in popular treatments such as Lon Milo Duquette's "The Magick of Aleister Crowley".<sup>5</sup> As the Star Ruby is a banishing ritual and the Star Sapphire is an invoking ritual, together they form an operant field just like the LBRP/LIRH combination.

AOEVEAE (“Stars”) Pentagram Ritual:

To replace the Golden Dawn Lesser Ritual of the Pentagram I have developed an Enochian pentagram ritual that I call the AOEVEAE (a-o-i-ve-ah-EH – “stars” in Angelic). A number of writers have come up with Enochian pentagram rituals of this sort and they all share certain similarities. It is pretty clear that the most logical names to use when tracing the pentagrams are the threefold names of God from Dee and Kelley’s Great Table (ORO IBAH AOZPI, MPH ARSL GAIOL, OIP TEAA PDOCE, and MOR DIAL HCTGA) and the most logical equivalents to the Archangels are the Kings of the four directions (BATAIVAH, RAAGIOSL, EDLPRNAA, and ICZHIHAL).

Instead of trying to reproduce the Qabalistic Cross like many authors do, I instead begin and end my version of the ritual by tracing the figure of the pentagram across my body accompanied by names from the central cross portion of the Great Table, known to modern magicians as the Tablet of Union. To me this action embodies the statement in the Lesser Ritual of the Pentagram “About me flames the Pentagram.” The ritual begins with the Invoking Pentagram of Active Spirit and ends with the Invoking Pentagram of Passive Spirit, setting up the two basic polarities of the subtle body.

When attributing the names to the directions I use the directional arrangement from the 1587 Tabula Recensa.<sup>6</sup> The text shown here may be adapted to fit the traditional Golden Dawn arrangement of the Great Table by swapping the names associated with the west and south, so that you vibrate OIP TEAA PDOCE in the south and MPH ARSL GAIOL in the west, and swap the directions attributed to RAAGIOSL and EDLPRNAA when calling the Kings.

Start the ritual by standing in the center of your temple facing east, or to the west of the altar facing east if the Holy Table is present. Wear the Enochian PELE ring. If you wish to use a magical weapon, a dagger is probably the most appropriate for the banishing form while a wand is best for the invoking form, but keep in mind that this is a modern practice and Dee and Kelley used neither. The ritual text follows:

1. With your finger or magical weapon, trace from your left hip to your right shoulder while vibrating NANTA

*Figure 25.
Banishing Pentagram of Earth*

2. In the east, trace the Banishing Pentagram of Earth while vibrating ORO IBAH AOZPI. The pentagrams should be visualized as formed from burning flames and as vividly as possible.
3. Turn to the north. In the north, trace the Banishing Pentagram of Earth while vibrating MOR DIAL HCTGA (MOR DI-al hek-TGA).
4. Turn to the west. In the west, trace the Banishing Pentagram of Earth while vibrating OIP TEAA PDOCE (o-IP TE-ah-ah PDO-ke).
5. Turn to the south. In the south, trace the Banishing Pentagram of Earth while vibrating MPH ARSL GAIOL (MEH-peh AR-sal ga-i-OL).
6. Turn back to face the east. Extend your arms to form a cross and vibrate:

RAAS I BATAIVAH

(“In the East is BATAIVAH” — ba-ta-i-VAH),

SOBOLN I EDLPRNAA

(“In the West is EDLPRNAA” — ed-el-per-na-AH),

BABAGE I RAAGIOSL

(“In the South is RAAGIOSL” — ra-AH-gi-oh-sal),

LUCAL I ICZHIHAL

(“In the North is ICZHIHAL” — ik-zod-hi-HAL).

7. Make one full spin counter-clockwise while vibrating:

MICMA AO COMSELH AOIVEAE

(“Behold the Circle of Stars”

— MIK-ma AH-o KOM-seh-lah a-o-i-ve-a-EH)

Then clasp your hands over your heart while vibrating:

OD OL, MALPRG, NOTHOA

(“And I, a Through-Thrusting Fire, in the Midst.”

— OD OL, MAL-perg, NOT-ho-ah).

If you are using this ritual in conjunction with the MADRIAX hexagram ritual which follows, it should be inserted here.

8. With your finger or magical weapon, trace from your right hip to your left shoulder while vibrating EHNB, from your left shoulder to your right shoulder while vibrating BITOM, from your right shoulder to left hip while vibrating EXARP, from your left hip to your forehead while vibrating HCOMA, and finally from your forehead back to your right hip while vibrating NANTA. Then clasp your hands over your heart and vibrate IAIDA. Visualize the pentagram traced over your body in dark, deep purple.

*Figure 26.
Invoking Pentagram of Earth*

This is the banishing form of the ritual. The invoking form is the same except that the pentagrams should be the Invoking Pentagram of Earth.

In the invoking form, the directional names remain the same but they should be traced to the quarters in clockwise rather than counter-clockwise order. Also, the final spin should be counter-clockwise to align with your initial clockwise rotation.

MADRIAX (“O Ye Heavens”) Hexagram Ritual:

To replace the Golden Dawn Lesser Ritual of the Hexagram, I have developed an Enochian hexagram ritual that I call the MADRIAX (“o ye heavens” in Angelic). This ritual has been in development for a long time. I published the original version on the Internet in 2000, and a number of different web sites have archived that version. The 2000 version of this ritual has a number of issues, though I will say that I was still able to get pretty good results with it for a number of years. I’ve recently rethought various aspects that I think will make it work a lot better based on my ritual findings.

One of the biggest changes is the use of the unicursal hexagram,

Figure 27.

Unicursal Hexagram with Hyperbola

which I have found to work well with the Lesser Ritual of the Hexagram as well. A while back I came across an article by Michael Sanborn<sup>7</sup> that was published on the Internet suggesting that the unicursal hexagram represents the mathematical structure of a hyperbola. In this figure the two rounded curves represent the hyperbola and show how the unicursal hexagram can be mapped onto the figure.

Sanborn goes on to explain that he feels the unicursal hexagram is more elemental than planetary. I will go further — I think that the unicursal hexagram specifically represents the macrocosmic aspect of the elements where they start to “bleed” into the planetary realm. The hyperbola is an excellent representation of the microcosm and macrocosm with one side of the curve representing “above” and the other “below.” Overlap the two, as in the unicursal hexagram, and there you have it — an operant field.

Aleister Crowley outlined the elemental associations of the unicursal hexagram in The Book of Thoth. What you do is map the figure onto the Tree of Life centered on Tiphareth, so the upper point on the left side is Fire (Geburah, Mars), the upper point on the right side is Water (Chesed, Jupiter), the lower point on the left side is Air (Hod, Mercury) and the lower point on the right side is Earth (Netzach, Venus). As far as tracing the figure goes for each element, I have adapted the basic Golden Dawn principle that for elemental figures you trace toward the associated point to invoke and away from the associated point to banish. In addition, in keeping with the hyperbola association, you always trace to or away from the top or bottom point. The invoking form may be thought of as bringing the two curves into an overlapping position, while the banishing form may be thought of as separating them back into the normal hyperbola configuration.

7. Michael Sanborn, The Unicursal Hexagram as Hyperbola (Retrieved 7/5/2011 from <http://web.archive.org/web/20040721114312/http://www.xnoubis.org/unicursal.html>).

In this revised ritual the four elements are attributed to the four quadrants of the Great Table based on the colors from Kelley's original vision of the Watchtowers<sup>8</sup> and the elemental attributions taken from the later "round house" vision<sup>9</sup>. The names vibrated are those of the Kings from the "Heptarchia Mystica":

Fire = East = BABALEL (Mars)

Air = South = BNASPOL (Mercury)

Water = West = BYNEPOR (Jupiter)

Earth = North = BALIGON (Venus)

If you wish to modify this ritual so as to conform to the zodiacal scheme used in the Golden Dawn Lesser Ritual of the Hexagram you should change these attributions as follows:

Fire = East = BABALEL (Mars)

Earth = South = BALIGON (Venus)

Air = West = BNASPOL (Mercury)

Water = North = BYNEPOR (Jupiter)

The use of planetary names with the elemental unicursal hexagram represents the union of the planetary and elemental realms, the microcosm and macrocosm. The "above" and "below" points of the ritual are then attributed to BNAPSEN (Saturn) and BLUMAZA (Luna). The figures traced for these points are the usual planetary hexagrams, not the unicursal. When working with the Holy Table the figures form a column running from the heavens to the earth with the hexagram on the Holy Table itself at its midpoint.

The final figure used in this ritual is attributed to BOBOGEL (the Sun). It is combined with the invoking unicursal hexagram of Earth to symbolize the invocation and grounding of the solar force. The ritual text is as follows:

1. With your finger or a tool such as a wand trace the Invoking Unicursal Hexagram of Earth over yourself

while vibrating BOBOGEL (BO-bo-gel). This tracing is done in the following manner: forehead -> left hip -> right shoulder -> genitals -> left shoulder -> right hip -> forehead. This hexagram is visualized in yellow-gold as opposed to the green that is normally used for elemental earth. It is always traced in the invoking form, even for the banishing form of the ritual.

2. In the east, trace the invoking unicursal hexagram of Fire in red as you vibrate BABALEL (BA-ba-lel).

3. In the south, trace the invoking unicursal hexagram of Air in white as you vibrate BNASPOL (BNAS-pol).

4. In the west, trace the invoking unicursal hexagram of Water in green as you vibrate BYNEPOR (BY-neh-por).

5. In the north, trace the invoking unicursal hexagram of Earth in black as you vibrate BALIGON (BA-li-gon).

6. Above you, trace the invoking hexagram of Saturn in bright lavender as you vibrate BNAPSEN (BNAP-sen).

7. Below you, trace the invoking hexagram of the Moon in deep violet as you vibrate BLUMAZA (blu-MA-zah).

8. Extend your arms and make one full clockwise rotation (or circumambulation of the temple if you are using the Holy Table) as you vibrate

TA CALZ I OROCHA

(TA CAL-zod I o-RO-ka

— “as above the firmament so beneath you”

(probably the best Enochian rendering of “as above, so below”.) Then clasp your hands over your heart for a moment and hold the full visualization of the rite in your mind.

9. For the invoking form of this ritual, hold your hands in front of you with the palms facing outwards and then separate them as though opening a heavy curtain as you vibrate

MADRIAX CARMARA, YOLCAM LONSHI

(MA-dri-ax kar-MA-ra, YOL-cam LON-shi

— “o ye heavens of Carmara, bring forth power”.

Carmara is the eighth Hepharchial King who rules over the other seven.

10. The ritual work for which you opened the field goes here.
11. At the conclusion of the ritual work, hold your hands in front of you and to either side with palms facing inwards, and then bring them together as though closing a heavy curtain as you vibrate

MADRIAX CARMARA, ADRPAN LONSHI

(MA-dri-ax kar-MA-ra, AH-dra-pan LON-shi

— “o ye heavens of Carmara, cast down power”.

This is the invoking form of the ritual. For the banishing form, you would turn to each direction going in a counter-clockwise order (East -> North -> West -> South -> East), trace banishing hexagrams (aside from the opening Earth hexagram which should always be the invoking form), and make the final rotation/circumambulation counter-clockwise.

This ritual works with the AOIVEAE to open and close magical fields just like the Lesser Ritual of the Pentagram/Lesser Ritual of the Hexagram combinations. However, they are designed slightly differently from the other similar rituals found in the tradition in order to streamline magical operations. The main innovation I wanted to incorporate was to encapsulate my workings within both rituals rather than repeating either of them to close down a rite. As a result, the basic structure works like this.

- A. AOIVEAE steps 1 to 7.
- B. MADRIAX steps 1-9.
- C. MADRIAX step 10 is the heptarchial ritual itself.
- D. MADRIAX step 11.
- E. AOIVEAE step 8.

So according to this structure (A) and (B) are the opening, (C) is the ritual work itself, and (D) and (E) constitute the closing. It's an elegant way of doing the ceremonial forms and it is quite fast and efficient once you have the rituals and this structure memorized and get some practice working with it.

The main reason that I developed these rituals was, first of all, to streamline Enochian evocations, and second of all, because I like the idea of matching your ceremonial forms to the magical system that you are using. For Qabalistic rituals I use the LRP/LRH and for Thelemic rituals I use the Star Ruby/Star Sapphire, so I wanted something similar that was directly related to my Enochian work. Truth be told, you can do Enochian work with the Qabalistic or Thelemic rituals, but at least for me matching up the opening rituals to the system works better in terms of objective results.

Devotional Opening Prayers:

While the ceremonial openings have worked well for me over the years, traditional grimoire practitioners may instead want to open the temple in the same manner as Dee and Kelley did when they initially worked with the angels. This devotional method involved a series of prayers directed to the Christian God imploring Him to bless Dee and Kelley that they may enter into communication with the Angels. In addition, even if the temple is opened with ceremonial forms it often works well to add a prayer or devotional element immediately after opening a magical field. The resulting field seems to be more stable and effective, and a devotional element also sets the proper mindset of aspiration leading into the preliminary invocation.

My opinion on Enochian magick and religion is that the two most valid sets of published source material that document genuine angelic conversations and experiences are the Dee diaries themselves and Aleister Crowley's "The Vision and the Voice". As a result, I believe the two religious and philosophical schemas that are most compatible with Enochian work are Hermetic Christianity and Thelema. Dee was a pious adherent of the former system, and Crowley was the founder and prophet of the latter. While this does not necessarily mean that, for example, a Neo-Pagan should expect to encounter difficulties working Enochian magick, what I will say is that if the prayers shown here are used to open the temple they should be made sincerely. In particular, someone who does not believe in the Christian God should not be using Christian prayers. Depending on the circumstances, it may be appropriate for the magician who wishes to use devotional prayers to write his or her own heartfelt devotions and then probability-test the resulting operations to see how well those prayers work.

The Prayer of Enoch:

This prayer was given to Dee and Kelley by the angel Ave on July 7th of 1584 in Krakow.<sup>10</sup> It is the essential devotional prayer used to open the Enochian temple.

Lord God the Fountain of true wisdom, thou that openest the secrets thy own self unto man, thou knowest mine imperfection and my inward darknesse:

10. Meric Casaubon, True and Faithful Relation (New York, NY: Magickal Child, 1992), 196-197.

How can I (therefore) speak unto them that speak not after the voice of man; or worthily call on thy name, considering that my imagination is variable and fruitlesse, and unknown to myself? Shall the Sands seem to invite the Mountains: or can the small Rivers entertain the wonderful and unknown waves? Can the vessel of fear, fragility, or that is of a determined proportion, lift up himself, heave up his hands, or gather the Sun into his bosom?

Lord it cannot be: Lord my imperfection is great: Lord I am lesse than sand: Lord, thy good Angels and Creatures excell me far: our proportion is not alike; our sense agreeth not: Notwithstanding I am comforted; For that we have all one God, all one beginning from thee, that we respect thee a Creatour: Therefore will I call upon thy name, and in thee, I will become mighty. Thou shalt light me, and I will become a Seer; I will see thy Creatures, and will magnifie thee amongst them.

Those that come unto thee have the same gate, and through the same gate, descend, such as thou sendest. Behold, I offer my house, my labour, my heart and soul, If it will please thy Angels to dwell with me, and I with them; to rejoyce with me, that I may rejoyce with them; to minister unto me, that I may magnifie thy name. Then, lo the Tables (which I have provided, and according to thy will, prepared) I offer unto thee, and unto thy holy Angels, desiring them, in and through thy holy names; That as thou art their light, and comfortest them, so they, in thee will be my light and comfort.

Lord they prescribe not laws unto thee, so it is not meet that I prescribe laws unto them; What it pleaseth thee to offer, they receive; So what it pleaseth them to offer unto me, will I also receive. Behold I say (O Lord) If I shall call upon them in thy name, Be it unto me in mercy, as unto the servant of the Highest. Let them also manifest unto me, How, by what words, and at what time, I shall call them. O Lord, Is there any that measure the heavens, that is mortal? How, therefore, can the heavens enter into mans imagination? Thy creatures are the Glory of thy countenance; Hereby thou glorifiest all things, which Glory excelleth and (O Lord) is far above my understanding.

It is great wisdom, to speak and talke according to understanding with Kings; But to command Kings by a subjected commandment, is not wisdom, unlesse it come from thee. Behold Lord, How shall I therefore ascend into the heavens? The air will not carry me, but resisteth my folly, I fall down, for I am of the earth. Therefore, O thou very Light and true Comfort, that canst, and mayst, and dost command the heavens; Behold I offer these Tables unto thee, Command them as it pleaseth thee; and O you Ministers, and true lights of understanding, Governing this earthly frame, and the elements wherein we live, Do for me as for the servant of the Lord; and unto whom it hath pleased the Lord to talk of you.

Behold, Lord, thou hast appointed me 50 times; Thrice 50 times will I lift my hands unto thee. Be it unto me as it pleaseth thee, and thy holy Ministers. I require nothing but thee, and through thee, and for thy honour and glory; But I hope I shall be satisfied, and shall not die, (as thou hast promised) until thou gather the clouds together, and judge all things; when in a moment I shall be changed and dwell with thee for ever. Amen.

While Dee approached this text as a Christian prayer it is generic enough to be employed by Thelemites and has the added legitimacy of originating with the Angelic communications themselves, unlike the other opening prayers which were written by Dee and thus are more open to revision. From a Thelemic perspective, the second paragraph may seem problematic with its references to the unworthiness of the magician and so forth, but the overall spirit of the paragraph is more in keeping with the vision of the individual that is common to both Gnostic Christianity and Thelema — that the realization of the divine spark overcomes this initial unworthiness, whether it be envisioned as the grace of God or the True Will of the magician. For example, some similar statements may be found in the Confession that begins Crowley's Invocation of Horus, also called The Supreme Ritual by Thelemites and which is believed to have ushered in the New Aeon when it was performed in 1904.

Chapter 8 Preliminary Invocation

The preliminary invocations follow the ceremonial and/or devotional temple openings. While the devotional prayers articulate your aspiration as a magician, the essential function of this ritual phase is to align your personal consciousness with that of deity — in effect, to transform you into an instrument of God for the duration of the ritual. It should also serve to energize your subtle body and align it with the magical forces that you will be calling upon during the course of the ritual.

NAZ OLPIRT (“Pillars of Light”) Energy Work Exercise:

While this is a modern practice of my own design that is not found in the Dee material, I have found it to be quite effective like the ceremonial opening rituals. Also as with the ceremonial rituals, it should be memorized rather than read, and better still performed as part of a regular daily ritual practice. Daily ritual practice is like the magical equivalent of working out. The more you do it, the stronger you get, and the more regularly you practice the better. I would recommend a practice consisting of the AOEVEAE and this exercise to start out, and once you feel comfortable with that sequence you can add the MADRIAX as well to extend the effect of the practice into the macrocosmic realm.

One of the areas that modern magicians sometimes neglect is the energetic state of the subtle body, or body of light. I have found that practices such as Hatha Yoga and Qigong make a great deal of difference in terms of the amount of magical force you can bring to bear upon a situation and thus your ability to create change successfully. In the Golden Dawn tradition, a common practice is the Middle Pillar Exercise, which associates various names of God with specific points on the subtle body and as a result empowers those areas with the energies of the associated godforms. In the Thelemic tradition, a similar practice is the Elevenfold Seal, found in Aleister Crowley's "Liber V vel Reguli".

This is a similar exercise based upon relating the Enochian elements to the elemental natures of the seven chakras of Eastern mysticism. While no scientific research has as of yet identified chakras or the meridians that connect them on the human body, traditional Chinese medicine has made use of them for millennia in treating various illnesses through practices such as acupuncture, which produces remarkable results for many people. This ritual activates these energy circuits using the magical force of the Enochian elements and aligns the body of light with the magical currents of the Enochian system.

Start off by standing in a normal, relaxed pose. Keep your spine straight and imagine your head suspended by a thread from above. Breathe slowly and easily through the nose into your diaphragm. Place your tongue so that it is touching the roof of your mouth and keep it there except when vibrating the words of the ritual. Make sure you hold the tongue in that position when breathing in. The gestures are made with the hand or finger rather than any sort of magical weapon.

1. Make a clockwise circle above your head and intone:

MADRIAX

("the Heavens")

three times. Visualize a sea of luminous brilliance above you, beyond and encompassing all colors.

2. Touch the center of your forehead (ajna chakra) and intone:

IAD

(i-AHD – “God”)

three times. Visualize energy akin to pure, clear light forming at this point, sending its rays outward to the four cardinal directions. Do not completely drop the visualization of luminous brilliance above you. You are adding to your visualization, not replacing it. This instruction holds true for all the following steps.

3. Touch your throat (vishuddha chakra) and intone:

EHNB

(“Spirit”)

three times. Visualize a sphere of bright lavender light forming at this point.

4. Touch the center of your chest (anahata chakra) and intone:

EXARP

(“Air”)

three times. Visualize a sphere of vibrant white energy forming at this point.

5. Touch your solar plexus (samsara chakra) and intone:

BITOM

(“Fire”)

three times. Visualize a sphere of glowing red energy forming at this point.

6. Touch the lower abdomen just below the navel (svadasthana chakra) and intone:

HCOMA

(“Water”)

three times. Visualize a sphere of green energy forming at this point.

7. Touch the perineum (muladhara chakra) and intone:

NANTA

(“Earth”)

three times. Visualize a sphere of solid black energy forming at this point.

8. Drop both hands to your sides and intone:

CAOSGO

(ka-OS-go – “the Earth”)

three times. Visualize the completion of a circuit that begins above you in the heavens, descends below you into the deep earth down the front of your body and then ascends upwards to the heavens along the back of your body.

9. As you visualize the circulating energy, start with your hands at about the level of your perineum, palms turned upwards, and then raise them to the level of the top of your head as you inhale. Then turn the palms downward and drop them back to the level of the perineum as you exhale. This breathing should be deep, relaxed, and as smooth as possible. When performed properly you should feel a light tingling sensation up and down the spine that roughly follows your hand motions. Hold this visualization of the energy circuit in concert with your breathing for as long as is comfortable or appropriate.

10. To conclude the exercise, make the Sign of Osiris Risen, crossing your arms over your chest, and intone:

TA CALZ I OROCHA

(“As above the firmament so beneath you”)

as you visualize any excess energy you have focused at each of the points of your body descending below your feet into the vast darkness of the deep earth, breaking the circuit. Feel a wave of relaxation sweep over you from your head down to your feet, sweeping any remaining tension into the deep earth along with the grounded energy.

Even though the “Heptarchia Mystica” relies on the agency of particular angels in order to accomplish magical objectives, I have found that this sort of “energy work” nonetheless plays an important role in obtaining the best possible magical results. While modern magicians continue to debate the “energy model” versus the “spirit model” of magick, in my experience this is a false dichotomy. When a magician conjures a spirit to accomplish a particular task, the magical result depends on both the power of the spirit and that of the magician, which merge together to produce the desired effect.

John Dee's Oration to God:

This opening prayer serves as the preliminary invocation for rituals summoning the Heptarchial Kings and Princes. It explains his purpose for working magick and implores the favor of his deity. The text of the prayer shows the extent of Dee's Christian faith and its Hermetic influences, which included the belief that an individual could, through extreme devotion, communicate directly with the divine.

O Almighty, Aeternal, the True and Living God; O King of Glory, O Lord of Hosts, O Thou, the Creator of Heaven and Earth, and of all things, visible and invisible; Now, (even now, at length) among other Thy manifold mercies used, and to be used toward me, Thy simple servant, [John Dee]<sup>1</sup>, I most humbly beseech Thee, in this my present petition to have mercy upon me, to have pity upon me, to have compassion upon me. I, faithfully and sincerely, of long time, have sought among men, in Earth, and also by prayer (full oft and pitifully) have made suit unto Thy Divine Majesty for the obtaining of some convenient portion of True Knowledge and Understanding of Thy laws and ordinances, established in the natures and properties of Thy creatures; by which Knowledge, Thy Divine Wisdom, Power and Goodness, (on Thy creatures bestowed and to them imparted), being to me made and allure me, (for the same) incessantly to pronounce Thy praises, to render unto Thee, most hearty thanks, to advance Thy true honor, and to win unto Thy Name, some of Thy due Majestic Glory, among all people, and forever.

And, whereas it hath pleased Thee (O God) of Thy Infinite Goodness, by Thy faithful and holy Spiritual Messengers, to deliver unto me, long since

1. Obviously you would insert your own name or magical motto here. You may want to make a note of this in the margin so that you do not inadvertently use Dee's name during a ritual rather than your own.

(through the eye and ear of E. K.)<sup>2</sup> an orderly form, and manner of exercise Heptarchial; How, (to Thy Honour and Glory, and the Comfort of my own poor soul, and of others, Thy faithful servants,) I may, at all times, use very many of Thy good Angels, their counsels and helps; according to the properties of such their functions, and offices, as to them, by Thy Divine Power, Wisdom and Goodness, is assigned, and limited; (Which orderly form, and manner of exercise, until even now, I never found opportunity and extreme necessity, to apply myself unto.)

Therefore, I Thy poor, and simple servant, do most humbly, heartily, and faithfully beseech Thy Divine Majesty, most lovingly and fatherly to favour; and by Thy Divine Beck to further this my present industry and endeavour to exercise myself, according to the foresaid orderly form and manner; And, now, (at length, but not too late) for Thy dearly beloved Son Jesus Christ His sake, (O Heavenly Father) to grant also unto me, this blessing and portion of Thy heavenly Graces; that Thou wilt forthwith, enable me, make me apt and acceptable, (in body, soul, and spirit) to enjoy always the holy and friendly conversation, with the sensible, plain, full, and perfect help, in word and deed, of Thy Mighty, Wise, and Good Spiritual Messengers and Ministers generally; and, namely, of Blessed Michael, Blessed Gabriel, Blessed Raphael, and Blessed Uriel; and also especially, of all those, which do appertain unto the Heptarchial Mystery, theurgically (as yet) and very briefly unto me declared; under the method of the Seven Mighty Kings, and their Seven Faithful and Princely Ministers, with their subjects and servants, to them belonging.

And in this Thy Great Mercy and Grace, on me bestowed, and to me confirmed, (O Almighty God)

2. Also, if you are working with a scryer his or her name should be placed here. If working alone you can amend it to "through my own eye and ear" or omit the parenthesized portion entirely.

Thou shalt, (to the great comfort of Thy faithful servants,) approve, to Thy very enemies, and mine, the truth and certainty of Thy manifold, most merciful promises, heretofore, made unto me: And that Thou art the True and Almighty God, Creator of Heaven and Earth, (upon whom I do call and in whom I put all of my trust,) and Thy Ministers, to be the true, and faithful Angels of Light; which have, hitherto, principally, and according to Thy Divine providence dealt with us; And, also, I thy poor and simple servant, shall then, In and By Thee, be better able to serve Thee, according to Thy well pleasing; to Thy Honour and Glory; Yea, even in these most miserable, and lamentable days. Grant, Oh grant, O our heavenly father, grant this, (I pray Thee,) for Thy only begotten Son Jesus Christ His sake: Amen, Amen, Amen.

Revised Oration to God:

This revised version was developed by my magical working group to harmonize better with the Thelemic worldview. Much of the text is the same, but it is shorter and does not include the original's explicitly Christian material.

O Almighty, Eternal, True and Living God; O King of Glory; O Lord of Hosts; O Thou, who art Heaven and Earth and all things visible and invisible; we beseech Thee in this our present petition to have mercy and compassion upon us, who, faithfully and sincerely of long time have made suit unto Thy Divine Majesty, that we may obtain true Gnosis and full understanding of Thy Divine Wisdom, Power and Goodness. And whereas it has pleased Thee of Thy infinite Goodness, by Thy faithful and holy Spiritual Messengers, to deliver unto us long since an orderly form and manner of Exercise Angelic: how, to Thy Honor and Glory, and the comfort of our own souls and of others Thy faithful servants, we may at all times use very many of Thy Holy Angels, their counsels and helps: according to the properties of such their functions and offices, as to them, by Thy Divine Power, Wisdom and Goodness is assigned and limited. Therefore, we heartily and faithfully beseech Thy Divine Majesty to further this our present industry and endeavor to Exercise ourselves, according to the aforesaid orderly form and manner. Grant also unto us this blessing and portion of Thy Heavenly Graces: that thou wilt forthwith enable us, make us apt, and acceptable in body, Soul, and Spirit to enjoy always the Holy and friendly conversation, with the sensible, plain, full and perfect help in word and deed of Thy Mighty, Wise and Good Spiritual Messengers and Ministers generally: and namely of Blessed Michael, Blessed Gabriel, Blessed Raphael and Blessed Uriel; and also, especially of all those which do appertain unto the Heptarchical Mystery and the Mystery of the Great Table. Reveal unto us Thy Majestical Glory, now and forever, through Thy Ministers, the true and faithful Angels of Light. AMEN. AMEN. AMEN.

Daily Magical Practice:

Some traditional grimoire practitioners have recently put forth the argument that since the old grimoires do not specify any sort of daily magical practice such work is not necessary for working successful magick. I strongly disagree with this assertion, and in my experience there is no surer way to fail as a magician than to neglect daily practice. Even if you possess profound magical talent, daily practices will make your rituals even more effective, just as professional athletes have to maintain their workout schedules in order to remain in top shape.

In fact, the “Heptarchia Mystica” as written does include a daily practice — the threefold repetition of the Oration to God as a prayer.<sup>3</sup> In my opinion this prayer should be preceded by opening an operant field and performing the NAZ OLPIRT or similar exercise such as the Elevenfold Seal or Middle Pillar, and then followed by a period of silent meditation, but these are modern additions on my part. For traditional grimoire practitioners who would rather not employ such forms, the repetition of the prayer is still quite effective on its own. Furthermore, it would not surprise me if Dee himself did in fact observe a period of silent meditation following his prayers, but failed to note it in the text of his grimoire because he found the practice obvious. Twenty minutes or more of meditation per day is excellent if you can find the time for it, but even five minutes is better than none.

In addition to strengthening your magical abilities, employing the same essential procedure that you use to open the temple in your daily work will allow you to memorize the rituals that make up the opening procedure much more quickly. The Oration itself is likely intended to be read like the other texts in the Enochian system, but the ceremonial rituals should be committed to memory as they are rather awkward to perform while holding a book or script and include visualizations that can easily be disrupted by shifting your attention back to the printed page.

Chapter 9 The Angelic Keys

The Angelic Keys, or Calls, make up what is probably the most famous portion of the Enochian system. It is from the Keys and their English translations that all “Enochian dictionaries” are created; in fact, the Keys make up the only portion of the system where the English and Angelic languages appear side by side. There are forty-nine actual Keys — the eighteen Keys attributed to the Tablet of the Watchtowers, the thirty Keys attributed to the Aires (which differ from one another by only the name of the Aire), and the mysterious true “First Key” that precedes the other forty-eight. I divide the Keys into three groups: the Opening Keys, used to open and close the Temple, the Watchtower Keys, which correspond to the various regions of the Great Table, and the Aethyr Keys, which correspond to the thirty Aires.

The use of Angelic Keys with the rituals of the Heptarchia Mystica is not noted anywhere in the grimoire itself, and it is for this reason that I have noted it as an optional practice in the ritual template. Based on years of workings with my magical group, however, I have found this innovation to be quite effective. As the heptarchial Kings and Princes are not attributed to the Great Table or Aires it is only the Opening Keys that are appropriate for use with these entities, and for this reason only these of Keys are included in this chapter.

The Opening Keys

Silence – the True “First Key”:

While many versions of the Keys have been published, one obscure piece of related information is that there are 49 Keys rather than 48. When the Keys were communicated to Dee and Kelly they were told that the true First Key was “not to be sounded.” Some authors have interpreted this to mean that the use of this Key was forbidden in some manner, but my own interpretation is that the true First Key does not consist of words and is therefore silent. From a philosophical point of view, this is akin to the notion that stillness of mind, not just physical silence, is a requirement preceding any successful magical action. Prior to reading any of the Angelic Keys, I perform a brief meditation lasting a few minutes that serves to quiet any remaining wandering thoughts.

The First Key:

As I have discussed above, the “First Key” is actually the second, but I have not labeled it as such in order to maintain consistency with other writings on Enochian Magick. It is also worth noting that the Angels used the same sort of notation when communicating with Dee and Kelly; while they acknowledged that the First Key was really the Second, they continued to refer to it as the First in their subsequent communications. The First Key is used to activate the Enochian Temple when performing rituals involving evocation — that is, the calling of Enochian Angels into the Holy Table. As an opening Key, it precedes the use of all Watchtower or Aethyr Keys.

The Second Key:

The Second Key is used to open the Enochian temple for rituals involving invocation — that is, the calling of Enochian Angels into body and consciousness of the magician. Invocation and evocation are not necessarily contradictory; for example, I have been known to perform rituals in which I invoked the form of a particular Angel in order to call a second Angel into the Holy Table that was under the authority of the first. Also, there are many cases in which a spell is intended to have an effect on both the magician and his or her external environment. For such rituals both Keys are read beginning with the First. Otherwise, in the case of a ritual involving invocation only, the Second Key replaces the First.

The First and Second Keys follow. They are shown in Angelic, which translates the actual Angelic letters of the Keys into their English alphabet equivalents; Phonetic, which breaks the pronunciation down by syllable according to the pronunciation explained in Chapter 4; and English, the translation of the Angelic. I have decided not to arrange them in such a way as to provide a word by word comparison between the English and Angelic as many Enochian books do simply because I find that the format used here is more usable in ritual. If you are interested in studying the language itself several Enochian Dictionaries are available for that purpose. The most popular of these among practitioners is probably The Complete Enochian Dictionary by Donald C. Laycock, available from Weiser Books<sup>1</sup>.

I reign over you, sayeth the God of Justice in power exalted above the firmaments of wrath, in whose hands the Sun is as a sword, and the Moon as a through-thrusting fire which measureth your garments in the midst of my vestures, and trussed you together as the palms of my hands: whose seats I garnished with the fire of gathering, and beautified your garments with admiration to whom I made a law to govern the Holy Ones and delivered you a rod with the Ark of Knowledge. Moreover you lifted up your voices and swore obedience and faith to him that liveth and triumpheth whose beginning is not, nor end cannot be which shineth as a flame in the midst of your palace and reigneth among you as the balance of righteousness, and truth: move, therefore, and show yourselves: open the mysteries of your creation: be friendly unto me: for I am the servant of the same your God: the true worshipper of the highest.

Can the wings of the winds understand your voices of wonder, O you the second of the first, whom the burning flames have framed within the depths of my jaws, whom I have prepared as cups for a wedding, or as the flowers in their beauty for the chamber of righteousness. Stronger are your feet than the barren stone: and mightier are your voices than the manifold winds. For, you are become a building such as is not but in the mind of the all-powerful. Arise, sayeth the first, move therefore unto his servants: show yourselves in power. And make me a strong seething: for I am of him that liveth forever.

Chapter 10 Tuning the Space

Once the general preliminary invocation has been performed, the next step in the ritual is to tune the working space to match the attribution of the spirit that is to be conjured. The function of this step is to create a magical environment that will be favorable to both the spirit being conjured and the desired outcome of the ritual.

Planetary Days and Hours:

Renaissance magicians relied on planetary days and hours to tune their ritual spaces, working with the natural sequence of planetary influences rather than any particular ceremonial procedure. The planetary days follow the standard Western attributions for the days of the week:

Sunday = Sun
Monday = Moon
Tuesday = Mars
Wednesday = Mercury
Thursday = Jupiter
Friday = Venus
Saturday = Saturn

Figuring out the planetary hour is somewhat more involved. Each day begins at sunrise with the first hour of the day. The time from sunrise to sunset is then divided into twelve equal parts, which are the hours of the day. The time from sunset to sunrise is then likewise divided into twelve equal parts, which are the twelve hours of the night. This means that the amount of time allotted to the hours of the day and hours of the night will only be equal on the equinoxes – the hours of the day will be longer in summer and the hours of the night will be longer in winter.

For example:

if sunrise is at           7:03 AM and sunset is at       5:50 PM, the time between sunrise and sunset is: 10 hours and 47 minutes or 647 minutes. Dividing 647 by 12 and rounding to the nearest minute gives 54 minutes, which will be the length of each hour of the day.

The first hour starts at 7:03 AM, the second 54 minutes later at 7:57 AM, and so forth. Since there are 1440 minutes in a 24 hour day, there are 793 minutes between sunset and the following sunrise. Dividing 793 by 12 and rounding to the nearest minute gives 66 minutes for each hour of the night. The first night hour would begin at 5:50 PM, the second would begin 66 minutes later at 6:56 PM, and so forth. The length of one day hour plus the length of one night hour should always sum to 120 minutes.

The planets are then attributed to the hours using an arrangement called the Chaldean Order. This is the order of apparent astrological motion from the perspective of the Earth, and also the descending order of the planets on the Tree of Life — Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Sun, Venus, Mercury, and finally Moon. The first hour of the day is always ruled by the planet that rules the day, and subsequent hours are ruled by the planets next in order. Once all seven ancient planets are attributed to hours the sequence starts over. It is important to note that Renaissance magicians considered the planetary hour to be more important than the planetary day, which allowed them to work planetary magick on any day of the week as circumstances required.

| 12 | Mercury | Jupiter | Venus   | Saturn    | Sun      | Moon    | Mars     |

These tables show the arrangement of the planetary hours for the day and night. The most efficacious time to perform a standard planetary ritual is on the day and hour of the planet. Such a solar ritual would thus be most effective when performed on a Sunday during the first or eighth hour of the day or the third or tenth hour of the night, since those hours are attributed to the Sun on every Sunday.

When working with the Mystical Heptarchy it is necessary to work during the proper planetary day. John Dee further notes planetary attributions for each King and Prince, which specify the planetary hour in which they are to be conjured. The attributions of the Kings all match the planetary days, so that for example Bobogel, the King for Sunday, should be conjured during the day and hour of the Sun. The Princes are summoned during different planetary hours, such that Bornogo, the Prince for Sunday, should be conjured on the day of the Sun but during the hour of Venus.

Dee noted that while the King and Prince rule for the entire day, the Ministers associated with them rule according to the “six parts of the day.” Presumably this means that the day should be divided into six groups of four planetary hours each starting at sunrise, three for the day followed by three for the night. As there are no conjurations in the “Heptarchia Mystica” specific to the Ministers, this notation seems to be of little practical use in the context of the original system. However, this does present an area of the heptarchial system that has not yet been explored and thus could prove fruitful for further magical research.

Incense:

Many systems of evocation involve the use of incense that the conjured spirit uses to shape a rudimentary form for the magician to observe. There are no explicit references in the Dee diaries to the use of any particular incense, and it is not clear that any was ever used. Kelley viewed the spirits in a scrying stone rather than seeing them appear in patterns of smoke. However, if you wish to use incense in a heptarchial ritual the proper type is that corresponding to the planetary day. This is the case even if you are evoking the Prince, whose planetary hour differs from the planetary day, or Carmara and Haganel, who adapt to the day on which they are conjured. Some incenses corresponding to the seven planets and days of the week according to Aleister Crowley’s “Liber 777” (column XLII) are as follows:

|                   |                                                                           |
|-------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Sunday:    | Olibanum, Cinnamon, all glorious odors.                                   |
| Monday:    | Jasmine, Camphor, Aloe, all sweet virginal odors.                         |
| Tuesday:   | Tobacco, Pepper, Dragon's Blood, all hot pungent odors.                   |
| Wednesday: | Mastic, White Sandal, Nutmeg, Mace, Storax, all fugitive odors.           |
| Thursday:  | Cedar, Saffron, all generous odors.                                       |
| Friday:    | Benzoin, Rose, Red Sandal, Sandalwood, Myrtle, all soft voluptuous odors. |
| Saturday:  | Myrrh, Civet, Assofoetida, Scammony, Indigo, Sulphur, all evil odors.     |

As one of the functions of incense is to prompt particular impressions in the mind, it is important to note that the italicized descriptions in the list above are essentially subjective. For example, a "glorious odor" would be incense that calls to mind a sense of glory or exaltation. This is difficult to codify and depends upon the way in which your consciousness responds to particular scents, so these general descriptions are included to accommodate such individual differences.

There are no specific instructions in the Dee diaries regarding the construction or placement of an incense burner, but my magical working group has found that one may be set on the Holy Table without causing any functional problems. Just make sure that the burner you use does not heat up too much on the bottom or it can singe the silk of the cloth.

Ceremonial Forms:

Rather than working with the system of planetary days and hours many modern magicians rely on ceremonial forms to tune the ritual space. The most common such ritual for planetary operations is the Golden Dawn Greater Invoking Ritual of the Hexagram. When working with the mystical heptarchy it is my practice to conjure during the proper day and hour and also use the ceremonial forms to tune the space, but Dee himself most likely relied on the days and hours as specified in Agrippa's "Three Books of Occult Philosophy" so the use of the hexagram ritual is marked as optional in the template for those traditional magicians who would rather work without using the modern forms.

The Greater Invoking Ritual of the Hexagram is performed by tracing the proper invoking planetary hexagram and symbol to each of the four quarters of the temple beginning in the east and rotating deosil, or clockwise. The formula ARARITA is vibrated while tracing the hexagram and the name of God corresponding to the planet is vibrated while tracing the symbol in the center of the hexagram. The hexagram should be visualized in the natural color corresponding to the planet, while the symbol should be visualized in the flashing or complementary color. So, for example, when performing the Greater Invoking Hexagram of Mars the hexagram should be visualized in red and the symbol of Mars should be visualized in green.

This is further complicated by the type of operation being performed. For a ritual seeking knowledge or realization the natural color for the sphere of the planet should be used, whereas for a ritual conjuring a particular magical power the natural color for the path of the planet should be used. On the Tree of Life the sphere of the planet represents its intelligence or consciousness while the path of planet represents its spirit or activity. The name of God remains the same whether you are working with a sphere or a path, but the natural color shifts or changes as shown on the following table.

Table 7. Planetary Attributions

| Planet  | Name of God          | Sphere Color   | Path Color |
|---------|----------------------|----------------|------------|
| Saturn  | YHVH Elohim          | Black          | Indigo     |
| Jupiter | Al or El             | Blue           | Purple     |
| Mars    | Elohim Gibor         | Scarlet Red    | Scarlet    |
| Sun     | YHVH Eloah ve-Da'ath | Yellow or Gold | Orange     |
| Venus   | YHVH Tzabaoth        | Emerald Green  | Emerald    |
| Mercury | Elohim Tzabaoth      | Orange         | Yellow     |
| Moon    | Shaddai el Chai      | Violet         | Blue       |

As the Kings generally are conjured for knowledge, it is usually most appropriate to use the Sphere color when summoning them. As the Princes generally are conjured to perform some particular task, it is usually most appropriate to use the Path color when summoning them. However, there are some exceptions to this rule and the goal of the operation should be the final arbiter of which color is most appropriate.

The planetary hexagrams follow. The general methodology used is to map the planetary hexagram onto the Tree of Life so that the planets are attributed as shown. Then you begin tracing at the appropriate point and trace clockwise to invoke. These hexagrams can also be used to banish by starting at the planetary point and tracing counter-clockwise.

The one exception to this basic rule is the Hexagram of the Sun. Since the Sun is located in the center of the planetary hexagram there is no point to attribute to it. Therefore, in order to invoke the Sun, the other six hexagrams are traced in order according to relative astrological motion: Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Venus, Mercury, and finally the Moon. The figure is then traced in the complementary color at the center of the figure as the name of God YHVH Eloah ve-Da'ath is vibrated once.

For the sphere of Saturn the hexagram is traced in black and the central symbol is traced in white. For the path of Saturn the hexagram is traced in indigo and the central symbol is traced in light yellow.

For the sphere of Jupiter the hexagram is traced in blue and the central symbol is traced in orange. For the path of Jupiter the hexagram is traced in purple and the central symbol is traced in yellow.

For the sphere of Mars the hexagram is traced in scarlet red and the central symbol is traced in green. For the path of Mars the hexagram is traced in scarlet and the central symbol is traced in light green.

For the sphere of Venus the hexagram is traced in emerald green and the central symbol is traced in red. For the path of Venus the hexagram is traced in emerald and the central symbol is traced in light red.

For the sphere of Mercury the hexagram is traced in orange and the central symbol is traced in blue. For the path of Mercury the hexagram is traced in yellow and the central symbol is traced in purple.

For the sphere of the Moon the hexagram is traced in violet and the central symbol is traced in pale yellow. For the path of the Moon the hexagram is traced in blue and the central symbol is traced in orange.

The hexagram of the Sun is an amalgam of the other planetary hexagrams and is traced by superimposing them over one another. ARARITA is vibrated six times, once for each hexagram traced, but the godname is only vibrated once along with the symbol.

For the sphere of the Sun the hexagrams are traced in yellow or gold and the central symbol is traced in purple. For the path of the Sun the hexagrams are traced in orange and the central symbol is traced in blue.

Finally, once the hexagrams have been traced to all four quarters, the Greater Ritual of the Hexagram is concluded by turning back to face the east and raising your wand or finger to the heavens. You then exclaim "let the divine light descend!" and bring your wand or finger down in a vertical line until reaches the working space on the altar. When working with the mystical heptarchy this will be the center of the Sigillum Dei Aemeth. The accompanying visualization for the invoking form is a column of light matching the color used for the hexagram descending from the heavens and coming to rest in the center of the working space. For the banishing form, rather than the light coming to rest in the center it should instead be visualized as filling the temple space and then fading as it purifies the working area of the specified planetary influence. Generally speaking, you will be using the invoking form when working with heptarchial Kings and Princes, as they are dismissed using the License to Depart rather than the banishing form of this ritual.

Chapter 11 Heptarchial Conjurations

Figure 43.
The Heptarchial wheel showing the Kings, Princes, and Ministers

Once the space has been tuned by day and hour or the Greater Ritual of the Hexagram, or both, to the appropriate planetary influence, the magician may proceed with the conjuration of the desired King or Prince. Compared to many other systems of magick, the method found in the "Heptarchia Mystica" is a relatively straightforward procedure. While assembling the various temple implements can be a lot of work, once you have them in place summoning the Kings and Princes is quite simple.

| King    | Conjuration Powers                                                                                           | Traditional Powers                                                             |

| Baligon | Who canst distribute and bestow at pleasure, all and whatsoever can be wrought in aerial actions.            | Vision of Beauty Triumphant                                                    |
| Bnapsen | Casting out the power of all wicked spirits, knowing the doings and practices of evil men.                   | Vision of Sorrow / Vision of Wonder                                            |

Table 8. Powers of the Kings

It should be obvious that selecting the proper King or Prince is vitally important to the success of your operation. Like all spirits, the Kings and Princes have particular areas that represent their spheres of influence and must operate within those areas. According to workings performed by my magical group, they possess the powers of the planet to which they are attributed in addition to those delineated in their particular conjurations. The traditional powers shown are from Aleister Crowley's "Liber 777" (Column XLV.) and are similar to those found in Agrippa and other Renaissance sources. The Kings are related to traditional mystical visions because they represent knowledge and illumination rather than material action.

The Princes correspond to the magical powers related to the planets, by day rather than by hour. So, for example, even though Bornogo is attributed to the hour of Venus, his powers correspond to the Sun because he is the Prince for Sunday.

| Prince  | Conjuration Powers                                                             | Traditional Powers                                           |

Table 9. Powers of the Princes

Physical Manifestations:

In “Ceremonial Magick and the Power of Evocation” Joseph Lisiewski is particularly vehement in his argument that for an evocation to succeed the spirit conjured must produce some sort of physical manifestation. While I have never worked with the spirits of the “Heptameron” as Lisiewski does, I can say from personal experience that this is not the case with the angels of the “Heptarchia Mystica”. The most extreme physical effects I have encountered when working with them are temperature fluctuations in the room and/or over the Holy Table and, when using a candle in the center of the Sigillum Dei Aemeth as a spell focus, unusual behavior of the flame when the angel is present.

Despite this, in terms of accomplishing specific magical objectives the Kings and Princes are very effective whether or not even these physical effects manifest during a given ritual. The determination of a ritual’s success or failure should depend on only one factor — whether or not the objective of the operation is achieved. It should not make any difference whether or not you see the spirit, whether or not you hear unexplained sounds, or even whether or not your spell focus explodes as you complete the conjuration. Such things are peripheral phenomena unrelated to the operation at hand, and obsession with them can lead to a profound misunderstanding of the nature of the magical arts.

As mentioned in Chapter 5, Dee and Kelley placed a crystal sphere in the center of the Sigillum and conjured the various angels with whom they worked into it. If you are a skilled scryer or are working with one you may wish to do the same. One scrying method that we are experimenting with in my magical working group is to use a brain machine, a device that synchronizes brainwaves using light and sound. Prior to the scrying session, the scryer runs an alpha/theta brainwave program on the machine for at least ten minutes. Theta Waves are the lowest frequency brainwaves that normally occur during waking consciousness, and Alpha Waves are the next highest class of frequencies and correspond to relaxed attention. These two classes of waves have been measured as heightened in subjects engaged in meditation, so our working hypothesis was that cultivating them would facilitate scrying. From the testing we have been able to do it appears to work, though if you already are good at scrying and can enter the proper state easily on your own it probably will not make much difference in your results. The machine we use is a Photosonix Nova Pro 100<sup>1</sup> which is one of the most expensive models, but alpha/theta programs are standard for basic meditation and can be found on less expensive machines as well.

Heptarchial Talismans:

The “Heptarchia Mystica” includes a series of names and sigils to be drawn onto seven talismans, one for each day of the week, plus an eighth for Carmara and Hagonel. The same talisman is used for the King and for the corresponding Prince. The designs shown here are similar to those published by Geoffrey James in “The Enochian Magick of Doctor John Dee”, except that the names of the King and Prince as well as those lining the border of the circle have been rendered into Angelic characters.

One oddity about heptarchial magick is that rather than the talisman being held or somehow drawn onto a scrying mirror, the magician must instead place the talisman on the floor and stand upon it while reciting the conjuration. As far as I have been able to discern this is a unique method that is not found in any of the other grimoires that were available during the Renaissance. The seven talismans must thus be drawn or photocopied large enough to stand upon. Also, in the text of the “Heptarchia Mystica” the sigils for the Kings and associated names are shown with English letters, but it is my contention that in order to properly activate the talismans these characters must be transposed into the Angelic. I have not included the English versions here as they are easily found on other works, most notably Joseph Peterson’s edition of John Dee’s Five Books of Mystery. Peterson also maintains an online copy of the “Heptarchia Mystica” at his Esoteric Archives web site that shows the English lettering.<sup>2</sup>

Before presenting the sigils for the Kings and Princes, Caramara showed Dee an image of a flag with a woman on one side, the old flag of England on the other, and the letters B and C. Carmara referred to this image as “the sign of the work.” Some sources have misinterpreted the image as some sort of sigil for Carmara, but this is incorrect. To my way of thinking the image alludes to one of Dee's key purposes in pursuing magical knowledge — to aid his queen and country. The woman represents Dee's patron, Queen Elizabeth I, the flag signifies the nation of Britain, and the B and C likely allude to the British Crown. Dee was then shown a second image, of the word EL. I believe that this word is an allusion to the sigil for Carmara, which is the same as the sigil for Baligon, an oblong triangle containing that particular name. Dee further notes that Baligon and Carmara are the same entity and appear in the same manner. Likewise, Blumaza also represents an aspect of Carmara. No ring of names is given for Blumaza, though Dee does record a specific sigil. The talisman for Blumaza therefore uses the same outer ring of letters as does the talisman for Carmara, though it is otherwise constructed using Blumaza's unique seal. Finally, Dee gives no seal for Bagenol,<sup>3</sup> but as he is the Prince corresponding to Baligon it follows that he corresponds to Hagonel and therefore has the same seal.

Images of the talismans follow, and those that I use are drawn eight inches in diameter on 8 ½ x 11 inch sheets of paper. I find that this is a good size that allows both feet to touch the image without my having to stand in an awkward position.

The Kings

All of the Heptarchial Kings are summoned using the same conjuration, with the King's name and office inserted into the conjuration itself. There is a King for each of the seven days of the week, and a different King rules each day. You should only attempt to summon a King on the appropriate day of the week and during the planetary hour that matches the day. Bobogel, for example, the King for Sunday, should be summoned only on that day during the hour of the Sun.

King CARMARA is the one special case. He is the overall ruler of the Heptarchial Angels and may be summoned on any day of the week and during the hour of any planet. However, this same Angel also appears as BLUMAZA, in which guise he is the King for Monday and should be summoned on that day during the hour of the Moon. His powers and abilities remain the same regardless of the name by which he is conjured. The conjurations for CARMARA and BLUMAZA are essentially the same, the only difference being the name of the King.

The offices for each King are reproduced as they appear in the "Heptarchia Mystica", although a small amount of editing was required in order to fit the conjurations together. As with the Keys, each appears on its own page for use with the Heptarchial Ritual Template rather than Dee's format, in which the conjuration was shown once and the magician was expected to insert the office of the King into it. I have also italicized portions of the conjurations that are clearly personal and directly related to Dee's work so that you may omit those particular comments in your own work if you so desire.

In addition to the offices named for each of the Kings they also embody the traditional powers of the seven ancient planets and behave for the most part like planetary intelligences. Their primary function is to know rather than to do. Accomplishing specific tasks is more properly associated with the Princes, whereas the Kings are more appropriate to workings seeking greater knowledge and spiritual illumination related to their particular planetary spheres. Note in the conjuration, however, that when the King is summoned the Prince will also be present, so in a single operation you can summon a King in order to obtain more information about a situation and then charge the corresponding Prince to make some sort of change to that situation based.

King Carmara

Conjuration:

O puissant and right Noble King CARMARA and by what name est thou art called, or mayst truly and duly be called: Who in the Heptarchical Doctrine, at Blessed Uriel his hand, didst receive the golden rod of government and measuring, and the chain of Dignity and Doctrine: And didst appear first to us, adorned with a Triple Diadem in a long purple robe. Who saidst to me at Mortlake: I minister the strength of God unto thee. Likewise, thou saidst: These Mysteries hath God Lastly, and of his great Mercies, granted unto thee. Thou shalt be glutton, yea filled: yea, thou shalt swell and be puffed up, with the perfect Knowledge of God's Mysteries, in His mercies. And saidst: This Art, is to the further Understanding of all Science, that are past, present, or yet to come. And Immediately, didst say unto me: Kings there are in Nature, with Nature, and above Nature. Thou art Dignified. And saidst, concerning the use of these Tables, This is but the first step: Neither shalt thou practice them in vain: And saidst, thus generally of God's mercies and Graces on me decreed and bestowed. Whatsoever thou shalt speak, do or work, shall be profitable and acceptable. And the end shall be good.

In the Name of the King of Kings, the Lord of Hosts, the Almighty God, Creator of Heaven and Earth, and of all things visible and invisible: O right Noble King CARMARA, Come now and Appear, with thy Prince and his Ministers, and subjects, to my perfect and sensible eye of Judgment: in a goodly and friendly manner, to my comfort and help, for the advancing of the Honor and Glory of our Almighty God by my service. As much as by thy Wisdom and Power, in thy proper Kingly office and Government, I may be holden and enabled unto: Amen.

Come, O right Noble King CARMARA I say, Come, Amen.

The Princes

All of the Princes are summoned using the same invocation, with the Prince's name and office inserted into the invocation itself. There is a Prince for each of the seven days of the week, each corresponding to a particular King. The planetary hours attributed to the Princes are shown next to their names and they should be conjured on the proper day during the designated hour. So the Prince for Sunday (the Sun) should be summoned during the hour of Venus, that for Monday (the Moon) during the hour of Saturn, that for Tuesday (Mars) during the hour of the Sun, and so on as explained in Chapter 9.

When tuning the space with ceremonial forms you will want to use the Greater Ritual of the Hexagram for the planet hour attributed to the Prince, not the planet attributed to the day. This may seem somewhat odd when, for example, performing a ritual attributed to Jupiter on a Thursday but then using the Greater Hexagram of Mars to tune the space. The rationale, however, is that the Prince represents the flow of Mezla or magical manifestation emanating from the sphere of Jupiter and beginning its transition into the material world by shifting into the sphere of Mars.

Prince HAGONEL is the Prince corresponding to CARMARA, and as a result may be called by that name on any day of the week. However, like CARMARA he also appears under an alternate name — as BAGENOL he is the Prince associated with Friday and the hour of Mercury. His powers are the same regardless of the name used to summon him.

Prince Hagonel

Image:

A man dressed in a short red robe with a golden circlet on his head.

Conjunction:

O noble Prince HAGONEL and by what Name else ever thou art called, or mayst truly, and duly be called: To whose commandment the sons of men and their sons are subject: and are thy servants To whose Power the Operation of the Earth is subject. Who art the First of the Twelve: and whose seal is called Barces and this it is: At whose commandment, are the Kings, Noble men, and Princes of Nature. Who art Primus et Quartus Hagonel. Who by the Seven of the 7 (which are the Sons of Sempiternitie) dost work marvels amongst the people of the Earth: and hath said to me, that I also By the same thy Servant, should work marvels. O Noble Hagonel, who Art Minister to the Triple crowned King — CARMARA: And notwithstanding art Prince over these 42 Angels, whose Names and characters are here presented.

In the Name of the Almighty God, the King of Kings, And for his honor and Glory to be advanced by my faithful Service. I require thee, O Noble Prince HAGONEL to come presently, and to show thy self to my perfect and sensible eye of Judgement, with thy Ministers, servants and subjects, to my comfort and help, in wisdom and power according to the property of thy Noble Office:

Come, O Noble Prince HAGONEL I say Come, Amen.

This particular personal note of Dee's combined with the power of "giving good success in battles reducing ships" suggests to some magicians that Dee may have summoned this Prince to help the English defeat the Spanish Armada in 1588. If this is ever found to be the case, it would refute those authors who claimed that Dee never actually made use of the magical system that he and Kelley developed.

Chapter 12 The Charge

The Charge to the spirit is your statement of intent that communicates the exact outcome you want your ritual to produce. Because rituals can be performed for just about any purpose you will need to write the Charge yourself for any ritual that you perform, and there are several factors that you need to keep in mind when doing so.

In order to understand these factors and how they work it is necessary to have some understanding of what spirits are and how they work. Aristotle wrote that the universe consists of both Matter and Form. Matter refers to the subatomic particles of which substances are composed and Form refers to how those particles are arranged. At the quantum level, the behavior of every particle is governed by fields of probability waves that are described in physics by what is called the Schroedinger function. There is some debate among quantum physicists as to whether subatomic particles occupy any particular point in space or simply exist as nonlocal probability waves prior to their interaction with some sort of measuring device.

It may be that at the quantum level Matter and Form collapse into each other, or perhaps they remain distinct in some way that we currently lack the proper tools to measure. In either case, the important thing to understand about spirits such as the angels of the mystical heptarchy is that they are beings of pure Form rather than Matter, just like the consciousness of every individual magician, and as beings of Form they are capable of interacting directly with the probability waves of any particular region of space. Those probability waves then influence the likelihood of particular outcomes when the particles within the region subject to this influence manifest as material objects.

This influence is called a Probability Shift and is the basic mechanism by which all practical magick works. Human consciousness consists of Form just as that of a spirit does, and with the right combination of training and aptitude a person can learn to use his or her consciousness to make such a probability shift. Even untrained individuals have been found to have the ability to do this to a very small degree according to a series of experiments conducted by the Princeton Engineering Anomalies Research (PEAR) laboratory in which individuals attempted to influence the behavior of quantum diodes, simple random number generators based on the Schroedinger functions of particular radioactive materials. The influence found was tiny, about .01 percent for most individuals,<sup>1</sup> but because of the enormous numbers of computerized trials conducted the result nonetheless proved highly statistically significant.

In order to become an effective practical magician it is usually necessary to have a higher degree of natural aptitude in this area than what is found in the general population. PEAR identified one subject whose baseline ability with the quantum diodes was about .05 percent, five times higher than that of the other test subjects observed.<sup>2</sup> Among all the subjects tested, this individual was probably the only one who was talented enough to get really good results from magical training. In my experience, the ratio of such individuals is somewhere between one person in thirty and one person in fifty depending on the overall population surveyed. Training takes time and effort, but if you possess the necessary aptitude it is well worth it. According to my experimentation over many years, a powerful magician can produce probability shifts of 100 to 1 or more, which can result in some quite impressive ritual successes.

2. Ibid.

Working with spirits allows magicians to increase these probability shifts even further. As spirits are beings of Form, they require no training in order to interact with their native environment of probability waves. If we declare a variable  $M$  as the probability shift that the magician can produce and a second variable  $S$  as the probability shift that a particular spirit can produce, the result of the magician conjuring the spirit should be a shift of  $M + S$ . So if the magician has trained to the point where his or her consciousness can produce a 20 to 1 shift but needs a 100 to 1 shift for a particular ritual to succeed, the solution is to summon a spirit that can produce a shift of at least 80 to 1. 20 plus 80 yields 100, which should in this case result in a successful outcome. The spirits of the mystical heptarchy seem to have  $S$  ratings of at least 100 according to my own probability tests, so they are capable of accomplishing much even when conjured by beginning magicians.

A common question regarding spirits is how they can possibly have any sort of independent existence if multiple magicians can summon the same spirit at the same time. Some have contended that this demonstrates spirits are simply psychological projections that originate in the mind of each magician, but the reality is more complex than this simple psychological model. Spirits are beings of Form, and are thus non-local entities. They exist within the field of probability functions that underlie material reality rather than occupying a particular place and time. In practice, conjuring a spirit is more like tuning your mind to a particular radio frequency than inviting a friend over for coffee. Like a radio signal the spirit can in effect be in many places at once, and it is from the connection between the mind of the magician and the consciousness of the spirit that magical probability shifts arise.

The function of the conjurations and ritual procedures is to establish such a connection in as clear a manner as possible. Once this is done, the Charge can be delivered to the spirit. It is necessary to communicate this Charge as clearly and succinctly as possible. In effect, you need to think like a lawyer. You want to make sure that all your bases are covered so that the spirits cannot misinterpret your commands or twist their meaning. Some of the old grimoires explain that this is necessary because the spirits will always try to mislead the magician out of animosity, but the truth is a lot more pedestrian: spirits are simply literal-minded and magick always seeks the path of least resistance. I have never come across a heptarchial spirit that was hostile to me but I have experienced a number of cases when I got what I asked for rather than what I wanted, especially back when I was starting out and did not understand how to construct a proper Charge.

For example, let's say that you cast a spell asking for a car. Which of these results is more likely – that a stranger on the street will walk up to you and hand over his vehicle, or that you might happen to find a toy car left in your yard by a neighbor's child? Furthermore, even if you encounter the former situation, what do you think the odds are that you will get to keep the car? Generally speaking, the only car that a random stranger is going to give to you is one that is stolen or worse. So you can't just say to the spirits "I command you to bring me a car." What will happen is the most likely outcome, in which the car is either a toy or a stolen vehicle that you have to return soon after receiving it. You need to specify that the car be drivable, that it will serve the function for which you intend to use it, and that you will be able to keep it for as long as you need it.

By the way, do you think it's impossible to summon a car using magick? Not true! Lon Milo DuQuette writes about doing exactly that in "My Life With The Spirits", and not only that, it took the spirit a mere twenty minutes, the car was drivable, and he got to keep it. The Charge in that case was not "bring me a car" but something to the effect of "bring me something that will help me turn my life around in the next twenty minutes." As he had no car with which to look for work and lived in California where a vehicle is pretty much a necessity, a toy car could never have fit the bill and only a real one would have sufficed. The car was a gift from a friend and was in bad enough shape that it was probably not worth selling but it ran for some time, allowing him to find a decent job and commute to it until he could afford to buy a better vehicle.<sup>3</sup>

One of the advantages of working with the heptarchial Kings and Princes is that they tend to be fairly intelligent as spirits go and have

3. Lon Milo DuQuette, My Life with the Spirits (York Beach, ME: Red Wheel / Weiser, 1999), 102-108.

some ability to divine your intent in addition to the exact meaning of your charge. In the Enochian system the length of a spirit's name will tell you roughly how "smart" they are. More letters means more intelligence, and more intelligence gives you a little more leeway in terms of the exactness of your charge. For example, the Great Table includes a class of malevolent spirits that Dee called the cacodemons. These spirits have three-letter names and can be powerful when used properly but are also particularly stupid in practice. They will do exactly as they are told — no more, no less. Angels such as the heptarchial Kings and Princes who have seven-letter names are much more intelligent and can think for themselves to a much greater degree. Nevertheless, a well-constructed charge will still help them focus on exactly what you want them to do and prevent any misunderstandings.

A charge consists of two parts, a series of Injunctions and a series of Limitations. The first explains what you want the spirit to do and the second explains what you do not want the spirit to do. As a simple example, let's say that you need money and summon a spirit to bring you five thousand dollars. There are number of ways in which such a demand could manifest, and some of them are things that you usually do not want. A death in the family could result in an inheritance. You or one of your children could be injured in a traffic accident and receive a settlement that covers little more than your medical bills. You could have a house fire that results in a settlement from your homeowner's insurance of the requested amount. Your car could be totaled in an accident, again bringing you the desired sum but requiring you to spend it on a new vehicle. And the list goes on. So a properly constructed charge in this case would be something to the effect of this:

I hereby command that you bring me the sum of five thousand dollars within one month (injunction), without causing harm or damage to myself, my loved ones, or my property (limitation).

Every injunction should be given an amount of time in which to work. This is necessary because while the magical probability shift results from the connection between you and a particular spirit, that channel can only produce a total probability shift of a particular magnitude. Think of it as a computer running programs. It can multitask, but as it does the processing power devoted to each program decreases. Without time limits on spells you can sometimes lose track of something that you have “running” and as a result the probability shift you can produce working with a particular spirit will be decreased. If the spell is given a time limit it will either terminate when its objective is achieved or when the time limit runs out.

A good way to work around the multitasking problem is to conjure different spirits for different tasks. Your personal magical power will still be divided among the spells that you have running, but the power of each spirit will not be if each is performing a single separate task. Going back to our equation, if a magician with  $M$  of 20 has two spells running involving different spirits, each with  $S$  of 100, the result will be  $(M/2) + S$ , yielding a probability shift of 110 to 1 for each spell. As you can see, especially with multiple spells, working with spirits is quite advantageous for any magician and can result in much greater effective power than even the best magician could achieve using only his or her mind and aptitudes. This is why practically all magical traditions involve working with spirits — because it really does produce better results.

In order to get the best possible results you should not specify the means by which your objective should be accomplished and rely only on the limitations contained as the second part of your charge to exclude specific undesirable outcomes. This is because you want to make sure that the objective of the spell is not accomplished in some way that undermines the result, but at the same time you want to keep as many paths open as possible for the effect to manifest. Often the best way that something can manifest in your life is not obvious, so it is better to focus on the end result in constructing your magical intent.

As in most medieval grimoires, the angels of the Heptarchia Mystica follow a particular spiritual hierarchy.

- King Carmara rules over all the Kings.
- King Carmara rules over Prince Hagonel.
- Prince Hagonel rules over all the Princes.
- Each King rules over the Prince of the corresponding day.

While the Heptarchia Mystica is unusual among grimoires in that this hierarchy is not reflected in the conjurations themselves, it can prove useful when constructing particular charges. If the day is such that you cannot summon the King or Prince that corresponds to the goal of your magical operation, you can instead summon Carmara or Hagonel and instruct them to command the King or Prince that you really want to summon to accomplish the desired task.

For example, let's say that you need to perform a practical operation attributed to Earth but the only day on which you can do the ritual is a Sunday. The Prince you really want to conjure is Butmono, to whom "the Keys of the Earth" are delivered, who can only be conjured on a Thursday. In order to accomplish your objective you could conjure and instruct Hagonel to order Butmono to accomplish your goal. The one limitation of this method is that your goal will not be set in motion until the next Thursday rolls around, since Butmono can only initiate actions on the appropriate day.

You will always want to make a note of your precise charge in your magical journal for every operation you perform. If a spell seems to have failed, you can then look back over your charge and see if anything happened that fit the literal instructions you gave but not your true intent. Similarly, if a spell seems particularly effective you will want to keep track of the charge so that you can use it as a model or basis for subsequent operations.

Chapter 13 Closing the Temple

Once you have summoned the proper angel and delivered your charge, the final step is to send the angel forth to accomplish your magical objective and close the temple. In traditional grimoire evocations, spirits are dismissed using a License to Depart, but no such license is present in the Dee material. Based on his reading of the Dee diaries, Robert Turner speculates that Heptarchial evocations were concluded with prayers of thanksgiving offered to the angels, but no record of what these prayers were has survived and Dee did not include them in the text of the Heptarchia Mystica.

I particularly like this License that my magical working group has been using for quite a few years. The original version was intended to work as a sort of “bookend” to the Fundamental Obeisance used as the preliminary invocation for opening the Great Table, but the version shown here has been modified for use with the Oration to God for conjurations of the heptarchial Kings and Princes. The references to True Will are explicitly Thelemic and are shown in italics because a Christian magician may want to omit them, though Saint Augustine’s comment that one should “love, and do what thou wilt”<sup>1</sup> implies to me that the concept of True Will is not necessarily incompatible with Christian magick.

You Angels of Light, I, [Your Magical Name], by the power of the True, Almighty, and Living God, I hereby bid you to depart and accomplish your appointed tasks, in the service of my True Will and to the Glory and Honour of our aforementioned True God to whom you owe loyalty and obedience. I, [Your Magical Name], hereby free the forces constrained, focused, and directed during this operation, that they may go forth and work their various powers upon the manifest universe, for thus is all True Magick and Perfect Power born. By the power of my True Will here embodied by the Magical Name [Your Magical Name], AMEN.

So mote it be.

In our group workings the individual who performed the conjuration gives the License to Depart up to AMEN, and the rest of the group responds with “So mote it be.” A solitary magician may wish to include or drop this final statement as desired. When working on my own I generally include it.

If you are working without the ceremonial forms you are essentially done at this point. Finish by knocking once on the Holy Table and stating “I now declare this temple duly closed.” When working with the ceremonial forms you will want to close the temple ceremonially before making this declaration. As the AOIVEAE and MADRIAX rituals are designed to encapsulate the evocation itself they should simply be concluded as shown in Chapter 7 prior to the declaration. If you are working with the Golden Dawn ritual forms the manner in which you conclude the operation depends upon its objective.

Today the various Golden Dawn orders generally teach that rituals should be concluded using both the Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram and the Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Hexagram. As I mentioned in Chapter 7, this is incorrect for most magical objectives

1. Augustine of Hippo, In Epistolam Ioannis ad Parthos.

because it completely shuts down the ritual as soon as you close the temple. Giving a practical charge more time to operate than the thirty to sixty minutes that are dedicated to a typical ceremonial working will dramatically increase your chances of success. This is accomplished by omitting the Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Hexagram from the closing of your ritual altogether.

For rituals with a target other than yourself you should close with the Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram. As the pentagram symbolizes the microcosm, this ritual will serve to clear your consciousness of the macrocosmic elements invoked during the rite but allow those elements to continue to operate after you close the temple. It cuts the link between your mind and the spell and, much as stated in the License to Depart, sends the macrocosmic forces back to their proper place so that they can get to work on accomplishing your objective.

For rituals targeting yourself or both yourself and an external target you should close with just the Qabalistic Cross. This serves to balance and ground your consciousness without dismissing the microcosmic elements that you invoked during the rite. Many spells are of this type — for example, if you cast a spell to get a better job you want opportunities to come your way but you also want the magick to affect your body language and attitude so that you seem particularly impressive when a potential employer sets up an interview.

If you are using the Thelemic Star Ruby and Star Sapphire to replace the Lesser Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram the same rules apply. Close with just the Star Ruby for a ritual with an external target or the Star Ruby's form of the Qabalistic Cross if the spell targets yourself or both yourself and an external target. I normally use the closing form of this Qabalistic Cross, ending rather than starting with "APO PANTOS KAKODAIMONOS," but I leave that to your discretion based on how you generally perform the ritual.

After performing the closing ceremonial forms, knock once on the Holy Table and declare the temple closed. Your ritual is now complete. At this point, you will want to keep the ritual out of mind while the angels work to accomplish your objective. Some authors contend that in order for a spell to work you must forget the objective completely, but this is difficult in practice and constitutes serious overkill. You can freely remember your working so long as you avoid obsessing or worrying about its outcome. Worry and obsession will undermine a spell just about every time, but simply thinking about it on occasion is harmless.

Chapter 14 Conclusion

Compared to the regions of the Great Table or Watchtowers, and Aires or Aethyrs, the realms inhabited by the angels of the “Heptarchia Mystica” remain relatively unexplored. The latter portions of the Enochian material have been extensively explored by modern magicians for more than a century, while the heptarchial angels have been treated by many as an interesting historical footnote without much practical magical application. As my magical working group found in the course of our exploration of the heptarchial realms this perspective is quite mistaken.

As a simple example, consider the footnote attached to the conjuration for Prince Befafes. If John Dee did indeed summon this Prince to defeat the Spanish Armada in 1588, this would be one of the few cases in history in which a magical grimoire played an important role in a well-documented major world event. For all the attention paid to grimoires such as the “Lemegeton” and the “Key of Solomon”, proponents of neither can substantiate similar claims during the entire medieval period or Renaissance. Perhaps another grimoire could have accomplished this feat, but the surviving text seems to imply that if Dee did take such an action it was the angels of the heptarchy to whom he turned.

Grimoire magicians should take note of this, whether they work along strictly traditional lines or incorporate modern ritual forms and structures. My magical working group found that when conjured properly the angels of the heptarchy are both agreeable to magicians and capable of accomplishing much in terms of practical results. Still, even this discovery barely scratches the surface of their true potential, and I invite anyone who has an interest in working grimoire magick to join in and correspond with us regarding their own work with the Kings and Princes.

Secrecy and suppression have set magick back centuries compared to the physical sciences on which our technology is based. In order to bring the art and science of the Magi back into the light of experimental inquiry we must pool our resources and work to develop a standard body of knowledge that is subject to empirical verification and peer review. Since magick involves the workings of consciousness, this is more difficult than it is with hard sciences such as physics, but the science of psychology has confronted the same difficulties and developed many effective methodologies for working with hard-to-define aspects of our experience, such as states of mind.

It is my sincere hope that we as magicians will be able to accomplish the same. Further ritual exploration of the mystical heptarchy may bring us closer to that goal and at the same time provide us with better tools to shape our lives into what we imagine they could be. Study has its place, but in the end there is no substitute for getting on with the work.

Comselh Ananael
Heptarchial Evocation Ritual*

Comselh Ananael is the name that my magical working group chose when we began doing group ritual work in 2002. Since that time we have explored both the Tree of Life and the Enochian universe, and worked extensively with elemental, planetary, and zodiacal forces. Our work with the Heptarchial Kings and Princes was performed using the following ritual, derived from the template found in chapter 6. The ritual has been optimized numerous times over the years and we have found this version to be quite effective for both individual and group operations.

As we work the system from the Thelemic perspective, the ritual structure reflects that rather than the Christian perspective of John Dee and Edward Kelley. Still, much of the methodology is true to the original spirit of the work even when it incorporates modern ceremonial forms.

0. The Temple

The ritual space is set up as explained in Chapter 5. A scrying stone or mirror is placed on the altar cloth above the center of the Sigillum Dei Aemeth. If possible the four smaller Seals should be placed under each of the altar table's four legs. The closer the Temple can be to the Enochian ideal, the better the system will work.

There are two officers in this ritual, Magus and the Scryer. Magus acts as the Officiant and should wear the Enochian ring and lamen. The officers and all others present should wear white robes. The Scryer attempts to contact the conjured spirit or spirits using the mirror or crystal.

The bell chime is placed on western edge of the Table. This should be a chime that can be rung easily with one hand. The Scryer will be ringing it when the Angel or Angels appear, so it must not require much attention to operate. Because of this, its exact position should be left to the Scryer's discretion. A low stool for the Scryer is placed to the west of the altar. It should be of such a height that the stone or mirror is at the Scryer's eye level.

The talisman for the King and Prince of the day is placed on the floor to the west of the altar. It should be reasonable large, since the Magus must stand upon it with both feet when reciting the conjuration. The designs for the talismans are those found in Chapter 11.

I. Opening

All form a circle around the altar. Magus initially stands directly west of the altar and Scryer stands directly east. Magus inhales fully, placing the banishing dagger at his or her lips. The air is then expelled as the dagger is swept backwards.

Magus:

Bahlasti! Ompehda!

Magus then performs the AOIVEAE up to the closing as explained in Chapter 7, moving around the Table and casting in the direction of the Scryer who concentrates on receiving the evoked energies. All present rotate accordingly, so that the entire circle of assembled magicians turns like a wheel as the Magus moves to face each quarter. The idea here is to conjure a line of force that originates with the Magus, passes over or through the stone or mirror, and is received by the Scryer at each of the Temple's four quarters.

Magus:

We take refuge in Nuit, the blue-lidded daughter of sunset, the naked brilliance of the voluptuous night sky, as we issue the call to the awakened nature of all beings, for every man and every woman is a star.

All:

AUMGN.

Magus:

We take refuge in Hadit, the secret flame that burns in every heart of man and in the core of every star, as we issue the call to our own awakened natures, arousing the coiled serpent about to spring.

All:

AUMGN.

Magus:

We take refuge in Heru-Ra-Ha, who wields the wand of double power, the wand of the force of Coph Nia, and whose left hand is empty for he has crushed an universe and naught remains, as we unite our awakened natures with those of all beings everywhere and everywhen, dissolving all obstacles and healing all suffering.

All:

AUMGN.

Magus:

For pure will, unassuaged of purpose, delivered from the lust of result, is every way perfect.

All:

All is pure and present are and has always been so, for existence is pure joy; all the sorrows are but as shadows; they pass and done; but there is that which remains. To this realization we commit ourselves — pure and total presence. So mote it be.<sup>1</sup>

II. The Magical Field

Magus performs the MADRIAX up to the closing as explained in Chapter 7. As with the AOEVEAE, all present rotate accordingly.

Magus:

MADRIAX CARMARA, YOLCAM LONSHI!

Magus makes the Sign of Rending the Veil, placing hands back to back and then drawing them apart as though opening a heavy curtain.

III. The Preliminary Invocation

All make the Sign of Apophis and Typhon facing the center of the table.

Magus:

*Holy art Thou, who art Universe,
Holy art Thou, who art in Nature formed,
Holy art Thou, the Vast and the Mighty,
Source of Darkness, Source of Light.<sup>2</sup>*

All make the Sign of Silence, then clasp hands over hearts.

Magus recites the Revised Oration to God as explained in Chapter 7.

Magus:

O Almighty, Eternal, True and Living God: O King of Glory: O Lord of Hosts: O Thou, who art Heaven

---

1. This section of the opening following the AOEVEAE is adapted from the Refuge and Bodhichitta practices of Vajrayana Buddhism, but has been modified so as to fit with Thelemic cosmology.

2. This revised wording for the Golden Dawn adoration of the Lord of the Universe is adapted from the rituals of the Open Source Order of the Golden Dawn.

and Earth and all things visible and invisible: we beseech Thee in this our present petition to have mercy and compassion upon us, who, faithfully and sincerely of long time have made suit unto Thy Divine Majesty, that we may obtain true Gnosis and full understanding of Thy Divine Wisdom, Power and Goodness. And whereas it has pleased Thee of Thy infinite Goodness, by Thy faithful and holy Spiritual Messengers, to deliver unto us long since an orderly form and manner of Exercise Heptarchial: how, to Thy Honor and Glory, and the comfort of our own souls and of others Thy faithful servants, we may at all times use very many of Thy Holy Angels, their counsels and helps: according to the properties of such their functions and offices, as to them, by Thy Divine Power, Wisdom and Goodness is assigned and limited. Therefore, we heartily and faithfully beseech Thy Divine Majesty to further this our present industry and endeavor to Exercise ourselves, according to the aforesaid orderly form and manner. Grant also unto us this blessing and portion of Thy Heavenly Graces: that thou wilt forthwith enable us, make us apt, and acceptable in body, Soul, and Spirit to enjoy always the Holy and friendly conversation, with the sensible, plain, full and perfect help in word and deed of Thy Mighty, Wise and Good Spiritual Messengers and Ministers generally: and namely of Blessed Michael, Blessed Gabriel, Blessed Raphael and Blessed Uriel: and also, especially of all those which do appertain unto the Heptarchical Mystery and the Mystery of the Great Table. Reveal unto us Thy Majestical Glory, now and forever, through Thy Ministers, the true and faithful Angels of Light.

All:

AMEN. AMEN. AMEN.

Magus rings bell chime.

IV. The Conjunction

The Scryer moves to the west of the altar and is seated at the Holy Table, gazing into the stone or mirror. Magus stands behind the Scryer and all other participants remain in a circle around the Table.

Magus recites the First Key, in Angelic followed by English, and Scryer then recites the Second Key, in Angelic followed by English, as explained in Chapter 9.

Magus performs the Greater Invoking Ritual of the Hexagram for the planet corresponding to the King or Prince, as explained in Chapter 10. Again, all present rotate accordingly except for the Scryer, who remains seated.

Magus then steps onto the talisman and recites the appropriate conjunction for the King or Prince of the Day, depending upon the objective of the rite, as explained in Chapter 11.

Following the conjunction all begin to chant the name of the King or Prince as they visualize the divine light descending into the stone or mirror. When the Scryer sees a vision, he or she rings the bell chime and the chant ends.

V. Charge / Communication

The contents of this section depend on the nature of the ritual as explained in Chapter 12. Either questions should be asked of the summoned King or Prince through the Scryer, as Dee and Kelly did when they received the original system, or the King or Prince should be charged with a particular task. In the latter case, be sure to make note of the exact wording of the Charge.

VI. The License to Depart

Magus gives the License to Depart as explained in Chapter 13. This version of the License is slightly different from the one found in that chapter but will work just as well.

Magus:

O thou [King or Prince's Name], because thou hast diligently answered unto our demands, and hast been very ready and willing to come at our call, we do here license thee to depart unto thy proper place; without causing harm or danger unto man or beast. Depart, then, I say, and be thou very ready to come at our call, being duly exorcised and conjured by these sacred rites of magick. We charge thee to withdraw peaceably and quietly, and the peace of the Almighty, Eternal, True, and Living God be ever continued between us. AMEN.

All:

So mote it be!

Magus then concludes the MADRIAX as explained in Chapter 7.

Magus:

MADRIAX CARMARA, ADRPAN LONSHI!

Magus makes the Sign of Closing the Veil, bringing both hands together with palms facing as though closing a set of heavy curtains. Scryer then rises and joins the circle, standing opposite Magus.

VII. Closing

All:

May the benefit of this act and all acts be dedicated unto the complete liberation and supreme enlightenment of all beings everywhere, pervading space and time. So mote it be. May the benefits of practice, ours and others', come to fruition ultimately and immediately and we remain in a state of presence. AH!<sup>3</sup>

Magus concludes the AOIVEAE as explained in Chapter 7.

Magus:

I now declare this temple duly closed.

One knock with banishing dagger. The rite is at an end.

Master the Mystical Heptarchy

Dr. John Dee, England's most famous Renaissance magus, spent seven years working with scribe Edward Kelley in the late sixteenth century. Together the two men established contact with various angels who endeavored to teach them a new spiritual system described as the true art of magick.

Dee's diaries chronicling these communications formed the basis of the Enochian magical system, which has profoundly influenced the development of ritual magick for centuries and is reputed by many to be especially effective.

"The Heptarchia Mystica" is the only part of the Enochian system that Dee ever managed to assemble into a usable grimoire, but paradoxically it also seems to be the most overlooked portion of his work. Author Scott Michael Stenwick presents this material in a coherent manner suitable for both modern magicians and traditional grimoire practitioners, with an eye towards producing measurable, practical results. The powers of the Heptarchial Kings and Princes are extensive, and yet conjuring and conversing with them is a relatively simple process.

Unlock the secrets of this remarkable Grimoire, and employ them to transform your life.

About the Editor/Translator

Geoffrey James' experience with the history of magick dates back to his college years, when he studied medieval and Renaissance literature. Geoffrey received a degree in English magna cum laude from the University of California, Irvine, where he was the Rhodes Scholarship candidate and was elected Phi Beta Kappa. After graduating, he moved into the computer industry where he has advised Fortune 500 companies on emerging technology. He has traveled worldwide, written numerous books and articles, spoken at major industry conferences, and taught university extension courses. Today, when not traveling, Geoffrey lives and writes in a hexagonal house on a boulder-strewn hilltop in the New England woods. His current interests include Taoism, Chi Kung, Tai Chi, and the spiritual revolution in corporate America.

behind the scenes, preserving the great man's work for posterity. Such tantalizing speculation is unlikely to be confirmed, however. It is interesting to note, in this regard, that a form of Enochian lettering appears in certain editions of Mackey's Masonic Encyclopedia. It is, however, unlike Dee's Enochian alphabet.

I'm often asked the question: "Are the Enochian angels real?" Usually I pawn the questioner off with an evasive remark like: "Doctor Dee certainly thought that they were." This is pure editorial cowardice on my part and I believe I owe the reader the questionable benefit of my own opinion on the subject.

As I best understand it, Enochian angels are unlikely to be "real" in the sense of being composed out of atoms, particle waves, or quantifiable material. On the other hand, I believe that angels may represent aspects of the human consciousness that all of us share. In that way, they exist in collective unconscious, which is, in some ways at least, more "real" than the physical world.

Another question I'm also asked is: "Have you ever tried Enochian magic?" This question I will leave unanswered. I shall, however, mention that I remember feeling uneasy when I was working on the original material. I had a quite distinct sensation that somebody was looking over my shoulder, a sensation that tickled the hairs on the back of my neck. Other Enochian scholars have related similar experiences.

It's an undeniable fact that curious things happen to people who are interested in this arcane subject. This edition is a result of such an event. Nancy J. Mostad, Acquisitions and Development Manager at Llewellyn, dreamed about Enochian magic and was given a copy of my book, just a few days before I contacted her. But for this possibly fortuitous dream, you might not be holding this book in your hands.

PREFACE

Geoffrey James

THE ENOCHIAN EVOCATION is based on the magical diaries & workbooks of Doctor John Dee, the famous Elizabethan scientist and magus. These manuscripts document the ceremonies that Dee performed with Edward Kelly, who, gazing into a crystal stone, claimed to see and hear angels. According to Kelly, these beings desired to re-establish the true art of Magic, which had been lost due to Man's wickedness and ignorance. The true magical art (they claimed) would bequeath superhuman powers upon its practitioners, change the political structure of Europe, and herald the coming of the Apocalypse.

Dee believed that this research was of great benefit to Mankind and far more important than his more mundane studies. Dee explained his dissatisfaction with worldly knowledge:

*I have from my youth up, desired and prayed unto God for pure and sound wisdom and understanding of truths natural and artificial, so that God's wisdom, goodness, and power bestowed in the frame of the world might be brought in some bountiful measure under the talent of my capacity. . . So for many years and in many places, far and near, I have sought and studied many books in sundry languages, and have conferred with sundry men, and have laboured with my own reasonable discourse, to find some inkling, gleam, or beam of those radical truths. But after all my endeavours I could find no other way to attain such wisdom but by the Extraordinary Gift, and not by any vulgar school, doctrine, or human invention.**

Dee felt that only through the practice of magic would he be able to learn those 'radical truths.' Like Luther, Dee rejected the necessity of the church as an intermediary to God. But Dee carried this doctrine one step further, believing that holy revelations could be obtained by practicing the magic of the ancient Hebrews:

I had read in books and records how Enoch enjoyed God's favor and conversation, and how God was familiar with Moses, and how good angels were sent to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joshua, Gideon, Esdras, Daniel, Tobias, and sundry others, to instruct them, inform them and help them in worldly and domestic affairs, and even sometimes to satisfy their desires, doubts, and questions of God's secrets. Furthermore, I considered the Shewstone which the high priests did use, by God's own ordering, wherein they had lights and judgements in their great doubts. I considered, too, that God did not refuse to instruct the prophets and seers to give answers to the common people concerning economics, as Samuel did for Saul; and so did Solomon the wise, immediately after attaining his wonderful wisdom through God. Therefore I was sufficiently taught and confirmed that I would never attain wisdom by man's hand or by human power, but only from God, directly or indirectly.†

Realizing the heretical aspects of these beliefs at a time when magic was perceived as questionable at best and at worst diabolic, Dee was vehement in his rejection of the 'black arts':

I have always had a great regard and care to beware of the filthy abuse of such as willingly or wittingly invoke or consult with spiritual creatures of the damned sort: angels of darkness, forgers, patrons of lies and untruths. Instead I have flown unto God through hearty prayer, full oft and in sundry manners.‡

Dee discovered that he was unable to perceive spirits on his own, and so was forced to employ skryers or crystal gazers. The most prolific of Dee's skryers was Edward Kelly, a man of mediocre education whose main interest was alchemy. Kelly originally asked to work with Dee because Kelly believed that with divine aide they might discover the philosopher's stone that would transmute lead into gold. Dee was hesitant at first, but when they performed a simple ceremony, it was far more successful than anything Dee had ever experienced:

† Ibidem

‡ Ibidem

*Thereupon I brought forth to him my stone in the frame (which was given me of a friend) and I said unto him, that I was credibly informed that to it (after a sort) were answerable various good Angels . . . He then settled himself to the Action: and on his knees at my desk, setting the stone before him, fell to prayer and entreaty. In the mean space, I in my oratory did pray and make motion to God & his good Creatures for the furthering of this Action. And within a quarter of an hour (or less) he had sight of one in the stone.**

Kelly's skrying was destined to produce what is perhaps the most unusual magical literature of the Renaissance.

Was Kelly a charlatan who fabricated visions out of his own imagination? Historians have traditionally cast Kelly as a fraud who deluded his pious master†, but the evidence perhaps does not justify this judgement. It is true that Kelly accepted £50 per year for his services to Dee‡ but such annuities were the basis for survival in Elizabethan times. Far from encouraging Dee, Kelly eventually began to question the angelic nature of the spirits, and frequently tried to extricate himself from Dee's employ*. Kelly might, of course, have been applying reverse psychology, but there is little reason why he should have bothered to do so, as Dee was already determined to continue the experimentation. If Kelly had been trying to plunder Dee's money, why would Kelly have tried to convince Dee that the spirits were devils?

It is difficult to account for the serious stylistic differences between Kelly's usual writing style and the utterances that he attributed to the spirits. Kelly was an uninspired writer; the following excerpt is representative of his prowess:

*The heavenly cope hath in him nature's fower
Two hidden, but the rest to sight appear:
Wherein the sperms of all the bodies lower
Most secrett are, yett spring forth once a yeare...§*

§ A. E. Waite, ed., The Alchemical Writings of Edward Kelly, Weiser, New York: 1973, p. liii.

Contrast those stilted and awkward lines with the Call of the Thirty Aires:

*The work of man and his pomp,
let them be defaced:
His buyldings
Let them become caves for the beasts of the fielde:
Confownd her understanding with darkness.
For why?
It repenteth me I made Man.*

It seems impossible that this powerful passage could have been written by the same hand, or that Kelly's own writing skill could have produced such passages of eldritch beauty as:

*Can the wings of the windes understand your voyces of wonder?...
Stronger are your fete than the barren stone:
And mightier are your voices than the manifold windes....*

Admittedly, stylistic differences are subtle gauges of authorship. But more concrete evidence against Kelly fabricating all his visions lies in the complexity of the Angelical (Enochian) keys. Could Kelly, whose single linguistic accomplishment was mastery of schoolboy Latin and even whose English was laced with colloquialisms, have devised an entire language, with its own unique grammar and syntax? It took Tolkien, a professor of philology, years to fabricate the Elvish tongue that figures so largely in his work; if Kelly fabricated the keys, he would have had to do so in a matter of days.

In short, if Kelly was the conscious author of all his 'visions', then he possessed a far greater literary competence than he ever exhibited elsewhere. However, the subconscious mind is often capable of feats that are impossible to the conscious mind. Could Kelly have hallucinated the visions? It has been suggested that Dee may have propelled Kelly into a state of artificial psychosis with their ceremonies.† Kelly may also have had multiple personalities, for the spirits talk in biblical dialects quite different from Kelly's normal speech.

Kelly was having trouble distinguishing between his own thoughts and those of the 'spirits'. He complained of:

...a great stir and moving in his brains, very sensible and distinct, as of a creature of human shape and lineaments going up and down, to and fro in his brains and within his skull.‡

Dee was forcing Kelly to perform ceremonies on an almost daily basis, and for hours at a stretch. Reflecting this stress, Kelly's temper became extremely volatile as shown by this event that Dee recorded:

*Suddenly E. K. fell into such a rage that...much ado I, Emericus, and his brother had to stop or hold him...At length we let him go in his doublet and hose, without a cap or hat on his head: and into the street he hastened with his brother's rapier drawn... The rage and fury was so great in words and gesture as might plainly prove that the wicked enemy sought either E. K. his own destroying himself, or of me, or of his brother.**

Kelly's behaviour was so bizarre that Dee was afraid that Kelly was possessed by the devil, one of the time's standard diagnoses for insanity. Dee had recently discovered that Kelly was performing black magic independent of their work together. This horrified Dee so much that he noted the event in Latin, even in his own private diary:

Horrenda & multiplicia heresium, & blasphemiarum dogmata, quibus illi hostes Jesu Christi illum imbuerant...illisque malis Angelis renunciare, & omnes illorum fraudes deteger... Conversio E. K. ad Deum, abdicatis omnibus Diabolicis experimentis.§

The 'horrible heresies' that the 'evil angels' had revealed to Kelly were, in the context of the time, insane. They questioned the entire fabric on which the culture was built. Dee recorded these heresies in his diary:

‡ Casaubon, op. cit., p. 328.

* Ibidem, p. 230.

§ Ibidem, p. 164: Manifold horrible heresies and blasphemous doctrines, in which they eat the host of Jesus Christ ... but he was led to put aside these evil angels and all their frauds... I spoke with E. K. about God, telling him to give over all his Diabolical experiments.

They would have persuaded (Kelly):

—That Jesus was not God.

—That no prayer ought to be made to Jesus.

—That there is no sin.

—That man's soul doth go from one body to another child's quickening —That as many men and women as are now, have always been.

—That the generation of mankind from Adam and Eve, is not an History, but a writing which has another sense.*

Kelly could not have entertained such notions without being profoundly disturbed by their implications, and his conversion back to orthodoxy indicates his remorse and guilt. There is little question that Kelly was exhibiting signs of extreme stress and possible psychosis while working with Dee.

Kelly's participation in private magical ceremonies raises the tantalizing possibility that he might have had access to magical texts of which Dee was not aware, and that may have served as source material for the Enochian Evocation. Although Israel Regardie states that there is absolutely no trace of any part of the Enochian magical system or Angelical language in Europe†; that viewpoint is not entirely justified. While it is true that the Angelical keys are very different from, for example, the bastardized Arabic and Greek in various Solomonic grimoires, elements of the Enochian Evocation are similar and in some cases almost identical to other Renaissance magical texts.

Both the Arbatel‡ and the Heptameron§ are arranged like Book Two of the Enochian Evocation, with conjurations addressed to the rulers of each day of the week. The sigil of Æmeth, also in Book Two, is apparently based upon an earlier sigil that appears in the Sworn Book of Honourius¶, a manuscript that antedated Kelly by almost 300 years. Of course, the entire methodology for devising spirit sigils out of magical squares of numbers and or letters was described in detail by Cornelius Agrippa c. 1533.**

Renaissance Europe did contain books of evocation magic attributed to Enoch. The very year the keys were dictated, Reginald Scot complained:

*Conjurors carrie about at this daie, bookes intituled under the names of Adam, Abel, Tobie, & Enoch; which Enoch they repute the most divine fellow in such matters*.*

Could Kelly have been utilizing such a book to assist him in his private ceremonies, or to provide the material that Dee so incessantly demanded? Kelly was certainly guilty of some plagiarism, although it may have been subconscious, for it was Kelly rather than Dee, who discovered the plagiarism and reported it to Dee:

(Kelly) came speedily out of his Study, and brought in his hand one volume of Cornelius Agrippa his works... whereupon he inferred, that our spiritual Instructors were Cosenors to give us a description of the world, taken out of other Books...†

Dee, somewhat surprised, replied: I am very glad that you have a Book of your own, wherein these Geographical names are expressed†. Dee's ignorance of the exact contents of the library that Kelly kept in his study is extremely suspicious.

If Kelly was plagiarizing some as-yet undiscovered manuscript, it may have been Gnostic in origin, as significant parallels exist between the Angelical keys and certain Gnostic texts. For example, a typical incantation from the Pistis Sophia: ZAMA ZAMA OZZA RACHAMA OZAT‡ is not Angelical, but the overuse of the 'Z' phoneme is characteristic of Angelical, and the repetition of the word ZAMA echoes the refrain ZACAR CA ZAMRAN that permeates the keys. Another linguistic similarity is the Gnostic name for the demiurge IALDABAOth,§ quite close to the Angelical IAD BALTOH for 'God of Righteousness.'

The Gnostics tended to treat Enoch as a special personage, because he was the first mortal to speak with God after the fall, and so the first to attain the gnosis that they sought§. The Gnostics attributed works of magic to Enoch, such as the two great Books of IEOU, which Enoch wrote when I spoke with him from the Tree of Knowledge, which were in the paradise of Adam*. The word IEOU suggests that the books contained conjurations with words much like those of the Pistis Sophia or the Angelical keys; the legendary origin of the Books in the garden of Eden recalls the claim that the Angelical language was that which Adam verily spake in innocence.

Like many Gnostic texts, the Angelical keys emphasize the opening of 'gates' into various mystical realms. The Book of the Great Logos, a Gnostic text associated with the Books of IEOU, contains the following passage:

The guardians of the Gates of the treasure will open them, and they will pass upwards and ever inwards through the following spaces, and the powers rejoicing and giving them their mysteries, seals, and names of power: the Orders of the Three Amens...Within each treasure is a Door or Gate, and without three Gates; each of the outer gates has three guardians.†

Compare the above passage with the following from Kelly's scrying:

Every table hath his key, every key openeth his gate, and every gate being opened, giveth knowledge of himself, of the entrance, and the mysteries of those things whereof he is an enclosure. Within these Palaces you shall find things that are of power...for every Palace is above his City and every City is above his Entrance.‡

Both Gnostic and Angelical magic place emphasis on the number 49. For example, the Pistis Sophia states that the reflection of the supernal projections, powers, or co-partners of the Sophia [when] looked at from without, make an ordering into forty-nine,§ while the apocryphal Books of the Savior state that no mystery is higher than the mysteries ye seek after, save only the mystery of the Seven Voices and the Nine-and-Forty Powers and Numbers.* These 49 powers recall the 49 good angels or even the Angelical keys themselves, which Kelly's spirits described as:

49 voyces, or callings, which are the Natural Keys, to open...Gates of understanding...you shall have knowledge to move every Gate, and to call out as many as you please...and wisely open unto you the secrets of their Cities...†

The possibility that Kelly did plagiarize large portions of the Enochian Evocation would do much to explain the presence of the Angelical language in his scrying, as well as the stylistic variations in his work. However, the similarity between Kelly's scrying and Gnostic magic, while undeniable, is not sufficiently strong to build a direct textual connection.

A serious objection to the theory that Kelly plagiarized visions is the way that the keys were revealed. The first five keys were dictated, letter by letter, backwards, while the rest were dictated forwards, without any significant errors. The bulk of the keys (over 1000 words) were dictated on a single day during a single session. Most of the English glosses were dictated on a single day, well after the Angelical, yet they match their Angelical counterparts almost perfectly. Kelly would have had to be capable of extraordinary feats of mnemonic virtuosity, if he utilized another magical text as source material for the keys.

A final possibility deserves discussion—was Kelly ever actually in contact with supernatural entities? In fact, the Dee-Kelly ceremonies contain some evidence that would seem to indicate the presence of the supernatural during some of the ceremonies.

One standard test for the presence of the supernatural is precognition of future events. This took place at least twice during the Dee-Kelly workings; the spirits predicted the Spanish armada and the execution of Mary Queen of Scots well before those events could have been known.¶ However, the 'spirits' predicted other events that never took place.

† Casaubon, op. cit., p. 77.

¶ Donald C. Laycock, The Complete Enochian Dictionary, London: Askin, 1978, p. 38.

Another classic test for the presence of the supernatural is the speaking of a tongue with which the possessed is not familiar. During one ceremony, Kelly began repeating Greek words, but he soon became frustrated and interrupted with: Unless you speak some language that I can understand, I will express no more of this Ghybbrish§. Curiously, the Greek translates into a warning to Dee not to trust Kelly.

But the Angelical language itself forms a more startling example of 'speaking in tongues', because it exhibits characteristics that would seem to indicate that it was designed to be a non-spoken language. As Da Vinci had pointed out nearly 100 years before the keys were dictated, spirits would be unable to make audible sounds on their own, due to a lack of vocal chords with which to vibrate the air*.

Thus any 'language' that spirits would 'speak' would be radically different from a language intended for use by human beings. Onomatopœiæ would be totally lacking. Contractions would be used to create new concepts, rather than to smooth out pronunciation. Many words would feature strings of consonants rather than an easily-pronounced intermix of vowels and consonants. The letter arrangement would appear somewhat random and more like a Cabbala than a spoken tongue. And finally, the system of numbers would not be based on 10, since along with a lack of vocal chords, non-material entities would have little use for fingers.

The Angelical language exhibits most of these characteristics. There are no onomatopœiæ in Angelical. Angelical contractions such as TELOCVOVIM and JADOIASMOMA are conceptually convenient, but have not been edited for easier pronunciation. Many Angelical words feature unpronounceable strings of consonants. Angelical letter arrangements appear to be random†, and the language is stated to be the source language for Hebrew and thus Cabbala is implied. Finally, Angelical numbers are incomprehensible using any known base or numbering scheme‡.

† Laycock, op. cit., p. 40.

‡ Ibidem, p. 44.

The compiler of the Enochian dictionary, on the other hand, asserts that the Angelical language is English-like both in word order and in pronunciation. Since the exact character of the Angelical language is essential to an understanding of The Enochian Evocation, Laycock's theory must be examined in some detail.

Laycock gives an example where English is the only language that matches the Angelical§. But the keys include many other passages where the Angelical phrasing makes for extremely awkward English. For example, NIISO CRIP IP NIDALI is glossed as Come awaye, but not your noyses. Since this is addressed to the Thunderers of Judgement and Wrath, what is probably meant by NIISO CRIP IP NIDALI is leave wherever you are and come here, but don't make thundering noises. The Angelical language expresses the concept much more succinctly than is possible in English. Again, the Angelical word TELOCVOVIM is glossed as him that is saln [fallen], but is actually a contraction of TELOCH (death) and VOVIN (dragon), literally 'death-dragon'—a reference to Satan's transformation during his fall. Words like TELOCVOVIM are much more Germanic than English-like. In short, the Angelical language is no more English-like than any other non-English language; the fact that there are some matches is not significant.

Laycock states that the Angelical language has English pronunciations. Unfortunately, Kelly never, as the spirits' 'mouthpiece', pronounced the Angelical words. Kelly dictated letter by letter from a table that he saw in the crystal, as shown from Kelly's description that Dee recorded:

[The angel] hath a rod or wand in his hand...it is of Gold...He standeth upon his round table of Christal or rather Mother of Pearl: There appear an infinite number of letters on the same, as thick as can stand by another...He standeth and pointeth with his rod to the letters of his Table, as if he made some account or reckoning*.

Furthermore, if Angelical letter arrangement has random characteristics, as Laycock claims, then the English-like pronunciation cannot be an inherent quality of the language itself. Far more likely is that Dee assigned pronunciations to the Angelical because he wished to speak the keys in a ceremony, and, being English, adapted them as well as he could to his native tongue. Indeed, outside of few minor suggestions, the spirits seem unconcerned with pronunciation. The Angelical language in its basic form makes few concessions to the human vocal chord.

§ Ibidem, p. 43.

* Casaubon, op. cit., p. 73.

Of course, one must keep in mind that Kelly might have plagiarized the keys; in any case, whoever or whatever devised the keys made a viable attempt to simulate a 'language' designed for non-material beings.

The final and most dramatic evidence for the presence of the supernatural is a telekinetic phenomenon that Dee himself witnessed and described:

*There appeared a great flame of fire in the principal Stone....Suddenly one seemed to come in at the fourth window of the Chappel... the stone was heaved up a handfull high and set down again. The one at the window seemed... with spread-abroad arms to come to E. K., at which sight, he shrinked back somewhat, and then that Creature took up between both his hands the stone and frame of gold, and mounted up away as he came E. K. caught at it, but he could not touch it...E. K. was in a great fear and trembling and had tremorem cordis for a while. But I was very glad and well pleased*.*

Although it is true that this event could easily be reproduced using modern techniques of prestidigitation, stage magic in the 16th century was much too crude to produce such an illusion†. If Kelly had some trick of making a crystal rise and fly out a window, he could have made far more than £50 a year performing this feat for the public. Kelly's reaction to the event is revealing; Dee apparently listened to his heart and noticed tremors, a condition that Kelly would have found difficult to simulate. Kelly seems genuinely affected, but the cold and clinical Dee declared that he was glad and well pleased. The event proved to Dee, beyond the shadow of all doubt, that they were in contact with supernatural powers.

† Vide, Scot, op. cit., Book XIII, Chapter XXXIV, for a description of the primitive stage illusions of the 16th Century.

Was Kelly a charlatan, a psychotic, a plagiarist, or a true skryer? The distinction was non-existent in Kelly's own mind, because differentiating between these states required a well-defined sense of reality. There is no simple explanation for Kelly's actions. He believed in the spirits, yet he fabricated and plagiarized. He exhibited the signs of psychosis, yet manifested extraordinary linguistic and telekinetic phenomena. Forced on an almost daily basis into abnormal psychological and hypnotic states, plagued by the constant fear of damnation, convinced to let his life be controlled by 'angels' that were either manifestations of his diseased subconscious or of strange otherworldly presences—all these served to blur Kelly's perception of reality.

It is ironic that Kelly is so often viewed as victimizing Dee. Kelly was forced to stay with Dee because the money that the doctor gave him supported Kelly's wife and brother. When Kelly tried to leave, Dee would coerce him to remain by playing on his guilt and fear. It was Dee, not Kelly, who was gaining the benefit from the magical ceremonies, for it sated his lust for 'radical truths'.

A single incident epitomizes the difference between the attitudes of the two men. The spirits demanded that Dee and Kelly have sexual relations with each other's wives. Whether the suggestion came from Kelly's subconscious or from some other source is not important; what is important is the reactions of the two men.

Kelly was appalled and, in a rare lucid moment, insisted that Dee include a written protest in his magical diaries:

*I, Edward Kelly, by good and provident determination and consideration in these former Actions, that is to say, appearances, shews made, and voyces uttered...have from the beginning thereof (which at large by the records appeareth) not only doubted and disliked their insinuations and doctrine but also at diverse and sundry times... sought to depart from the exercises thereof...they manifestly [have] urged and commanded in the name of God a Doctrine Damnable and contrary to the Laws of God.**

* Casaubon, op. cit., Second page 17.

Dee had his own doubts, and for the first time calls the spirits 'apparitions'.† But Dee was not willing to admit that the 'radical truths' might have had a less than divine origin, and, against all the protests of Kelly and the two wives (who 'disliked utterly this last doctrine'), Dee drew up an elaborate contract that included the following stipulation:

*this doctrine and doings should unto no mortal man be disclosed, but among us onely the above-named four to be kept most secret... we all and every four of us do request...that the sudden and immediate death may light and fall onto the discloser and on him or her to whom the same doctrine or doing any manner of way shall be disclosed or known*.*

Thus the hypocritical Dee was willing to pretend that he was following the commandments of God, but asked for death for anyone who found out about it.

The ceremonies continued for some time, possibly pushing Kelly beyond the limits of sanity. After splitting with Dee, he foolishly proclaimed (and perhaps believed himself) that he had indeed discovered the Philosopher's Stone. Finally, in another manic rage, he murdered a man and was imprisoned for the rest of his life. When finally given the opportunity to escape from his tower prison, he fell (or jumped?) to his death§.

Dee felt no guilt for any of his magical experiments, and continually protested his own innocence of any wrongdoing:

The great losses and damages which I have sustained do not grieve my heart so much as the rash, lewd, fond, and most untrue fables and reports of me and my philosophical studies... The works of my hands and the words of my mouth bear lively witness to the thoughts of my heart and inclination of my mind§§.

Even in the last years of his life, Dee was willing to stand trial for Witchcraft, convinced that even the repressive courts under

James the First would acquit him.*

Dee's quest was a spiritual one and his sincere intention was to bring God's wisdom to Mankind. Dee tried to extend the power of Man beyond the threshold of science. While Dee's fanaticism and blind faith in the reality of Kelly's skrying caused others to suffer, one must admit that Dee himself did not escape unscathed. Once the news of his magical practices had become public knowledge, his house and belongings were partially destroyed by a mob of ignorant peasants. And despite the spirits' promises of vast treasures, Dee died in abject poverty, still practicing magic to the end of his days.†

The Enochian Evocation reveals those magical arts, those 'radical truths' for which Doctor John Dee, the foremost scientist and magus of his time, risked his reputation, the virtue of his wife, the sanity of his friend, and the salvation of his own soul.

BOOK ONE THE MAGICK OF ENOCH

CHAPTER I.

THE FALL OF MAN

§1. The Garden of Eden.

MAN, IN HIS CREATION, BEING MADE AN INNOCENT, WAS also authorized and made partaker of the Power and Spirit of God. He not only knew all things under Creation and spoke of them properly—naming them as they were—but was also a partaker of the presence and society of Angels, a speaker of the mysteries of God, and spoke even with God Himself. So in that innocence, the power of his partaking with God and His good Angels was exalted, and so became holy in the sight of God.

§2. The Casting Out of Adam.

But Coronzon (for so is the name of that mighty devil), envying man's felicity, and perceiving that the substance of man's lesser part was frail and unperfect in respect to his purer essence, began to assail man, and so prevailed. By offending so, man became accursed in the sight of God, and so lost both the Garden of Felicity and the judgement of his understanding, but not utterly the favor of God. But he was driven forth (as your scriptures record) unto the Earth which was covered with brambles. Adam received punishment for his offence, in that he was turned out into the earth, and so did Adam, accursed, bring all misery and wretchedness into the world. But in the same instant when Adam was expelled, the Lord gave unto the world her time, and placed over her Angelic Keepers, Watchmen, and Princes.

§3. The Origin of Hebrew.

Being as dumb, and not able to speak, Adam began to learn (through necessity) the language which thou callest Hebrew but not in the form which is now Hebrew amongst you. Adam uttered and delivered to his posterity the nearest knowledge that he had of God and His Creatures. From his own self, he divided this speech into three parts: twelve, three, and seven. This division yet remaineth, but the true forms and pronunciations are lost. Therefore Hebrew is not of that force that it was in its original dignity; much less is it to be compared with this language that we deliver, which Adam verily spake in innocence and which has never been uttered nor disclosed to man since, until now. In this language, the power of God must work and wisdom in her true kind must be delivered.

THE WISDOM OF ENOCH.

§1. The Lord & Enoch.

WHEN THE LORD APPEARED UNTO ENOCH AND WAS merciful unto him and opened up his eyes so that he might see and judge the earth, which was unknown unto his parents by reason of their fall. For the Lord said: Let us show unto Enoch the use of the earth. And lo, Enoch was wise and full of the spirit of wisdom.

§2. The Prayer of Enoch.

Thrice a day did Enoch talk with God, and this was his prayer:

CAN THE VESSEL OF FEAR, FRAGILITY, OR THAT WHICH IS OF A determined proportion, lift up himself, heave up his hands, and gather the sun into his bosom? Lord, it cannot be. Lord, my imperfection is great. Lord, I am less than sand. Lord, thy good Angels and Creatures excel me by far, for our proportion is not alike and our senses agreeth not.

Notwithstanding I am comforted. For we all have one God, all one beginning from thee, and all respect thee as Creator. Therefore I will call upon thy name and in thee I will become mighty. Thou shalt light me, and I will become a Seer. I will see thy Creatures and will magnify thee amongst them.

Those that come into thee have the same gate, and through that same gate descend those that thou sendest. Behold, I will offer my house, my labour, my heart and soul, if it will please thy Angels to dwell with me and I with them—to rejoice with me that I might rejoice with them—to minister unto me that I might magnify thy name.

§ Then, lo, these Tables (which I have provided and prepared according to thy will) I offer unto thee and unto thy holy Angels, desiring them through thy holy Names. As thou art their light and comfort, so they will be my light and comfort. Lord, they prescribe no laws unto thee, thus it is not meet that I prescribe laws unto them. What it pleases them to offer unto me, I will receive. Behold, Oh Lord, if I shall call them in thy name, be it unto me in mercy, as unto the servant of the Highest. Let them manifest unto me, howsoever I shall call them and at whatever time.

§ Oh Lord, is there any who is mortal that can measure the heavens? How, therefore, can the heavens enter into man's Imagination? Thy Creatures are the glory of thy countenance and thereby thou glorifiest all things; but this glory excelleth and is far above my understanding. It is great wisdom to speak with Kings according to one's understanding, but to command Kings is not wisdom unless it come from thee.

§ Behold, Lord, how shall I ascend into the heavens? The air will not carry me, but resisteth my folly. I fall down, for I am of the earth. Therefore, oh thou very light and true comfort, that canst command the Heavens: Behold, I offer these Tables unto thee. Command them as it pleaseth thee. Oh you Ministers and true lights of understanding, who govern this earthly frame and the elements wherein we live: Do for me as for the servant of the Lord. For unto me it has pleased the Lord to talk of you.

§ Behold, Lord, thou hast appointed me 50 times. Thrice 50 times I will lift up my hands unto thee. Be it unto me as it pleaseth thee and thy holy Ministers. I require nothing but thee, through thee, and for thy honor and glory. Yet I hope that I shall be satisfied and shall not die (as thou hast promised) until thou gatherest the clouds together to judge all things. And in that moment I shall be changed and dwell with thee forever.

§3. The Book of Enoch.

§ And at the end of the 50 days, there appeared unto Enoch that which is not now to be manifested nor spoken of. Enoch enjoyed the fruit of God, his promise, and received the benefit of his faith. Here may the wise learn wisdom; for what doth man do that is not corruptible? § And Enoch said unto the Lord: Let there be remembrance of thy mercy, and let those that love thee taste of this after me. Oh let not thy mercy be forgotten. And the Lord was pleased. So after 50 days, Enoch wrote, and this was the title of his books: LET THOSE THAT FEAR GOD AND ARE WORTHY —READ.

CHAPTER III

THE FALL OF ENOCH'S MAGICK.

§1. The Unworthy Read Enoch's Book.

BUT BEHOLD, THE PEOPLE WAXED WICKED & BECAME unrighteous, and the spirit of the Lord was far off and gone away from them. So that those that were unworthy began to read. And the kings of the earth said thus against the Lord: What is it that we cannot do, & who is he that can resist us?

§2. The Lord Sends Wicked Spirits.

And the Lord was vexed, and he sent in amongst them 150 lions, spirits of wickedness, error, and deceit. And they appeared unto the kings of the earth, for the Lord had put them between those that are wicked and his good Angels. And these spirits began to counterfeit the doings of God and His power, for they had power given to them to do so. And the memory of Enoch washed away.

§3. Enoch's Magick Forgotten.

The knowledge of mystical figures and their use is the gift of God delivered unto Enoch and (by Enoch's request) unto the faithful, that they might have the true use of God's Creatures, and of the earth whereon they dwell. So hath the Devil delivered unto the wicked the signs and tokens of his error and hatred towards God, so that they, in using them, might consent in their will and so become partakers with him in his reward, which is æternal damnation. These signs they call Characters—a lamentable thing—for by these many souls have perished. For the doings of the Ægyptians seem, but are not so. The doings of the Lord are, and continue to be. But, as the painter imitates the gestures of man, so doth the Devil imitate the substance and things created and made by God.

§4. Concerning Satan.

Where are the monuments that Satan hath built? Hath he not built a fort on the whole earth? Hath he not victory over the Saints? Dwelleth he not in the temple of the Highest? Triumpheth he not in the cities of the world? But without comfort are his victories and without pleasure are his dwelling places, for he knoweth that his time is at hand. He that now hath freedom shall become bound. He unto whom the whole world is a garden, there shall not be one foot left. Therefore are all his pleasures vanity, all his triumphs smoke, and his authority nothing but a meer shadow.

CHAPTER IV.

THE REESTABLISHMENT OF ENOCH'S WISDOM.

§1. The Lord is Displeased With Man.

THE GODHEAD, KEEPING IN HIS ALMIGHTY BOSOM THE image and form of all things, looked down upon the earth, and said: Let us now go down amongst the sons of men. But he saw that all things grew contrary to their creation and nature, either keeping their dignities and secret virtue shut up in obscurity, or else riotously perishing through imbecility and ignorance.

§§ So then he said: Behold, I delight not in the World. The Elements are defiled. The sons of men are wicked, their bodies are become dung-hills, and the inward parts (which are the secret chambers of their hearts) are become the dens and dungeons of the damned. Therefore, I will draw my spirit from amongst them, and they shall become more drunken, and their ignorance shall become such as never was before...no, not since the fall of the heavens! For, Lo, the time is come, and he that is the Son of the Unrighteousness liveth. Unto him shall be given strength and power. The kings of the earth shall become mad, yea, even raging mad, yea, even unto the third madness in the depth of their own imagination. But I will build my temple in the woods and in the desert places and will become a serpent in the wilderness.

§2. The Lord Relenteth.

§§ Lo, the Thunder spake, and the earth became misty and full of fog, so that the soul of man might sleep in its own confusion. The second Thunder spake, and there arose spirits, such as are for Soothsayers, Witches, Charmers, and Seducers. They have entered into the holy places and have taken up their seats in man. §§ Woe be unto the earth, for she is corrupted. Woe be unto the earth, for she is surrendered to her adversary. Woe be unto the earth, for she is delivered into the hands of her enemy. Yea, woe be unto the sons of man, for their vessels are poisoned. But even then said the Lord: I will be known in the wilderness and will Triumph in my weakness.

§3. The Lord Sends Raphael to Dee & Kelly.

§§ And lo, he called you. And you became drunken and foolish with the spirit of God. The Lord said: Descend, for he calleth. And so Raphael (who had brought up your prayer) descended, and he was full of the power and spirit of God. And he delivered a Doctrine—neither painted nor carved nor imagined by man—but simple, plain, full of strength and the power of the Holy Ghost. This doctrine began, as man did, nakedly from the earth, but is yet the image of perfection. It is this self-same Art which is delivered unto you as an infallible doctrine. For now it hath pleased God to deliver this Doctrine again out of darkness and to fulfil his promise with thee for the Books of Enoch. And to thee he sayeth as he said to Enoch: Let those that are worthy understand this, by thee, that it be one witness of my promise towards thee.

CHAPTER V.
THE NATURE OF THIS WISDOM.

§1. To whom this Wisdom is to be Spoken.

THIS WISDOM IS NOT TO BE SPOKEN OF IN ANY OTHER thing, neither is it to be talked of with man's imagination. For this work is the gift of God, which is all power, and so doth He open it in a tongue of power, to the intent that the proportions may agree in themselves. For it is written, Wisdom sitteth upon a hill, and beholdeth the four winds, and girdeth herself together as the brightness of the morning. But she is visited by only a few, and dwelleth alone as though she were a widow.

§2. Concerning the Tables of Enoch.

WE instruct and inform you, according to this Doctrine delivered, that which is contained in the 49 Tables. In 49 voyces, or callings, which are the Natural Keyes to open those (not 49 but 48, for One is not to be opened) Gates of understanding. You shall have knowledge to move every Gate, and to call out as many as you please, or shall be thought necessary. They can very well, righteously, and wisely open unto you the secrets of their Cities, and make you understand perfectly that which is contained in the Tables. Through this knowledge you shall easily be able to judge, not as the world doth, but perfectly: of the world, of all things contained within the compass of Nature, and of all things which are subject to an end.

§3. Concerning the Angelic Calls or Keys.

Unto this Doctrine belongeth the perfect knowledge, and remembrance of the mystical Creatures. In these keys which we deliver, are the mysteries and secret beings and effects of all things moving, and moved within the world. These calls touch all parts of the World. The World may be dealt with, and her parts; therefore you may do anything. These calls are the keys into the Gates and Cities of wisdom, which cannot be opened, but with visible apparition. This is according to the former instructions and is to be had by the calling of every Table.

These are the holy and mystical Calls delivered, which followeth in practice for the moving of the Tables that control the Kings and Ministers of government. Their utterance is of force, and moveth them to visible apparition. Moved and appeared, they are forced (by the Covenant of God delivered by his spirit) to render obedient and faithful society. They will open the mysteries of their creation, as far as shall be necessary: and give you understanding of many thousand secrets, wherein you are yet but children. For every Table hath his key, every key openeth his gate, and every gate being opened, giveth knowledge of himself, of the entrance, and of the mysteries of those things whereof he is an enclosure. Within these Palaces you shall find things that are of power. For every Palace is above his City and every City above his entrance.

In these keys which we deliver, are the mysteries and secret beings and effects of all things moving, and moved within the world. In this is the life of MOTION, in whom all tongues of the world are moved, for there is neither speech nor silence that was or shall be to the end of the world.

§4. Concerning the Primæval Language.

Thus you see the necessity of this tongue, the excellency of it, and why it is preferred before that which you call Hebrew. For it is written that every lesser consenteth to its greater. Our wisdom shall prove Rhetoric. In this language, every letter signifieth the member of the substance whereof it speaketh. Every word signifieth the essence of the substance. The letters are separated, and in confusion: and therefore, are by numbers gathered together, which also signify a number. For as every greater containeth his lesser, so are secret and unknown forms of things knit up in their parents. Being known in number, they are easily distinguished, so that herein we teach places to be numbered, letters to be elected from the numbered, and proper words from the letters, which signify substantially the thing that is spoken of in the center of the Creator.

¶ Even as the mind of man is moved at an ordered speech, and is easily persuaded in things that are true, so are the creatures of God stirred up in themselves when they hear the words with which they were nursed and brought forth. For nothing moveth, that is not persuaded; neither can anything be persuaded that is unknown. Without this language, the Creatures of God understand you not. You are not of their Cities; you are become enemies, because you are separated by ignorance from Him that governeth the City.

§5. Concerning the 91 Earthly Princes.

¶ The Call of the Thirty Aires summons the 91 Princes and spiritual Governors unto whom the earth is delivered as a portion. They bring in and depose kings and all governments upon the earth, and they vary the natures of things with the variation of every moment. Unto them, the providence of the æternal judgement is already opened. They are governed by the 12 angels of the 12 Tribes, which are, in turn, governed by the 7 that stand before the presence of God.

¶ Let him that can see, look up. Let him that can hear, attend, for this is wisdom. They are all spirits of the Air, not rejected, but dignified. They dwell and have their habitation in the air, in diverse and sundry places, for their mansions are not alike, nor are their powers equal. Understand, therefore, that from the fire to the earth, there are 30 places or abidings, one above and beneath another, wherein these Creatures have their abode, for a time.

¶ THE GREAT TABLE OF THE QUARTERS CONTAINETH THE FOLLOWING: ¶ 1. All human knowledge. ¶ 2. Out of it springeth Physic. ¶ 3. The knowledge of all elemental Creatures amongst you, how many kinds there are, and for what use they were created, those that live in the air, those that live in the waters, those that dwell in the earth, and those of the fire (which is the secret life of all things). ¶ 4. The knowledge, finding, and use of metals, the virtues of them, the congelations and virtues of stones. ¶ 5. The conjoining and knitting together of natures. The destruction of all nature and of things that may perish. ¶ 6. Moving from place to place, as, in this country or that country at your pleasure. ¶ 7. The knowledge of all mechanical crafts. ¶ 8. The transmutation of form, but not essence. ¶ 9. The knowledge of the secrets of men.

CHAPTER VI

GENERAL CONSIDERATIONS OF THIS ART.

§1. Art Thou Worthy to Read?

THUS SAITH THE MESSENGERS OF THE GOD OF WISDOM:
 ¶Is your worthiness such that you merit such great mercy? Are your vessels cleansed and made apt to receive and hold the sweet liquor of pure understanding? ¶Be not proud of the gifts of God, but become humble. Do not justify yourself in respect that this is the word of God delivered unto you for your own selves. The more you receive, be the more thankful. The more you be in the strength of God, the more use you the pureness of humility.

¶You called for Wisdom, and God hath opened unto you his Judgement. He hath delivered unto you the keys that you may enter. But be humble. Enter not of presumption, but of permission. Go not in rashly, but be brought in willingly. For many have ascended, but few have entered. Therefore be diligent that you may enter in, not as spoilers, but as such as deserve entertainment in the name and through the power of the Highest. For great are the mercies of God unto such as have faith.

§2. Deal not with Wicked Spirits.

¶As long as thou dealest with wicked spirits, the Lord will keep back his hands and thou keepest back the Lord. If thou wilt be the minister of God, if thou wilt go forward in His work, if thou wilt see the happy times that are to come, thou must abstain from evil. Thou must sweep thy house clean. Thou must put on thy best garments and must become humble and meek.

¶Let not thy life be a scandle to the will of the Lord, and to the greatness of his works. For the power that is within thy soul is of great force and the ability to perform those things that proceed with power. This is the cause that the wicked ones obey thee, for they fear themselves when they see the seal of thy Creation. Remember that there is a continual fight between us and Satan, wherein we vanquish by patience. The Devil is the father of carping, so doth he subtly infect the Seer's imagination, mingling unperfect forms with my utterance. Water is not received without air, neither the word of God without blasphemous insinuation. The son of God never did convert all, neither did all that did hear him, believe. Therefore, where the power of God is, is also Satan.

§3. Concerning the Book, Vestments, & Days.

¶The book consisteth first of the invocation of the names of God, and second of the invocation of the Angels, by the names of God. Their offices are manifest. ¶Four days after your book is made, you must only call upon those names of God or of the God of Hosts, in those names. And 14 days after, you shall (in some convenient place) call the Angels by petition and by the name of God unto which they are obedient. ¶On the fifteenth day, you shall cloth yourselves in vestures made of white linen and so have the apparition, use, and practice of the Creatures. ¶For this Art is not a labour of years, nor many days.

§4. Conclusion.

¶Thus hath God kept promise with you, and hath delivered you the keys to his storehouses, wherein you shall find (if you enter wisely, humbly, and patiently) treasures worth more than the frames of the heavens. Therefore, examine your books. Confer one place with another, and learn to be perfect for the practice and entrance.

¶Thinkest thou that we speak anything that is not true? Then thou shalt never know the mysteries of all the things that have been spoken. If you love together and dwell together, and in one God, then God will be merciful unto you, bless you, comfort you, and strengthen you unto the end. More would I say but words profit not. God be amongst you.

BOOK TWO
THE MYSTICAL HEPTARCHY
OF THE DIVINE CREATION ITSELF TO BE READ BY THE FAITHFUL

CHAPTER I.

OF THE TITLE & GENERAL CONTENTS OF THIS BOOK WITH SOME NEEDFUL TESTIMONIES

PRINCE BRALGES

BEWARE OF WAVERING AND BLOT OUT SUSPICION, for we are God's creatures that have reigned, do reign, and shall reign forever. Behold, our mysteries shall be known unto you, preserving the secrets of Him that reigneth forever and whose name is great forever.

KING CARMARA

Open your eyes and you shall see from the highest to the lowest and the peace of God shall be upon you. Come, gradually we repeat the work of God. There is one God and one are his works.

DEE

Note that this Book of Creation speaks firstly of the mighty works of God and secondly of the kings that perform these great works. Very many came upon the curved surface of the transparent globe and said: We are prepared to serve our God.

KING CARMARA

This work shall have relation to time present and present use, to mysteries far exceeding it, and finally to a purpose and intent whereby the majesty and name of God shall and may, and, of force, must appear with the apparition of his wonders and marvels yet unheard of. So say I.

DEE

¶ As Michaël and Uriel at the beginning of these revealed mysteries were present and gave authority to Carmara to order the whole Heptarchical Revelation; so at the conclusion, they appeared again, and Raphaël with them; and Michaël concluded the second book of this particular revelation Heptarchical with these words following:

MICHAEL

¶ Merciful is our God and glorious is his name, which chooseth his creatures according to his own secret judgement. This Art is the first part of a threefold Art joining Man with the knowledge of the world, the government of his creatures, and the sight of his majesty. This is (O I say unto you) that which is strength, medicine, and mercy to those that fear him. Amen.

KING CARMARA

¶ Thou hast a work of three proportions in essence, and of seven in form, which is (of itself) divided by a number sevenfold: of the course, estate, and determination of things above, things near, and things below, which of itself, is pure, perfect, and without blemish. ¶ Oh God, how easy is this first understanding! Thou hast been told perfectly, plainly, and absolutely, not only of the condition, dignities, and estate of all things that God hath framed, but also, thou wast delivered the most perfect form and use of them. ¶ Even as God is just, His judgements true, His mercies unspeakable, so are we the true messengers of God.

MICHAEL

¶ Now you touch the world and the doings upon Earth. Now we show unto you the lower world and the governors that work and rule under God. By them you will have power to work such things as shall be to God's glory, and the profit of your country and the knowledge of his Creatures. They proceed from one God, one knowledge, and one operation. Come, my sons, behold these tables. Herein lie the names, that work under God upon the earth, not of the wicked, but of the Angels of light. The whole government doth consist in the hands of 49, (in God his Power, Strength, Mercy, and Justice) whose names are here evident, excellent, and glorious. Mark these tables, mark them, record them to your comfort. This is the first knowledge. Herein shall you find wisdom. Halleluiah. Mighty and Omnipotent art thou, O God, God, God, amongst thy creatures. Thou fillest all things with thy excellent foresight. Thy glory be amongst us forever. Amen.

URIEL

¶ The fountain of wisdom is opened. Nature shall be known. The earth with her secrets shall be disclosed. The elements with their power shall be divulged.

¶ Behold, I teach! There are 49 Angels, glorious and excellent, appointed for the government of all earthly actions. These 49 do work and dispose the will of the Creator, being limited from the beginning in strength, power, and glory. These shall be subject unto you, in the name and by invoking upon the name of God, who doth lighten, dispose, and comfort you.

KING CARMARA

¶ What doth heaven behold or the earth contain that is not or may be subdued, formed, and made by these? What learning grounded upon wisdom with the excellencies in nature cannot they manifest?

¶ One in Heaven they know.

¶ One & all in Man they know.

¶ One & all in Earth they know.

¶ Measure Heaven by a part (my meaning is by those few). Let God be glorified, his name praised, for his creation will be taken and his creatures well used.

Bb

URIEL

¶ He that standeth in the midst of the globe signifieth Nature. Whereupon, in the first point, is the use and practice of this work. That is to say, concerning the first part, for it is said: The book containeth three kinds of knowledge:

- ¶ The knowledge of God truly.
- ¶ The number & doings of His Angels perfectly.
- ¶ The beginning & ending of Nature substantially.

CHAPTER IJ

OF JOHN DEE & HIS INTEREST TO EXERCISE THE DOCTRINE HEPTARCHICAL

URIEL

HIS, YOUR ERA, IS THE LAST AGE, WHICH WILL BE revealed unto you. The mysteries of God have a time. The Sons of Light and their Sons are subject unto my commandment. This is a mystery. I have spoken of it; note it thoroughly. They are my servants. By them thou shalt work marvels.

PRINCE HAGONEL

¶ There are kings false and unjust, whose power I have subverted and destroyed. So shalt thou.

¶ The second assembly were the governors of the Earth, whose glory (if they be good) the weapons we have taught thee will augment, and, consequently (if they be evil) will pervert.

PRINCE BORNOGO

¶ I am Bornogo. What thou desirest shall be fulfilled. Glory to God.

PRINCE BEFAFES

¶ Behold, Behold, Lo Behold, my mighty power consisteth in this. Learn wisdom by my words. This is wrought for thy crudition, what I instruct thee from God. Look to thy charge truly. Thou art yet dead. Thou shalt be revived. But Oh, bless God truly. The blessing that God giveth me I will bestow upon thee by permission. O how mighty is our God, which walked on the waters, which sealed me with His name, whose glory is without end. Thou hast written me, but yet dost not know me. Use me, in the Name of God; I shall, at the time appointed, be ready. I will manifest the works of the seas and the miracles of the deep shall be known.

KING CARMARA

Behold, thou desirest and art sick with desire. I am the disposer though not the composer of God's medicines. Thou desirest to be comforted and strengthened in thy labours. I minister unto thee the Strength of God. What I say is not of myself. Neither that which is said to me, is of themselves; but is said of Him which liveth forever. These mysteries hath God lastly, and of His great mercies granted unto thee. I have answered thy doubting mind. Thou shalt be glutted, yea filled, yea thou shalt swell and be puffed up with the perfect knowledge of God's mysteries in His mercies. Abuse them not. Be faithful; use mercy. God shall enrich thee. Banish Wrath—It was the first and the greatest commandment. I reign by Him and live by Him which reigneth and liveth forever.

I have showed thee perfectly. Behold I teach again. O how merciful is God, that revealeth such great secrets to flesh and blood! Thou has 42 letters. Thy tables last, contain so many.

When thou wilt work for anything pertaining to the estate of a good king, thou must first call upon him which is their prince. Secondly, the ministers of his power are six.

In outward sense my words are true. I speak now of the use of one of the first that I speak of, or manifested yesterday. Said I not and showed I not the Government of princes, for as it is a mystery to a further matter, so it is a purpose to a present use. If it rules worldly princes, how much more shall it work with the Princes of Creation? Thou desirest use; I teach thee use. And yet the Art is to the further understanding of all sciences that are past, present, and yet to come. Fruits hath further virtue, but only in the eating. Gold has further condition, property and quality, than in melting or in common use. Kings there are in Nature, with Nature, and above Nature. Thou art dignified in this knowledge.

Last of all, thy ring, which was appointed thee, with the lamen comprehending the form of thy own name, which is to be made in perfect gold, as is aforesaid.

Thou shalt be comforted. But respect the world, whereunto thou art provided; and for what end; and that in what time. Serve God truly; serve Him justly. Great care is to be had with those that meddle with Prince's affairs. Much more consideration with whom thou shalt meddle or use any practice. But God hath shadowed thee from destruction. He preserveth His faithful, and shaddoweth the just with a shield of honour. None shall enter into the knowledge of these mysteries with thee, but this worker*. Thy estate with the Prince (now reigning)† shall shortly be amended, her favour increased, with the good will of diverse that are now deceivers. Thy hand shall shortly be their help; and thou shalt do wonderful and many benefits (to the augmenting of God's Glory) for thy country. Finally, God doth enrich thee with knowledge and of thyself hath given thee understanding of these worldly vanities. He is merciful and his good creatures neither have, do, nor will forget thee. God bless you both; whose Mercy, Goodness, and Grace I pronounce and utter upon you.

KING BOBOGEL

I have said: Dee, Dee, Dee at length, but not too late‡.

KING CARMARA

Lo, thus thou seest the glory of God's creatures; whom thou mayest use with the consideration of the day, their King, their Prince and his Character. The King and Prince govern for the whole day; the rest according to the sixth part of the day. Use

* i. e. Kelly

† i. e. Queen Elizabeth

‡ Dec's note: King Bobogel said this of my attaining to such mysteries as the ministers under him made show of.

them to the glory, praise, and honour of Him which created them, to the laude and praise of His Majesty.

KING BYNEPOR

¶ Write this reverently. Note it with submission. What I speak hath not been revealed; no not in the last times of the second last world. Thou shalt work marvels marvelously by my workmanship in the highest.

KING BNASPOL

¶ Unto my Prince (my subject) are delivered the keys of the mysteries of the Earth. All those are Angels that govern under him. Use them; they are and shall be at thy commandment.

KING BNASPEN

¶ By me thou shalt cast out the power of wicked spirits. By me thou shalt know the doings and practices of evil men, and more than may be spoken or uttered to man.

KING CARMARA

¶ Oh, how great is the sickness and corruption of man who barely has faith in God or in His good Angels? You maketh all the earthly things that have the corruption of the earth within them. Our God, our God, He is our God. It is true we are His Angels and it is also true that we are His servants. I ask for that power. I speak, and that which I speak is the shadow of truth, justice, and perfection.

¶ BEHOLD: (Holding up the measuring rod.)

¶ HERE: (Pointing to the end of the rod.)

¶ AND HERE: (Pointing to the middle of it.)

¶ I bear a power and virtue that is beyond measure. Nothing is obscure which is received through him. ¶ One thing is yet wanting; a meet receptacle. There is yet wanting a stone. One there is most excellent; hid in the secret part of the depths in the uttermost part of the Roman possession. Lo, the right hand of God is upon thee. Thou shalt prevail with it, with Kings and with all Creatures of the world; whose beauty (in virtue) shall be more worth than the Kingdoms of the Earth. Go towards it and take it up. Keep it secret. Let no mortal hand touch it but thine own.

II.

¶ Thy character must have the names of the six angels (written in the midst of the Sigillum Æmeth) graven upon the other side in a circle, in the midst where must the stone be (which was also brought). Wherein thou shalt at all times behold (privately to thyself) the state of God's people, through the whole world.

RAPHÆL

¶ Go and thou shalt receive. Tarry and thou shalt receive. Sleep and thou shalt see. But watch, and thine eyes shall be fully opened. One thing which is the ground and element of thy desire is already perfected. Out of seven thou hast been instructed (of the lesser part) most perfectly. ¶ All those before spoken of are subject to thy call. Of friendship at any time thou mayest see them and know what thou wilt. Every one (to be short) shall at all times and seasons, show thee direction in anything. ¶ One thing, I answer thee for all offices. Thou hast in subjection all offices. Use them when it pleaseth thee and as thy instruction hath been.

URIEL

¶ The Lord saith: *I have hardened the heart of one of you. Yea, I have hardened him, as the flint, and burnt him together with the ashes of a cedar, to the intent he may be proved just in my work, and great the strength of my glory. Neither shall his mind consent to the wickedness of iniquity, for from iniquity I have chosen him to be a first earthly witness of my dignity.**

DEE

¶ Uriel came in again and another with him and jointly they did say together: Glorify God forever. And now Uriel stood behind and the other sat down in the chair with a sword in his right hand. All his head glittered like the sun; the hair of his head was long. He had wings and all his lower parts seemed to be with feathers. He had a robe over his body and a great light in his left hand. He said: We are blessed from the beginning and blessed be the name of God forever†.

¶ An innumerable company of angels were about him. And Uriel didst lean on the square table. Then he that sat on the chair said to them:

Go forward, God hath blessed thee.

I will be thy Guide.

Thou shalt attain unto thy Searching,

The world begins with thy doings.

Praise God.

The Angels under my power shall be at thy commandment.

Thou shalt see me.

I will be seen of thee.

I will direct thy Living & Conversation.

¶ Now Michaël thrust out his right Arm with the sword. I bade the Skryer to look. Then the sword did seem to cleave in two. And a great fire flamed out of it vehemently. Then he took a ring out of the flames of his sword and gave it to Uriel and said: The Strength of God is unspeakable. Praise be to God for ever & ever. And Uriel did make curtsy to him. Then Michaël did say the following:

MICHAEL

¶ After this sort must be the ring. Note it. I will reveal thee this ring, which was never revealed since the death of Solomon, with whom I was present. I was present with him in strength and mercy. Lo, this it is. This it is wherewith all miracles and divine works and wonders were wrought by Solomon. This it is which I have revealed unto thee. This it is which Philosophie dreameth of. This it is which the Angels scarce know. This it is and blessed by his name, yea his name be blessed forever. There are kings false and unjust, whose power thou mayest subvert & destroy.

† Dee's note: This was Michaël and his manner of apparition.

DEE

¶ Then he laid the ring down upon the Table and said: Note. I noted the manner of the ring in all points. After that he threw the ring down upon the table and it seemed to fall through the table. And then he said the following:

MICHAEL

¶ So shall it do at thy commandments. Without this ring thou shalt do nothing. Blessed be his Name that compasseth all things. Wonders are in him and his Name is wonderful. His Name worketh wonders from generation to generation.

DEE

¶ Then Michaël brought in the seal which he showed the other day and opened his sword and had the Skryer read. And he read ÆMETH. Then the sword closed up again and Michaël said the following:

MICHAEL

¶ This I do open unto thee because thou marvest at the Sigil of God. This is the name of the Seal which be blessed forever. This is the seal itself. This is holy. This is pure. This is forever. Amen. ¶ As truly as I was with Solomon, so truly will I be with thee. I was with Solomon in all his works and wonders. Use me, in the Name of God, for all occasions.

THE SIGIL OF ÆMETH

CHAPTER IIJ

SOME REMEMBRANCES OF THE FURNITURE & CIRCUMSTANCES NECESSARY IN THE EXERCISE HEPTARCHICAL

KING CARMARA

FIRST CAST THINE EYES UNTO THE GENERAL PRINCE Governor or Angel that is principal in this world. Then place my name that thou hast already. Then the name of him that was showed thee yesterday (with the short coat*). Then his power, with the rest of his six perfect ministers. With these three thou shalt work to a good end. All the rest thou may use to God's glory for every one of them shall minister to thy necessities. Moreover, when thou invokest, thy feet must be placed upon these tables which thou seest written last, comprehending 42 letters and names. But with this consideration: that the character (which is the first of the 7 in the former book) be placed upon the top of the table, which thou wast and art and shall be commanded to have and use. Last of all the ring which was appointed thee, with the lamen comprehending the form of thy own name; which is to be made in perfect gold as is aforesaid.

Even as God is just, his judgements true, his mercies unspeakable; so are we the true messengers of God and our words are true in His mercy forever. Glory, Oh Glory be to thou, Oh most high God. Lo, thus thou seest the Glory of God's creatures; whom thou mayest use with the consideration of the day, their

* Prince Hagonel

King, their Prince, and his character. The King and Prince govern for the whole day; the rest according to the six parts of the day. Use them to the glory, praise, and honour of Him, which created them, to the laude and praise of His majesty. The characters of the Kings are in the Globe; and the characters of the Princes are in the Heptagon.

PRINCE HAGONEL

¶The Sons of Light and their Sons are subject to my commandment. This is a mystery. I have spoken of it. Note it thoroughly. They are my servants. By them thou shalt work marvels. My time is yet to come. The operations of the earth are subject to my power. I am the first of twelve. My seal is called 'Barces' & here it is. In his name with my name by my character and the rest of my ministers are these things brought to pass.

¶These that lie here are Witches, Enchanters, Deceivers, and Blasphemers. And finally all they that offer Nature with abuse and dishonour Him which reigneth forever. ¶The second assembly were the governors of the earth, whose glory, if they be good, the weapons which we have brought thee will augment, and consequently (if they be evil) will pervert. ¶The third assembly are those which taste of God's mysteries and drink of the juice of Nature, and whose minds are divided, some with eyes looking towards heaven, the rest to the center of the earth. Where God's glory is not, there neither are the good, nor goodness.

¶It is wrought (I say) it is wrought (for thy understanding) by the seven of the seven, which were the sons of æternity, whose names thou hast written and recorded to God's glory.

PRINCE BUTMONO

¶Mark this*: All spirits inhabiting within the earth where their habitation is of force, not of will, are subject to the power here

* Dee's note: Prince Butmono said this, but the office is under King Bnaspol, whose Prince is Blisdon. The mystery of this I know not yet, for Blisdon will be found to be the proper minister of King Bnaspol.

within my seal: with this you shall govern; with this you shall unlock; with this (in his Name who reigneth) you shall discover the entrance.

KING CARMARA

¶Secondly, the ministers of his power are six, whose names contain seven letters apiece. So thy tables do manifest. By whom in generality, or by any one of them in particularity, thou shalt work for any intent or purpose. As concerning the letters particularly, they do concern the names of 42, which 42 in generally, or one of them, do and can work the destruction, hinderance, or annoyance of the estate, condition, or degree (as well for a body of government) of any wicked or ill-living prince.

[Come Bobogel, Noble Prince & King. Come with your ministers. Come, yea, come with your satellites.]

KING BOBOGEL

¶*Veni Princeps & Principum, qui sunt Aquarum Principes; Ego sum Rex Potens et mirabilis in Aquis; cuius potestas est aquarum viceribus.**
[Come, O thou who are Princes of the waters. I am the King, powerful and wonderous in the waters, whose power is over the waters.]

KING CARMARA

¶Venito veni (inquam) Adesto. Veni Rex. O Rex, Rex, Rex Aquarum. Venito, Venito, (inquam). Magna est tua. Major autem mea potestas. Vitam dedit Deum omnibus creaturis.

[Come, I say, come at this time. Come, O King, King, King of the waters. Your power is great but my power is greater. God gave life to all creatures.]

KING CARMARA

¶Veni Ignis, Veni vita mortalium (inquam) ventio. Adesdum. Regnat Deus, O Venite. Nam unus illo. Regnat, et est vita viventium.

† Dee's note: This I note for the form of calling.

* Dee's note: This is King Bobogel's call to his Prince.

[Come, O fire, which is the life of all mortal things. Come at this time. God Reigns. O come, for he is one. He reigns and is the life of all living things.]

KING CARMARA

¶ Venite, ubi nulla quies sed stridor dentium. Venite vos, qui sub meæ estis potestate.

[Come, where there is nothing of him but the gnashing of teeth. Come, all of you who are under my power.]

¶ Behold, every one of these princes must have his peculiar table.

URIEL

¶ Thy character must have the names of the seven Angels (written in the midst of the Sigil of Æmeth) graven upon the other side in a circle. In the midst whereof must the stone be, which was also brought, wherein thou shalt at all times behold (private to thyself) the state of God's people through the whole earth.

¶ The four feet of the table must have 4 hollow things of sweet wood, whereupon they must stand. Within the hollow spheres thy seals may be kept unperished. One month is all for the use thereof. The silks must be of diverse colours, the most changeable that can be gotten, for who is able to behold the Glory of the Seat of God?

DEE

¶ The character or lamen for me was noted that it should contain some token of my name. And now in this accounted the true character of dignification, I perceive no peculiar mark or letters of my name.

URIEL

¶ The form in every corner considereth your name.

DEE

¶ You mean there to be a certain shadow of Delta†?

URIEL

¶ Well.

† Dee used a delta (triangle) to represent his name.

DEE

¶ What is the use of these tables? From what ground are they framed or divided?

URIEL

¶ They are the ensignias of the creation wherewith all they were created by God: known only by their acquaintance and the manner of their doings.

DEE

¶ Have I rightly applied the days to the Kings?

URIEL

¶ The days are rightly applied to the Kings.

DEE

¶ The characters and words, annexed to the Kings' names in the outer circumference of the great circle or globe: how are they to be used?

URIEL

¶ They are to be painted on sweet wood and so to be held in thy hand as thou shalt have cause to use them.

IL*

¶ The Sigil of Æmeth is to be set in the middle of the table. ¶ Grace, Mercy, and Peace be unto the lively branches of his flourishing kingdoms. And strong art thou in their glory which dost unknit the secret part of thy lively workmanship; and that before the weak understanding of men. Herein is thy power and magnificence opened unto Man. And why? Because thy divinity and secret power is here shut up in the third and fourth number; from the first and fundamental is of all your most holy works. For if thou (O God) be wonderful and incomprehensible in thine own substance, it must needs follow that thy works are likewise incomprehensible. But lo, they shall now believe, because they see that which heretofore they could scarcely believe. Strong is the influence of thy supercelestial power, and mighty is the force of thy arm which overcometh all things. Let all power therefore rest in thee. Amen.

¶ Leave out the letter 'B' of the seven names of the Kings and seven princes and place them in a table divided by 12 and 7, the seven spaces being uppermost. And therein write in the upper line, the letters of the King, with the letters of his prince following just after his name. And so of the six others and their princes. And read them on the right hand, from the upper part to the lowest. And thou shalt find, then, the composition of this table. ¶ Therein they are all comprehended, saving certain letters which are not to be put in here. By reason that the Kings and Princes do spring from God, and not God from the Kings and Princes. Which excellency is comprehended and is also manifest in that third and fourth number round about the sides (of this square table) is every letter of the 14 names of the seven kings and princes. ¶ Hereafter shall you perceive that the glory of this table surmounteth the glory of the sun. All things also that appertain unto it are already proscribed by your former instruction.

¶ God is the beginning of all things, but not after one sort, nor to every one alike. But there are three manners of working with His name: ¶ 1: in respect of dignification; ¶ 2: in respect of conciliation; ¶ 3: in respect to the end & determined operation. ¶ Now as to what and would you wear your characters, &c. But how do I teach? The character is an instrument applicable only to dignification. But there is no dignification but that which doth proceed and hath his perfect composition centrally in the square number of 3 & 4, the center whereof and shall be equal to the greatest. Hereby you may gather not only to what end, the blessed character (wherewith thou shalt be dignified) is prepared, but also the name of all other characters.

¶ The table is the instrument of conciliation, and so are proper to every King and Prince, according to their order.

¶ Now as to the last, concerning the end and determination. It only consisteth in the mercy of God and the characters of these books. Set down the Kings and their Princes in a table, as thou knowest them, with their letters backward (excepting their "B's") from the right hand to the left. Let Bobogel be the first and Bornogo his prince, &c.†

DEE

¶ So on my character or lamen of dignification are all the names of the seven kings and all the seven princes, perfect as in the great table, the "B's" only being the first letter common to them all, kept back, but in memory.

MICHAEL

¶ I will now speak concerning the Sigil of Æmeth, called also the Sigil of God. I will show thee in the mighty hand and strength of God, what His mysteries are, the true circle of Æternity, comprehending all virtue, the whole and sacred trinity. Oh holy be he; Oh holy be he; Oh holy be he. Amen. ¶ Now what wilt thou?

DEE

¶ I would full fain proceed according to the matter in hand.

MICHAEL

¶ Divide this outward circle into 40 equal parts, whose greatest numbers are four. See that thou do it presently.

DEE

¶ I did so dividing it first into four parts and then every one of them by ten. ¶ Michael then called out by name Semiel. One came in and knelt down and great fire came out of his mouth.

MICHAEL

¶ To this one named Semiel, are the mysteries of this table known. ¶ Oh God, thou hast said and thou livest forever.

† Dee's note: It may appear that Butmono is Prince to Bynepor and Blidon Prince to King Bnaspol.

Cc

DEE

¶ Semiel then stood up, and flaming fire came out of his mouth and then he said as followeth: Mighty lord: what wouldst thou with the tables?

MICHAEL

¶ It is the will of God that thou fetch them hither.

SEMIEL

¶ I am his tables. Behold, these are his tables. Lo, where they are.

DEE

¶ There came in 40 white creatures, all in white silk long robes, and they were like children. And all of them, falling on their knees, said: Thou only art holy among the highest: Oh God, thy Name be blessed forever.

¶ Michael then stood up out of his chair and, by & by, all his legs seemed to be like two pillars of brass, and he was as high as half-way up to heaven. And, by and by, his sword was all on fire. And he shook and drew his sword over the heads of all these 40 and they fell down. Then Michael spake to Semiel with a thundering voice:

MICHAEL

¶ Declare the mysteries of the Living God; our God; of One that liveth forever!

SEMIEL

¶ I am ready.

DEE

¶ Michael shook over them with his sword and they all fell down (and Uriel also) on their knees. And commonly at the striking with the sword, flaming fire like lightning, did flash.

MICHAEL

¶ Note: Here is a mystery.

DEE

¶ Then stept forth one of the 40 from the rest and opened his breast, which was covered with silk, and there appeared on it a great 'T' all of gold. And over the 'T' stood the number '4'. The 40 all cried: It liveth and multiplieth forever; blessed be his Name. Then that creature did shut up his bosom and vanished away like fire.

MICHAEL

¶ Place that in the first place. It is the name of God.

DEE

¶ Then there seemed a great clap of Thunder*. . . The chair was brought in again and I asked what it meant.

URIEL

¶ This is a seat of perfection, from which things shall be showed unto thee, which thou hast long desired.

DEE

¶ Then was a square table brought into the stone and I demanded what that table betokened.

URIEL

¶ A mystery not yet to be known. These two shall remain in the same stone to the sight of all undefiled creatures. ¶ You must use a four-square table, two cubits square, whereupon must be set the Sigil of God. This seal is not to be looked upon without great reverence and devotion. This seal is to be made of perfect wax. The seal must be 9 inches in diameter. The roundness must be 27 inches or somewhat more. The thickness of it must be an inch and a half to an inch and a quarter. And a figure of a cross must be on the backside of it made thus:

* Dee's note: And so forth. And note that the whole second book is nothing else but the Mysteries most marvelous of the Sigil of God, sometimes called the Sigil of Ameth, wherein here I did leave but a little excerpt. Note further that almost all the third book was of the seven ensigns of creation whereof mention was before made.

¶ The table is to be made of sweet wood and of two cubits high, with four feet with four of the former seals under the four feet. ¶ Under the table did seem to be laid red silks two yards square. And over the seal did seem likewise red silk to lie four square, broader than the table, hanging down with four tassels at the four corners thereof. Upon this uppermost red silk did seem the stone with the frame to be set, right over and upon the principal seals, saving that the red silk was between the one and the other.

¶ There appeared the first table covered with a cloth of silk of changeable colour, red and green, with a white cloth under it hanging very low.

CHAPTER IV

SOME NOTICE OF THE PECULIAR FORMS & ATTIRE
WHEREIN THE KINGS, PRINCES
& MINISTERS HEPTARCHICAL APPEARED
& SOME OF THEIR ACTIONS
& GESTURES AT THEIR APPEARANCE

KING CARMARA

HIS KING (BEING CALLED FIRST BY URIEL) APPEARED as a man, very well proportioned and clad in a long purple robe with a triple crown of gold upon his head.

¶ At his first coming he had seven spirits (like men) waiting on him, which afterwards declared themselves to be the seven Princes Heptarchical.

¶ Uriel delivered unto this King (at his first appearing) a rod, or straight little round staff of gold, divided into three equal distinctions, whereof two were dark or black and the third bright red. This rod he kept still in his hand.

¶ This king only was the orderer or disposer of all the doctrine, which I term Heptarchical, and the first practitioner thereof, calling the seven Princes and after that the seven Kings, and and by giving instruction for use and practice of the whole doctrine Heptarchical. For the first purpose and fruit to be enjoyed by me, of the two other, there was only mention made.

¶ King CARMARA said: This is the sign of the work and there appeared the letters 'C' and 'B' reversed on a white flag with a woman standing by, whose arms did not appear. On the other side of the flag appeared the coat of arms of England as on the old flag:

PRINCE HAGONEL

¶Note that all the Princes seemed to be men, and to have red robes, but this Prince had a robe that was shorter than the others. ¶All the princes had circlets of gold on their heads rather than crowns or coronets. This Prince held in the palm of his right hand a round ring with a point or prick in the midst, hanging also over his middle fingers, which he affirmed to be his seal and said that the name of it was Barces:

¶All the princes held up together a seven-pointed star that seemed to be of copper:

THE SUBJECTS AND SERVANTS TO PRINCE HAGONEL

¶The Sons of Light and their Sons are said to be subject unto the commandment of HAGONEL and are his servants. Their names are all given in the sigil of Æmeth:

The Seven Sons of Light:

- |         |            |

| 1. I    | 5. HECOA   |
| 2. IH   | 6. BEIGIA  |

| 3. AVE     | 7. ILEMESSE |
| 4. LIBA    |             |

THE SONS OF LIGHT

¶The seven Sons of Light appeared like seven young men, all with bright countenance, apparelled in white, with white silk on their heads. Every one seemed to have a metallic ball in his hand, the first of gold, the second of silver, the third of copper, the fourth of tin, the fifth of iron, the sixth tossed between his two hands a round thing of quicksilver, the last had a ball of lead. The first had on his breast a round tablet of gold and on it written a great 'I'. And the second, on his golden tablet, had his name also written. And every one orderly coming forth, showed their names upon their golden tablets. At their departing they made curtsy and mounted up to Heaven.

THE SONS OF THE SONS OF LIGHT

¶The Sons of the Sons of Light appeared like seven little children, like boys covered all with purple, with hanging sleeves, like the sleeves on priests' or scholars' gowns. Their heads were attired all after the former manner with purple silk. They had three-cornered tablets on their breasts, and these tablets seemed to be very green and on them the letters of their names were written. The first had two letters made thus of an 'E' and an 'L' or 'E-'. They made reverences to Michael (who had called them) and so mounted up to heavenwards.

THE 42 MINISTERS OF PRINCE HAGONEL

¶At the call of King CARMARA (during the second handling of this Heptarchical doctrine), when he said Come, repeat the works of God, there appeared Prince HAGONEL, and after that followed 42, who said We are prepared to serve our God. Each of these had somewhat in their hands as they stood in this order, and Hagonel seemed to embrace the company:

¶ Six of these seemed more glorious than the rest and their coats were longer; they had circlets of gold around their heads and held in their hands perfect crowns of gold. The second six had three quarters of crowns in their hands. The third six had robes or clothes in their hands. All the rest seemed to have balls of gold, which they tossed from one to another, but at the catching they seemed empty windballs, for they grasped them by closing their hands, as if they were not solid but empty like a blown bladder. The first six made curtsy to Prince HAGONEL, the second six made curtsy to the first, and the third to the second. And they all, with Prince HAGONEL, made curtsy to King CARMARA. ¶ Each of the 42 stood upon a table, and upon every table was but a single letter. The first minister of the first six did go away and in his table appeared the letter 'O' and so of the rest. But the third six cowered down and was loath to show their tables, but at length did. The third row went off, lamenting, being commanded by the Prince. All departed in fire, falling into the globe. The fifth row, too, did sink into the Globe, every one in a sundry fire by himself. The sixth row fell with smoke down into the globe. Thus was revealed the following table:

|   |   |   |   |   |   |   |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| O | E | S | N | G | L | E |
| A | V | Z | N | I | L | N |

| N | R | S | O | G | O | O |
| N | R | R | C | P | R | N |

¶ King CARMARA said: Remember how they stood when they were secondly disposed unto thee. They stood first in six rows, and next they were turned into seven. I speak of the greater number and not of the lesser, for in speaking of the greater I have comprehended the lesser*.

* Dee's note: There are but 6 names that are in subjection to the Prince. The first seven next him are these which held the fair and beautiful crowns. The first seven are called by those names that thou seest: Oes . . . &c. This diversity of reckoning by 6 and 7, I cannot yet reconcile.

THE SEAL OF AUE*

KING BOBOGEL

¶ He appeared in a black velvet coat; and his hose was close round hose with velvet upperstocks, overlayed with gold lace. On his head was a velvet hat or cap with a black feather in it. A cape was hanging on one of his shoulders, and his purse was hanging about his neck. Hung upon his girdle was a rapier. His beard was long, and he had bloomers and slippers. And he said, I wear these robes not in respect of myself, but of my Government.†

PRINCE BONORGO

¶ He appeared in a red robe with a gold circlet on his head; he shewed his seal and said: This it is.

THE 42 MINISTERS

¶ Seven of the ministers are apparelled like BOBOGEL the king; sagely and gravely; all the rest are almost ruffian or boisterous. Some are like to be men and women; for in the forepart they seemed women, and in the back part men, by their apparel. And they were the last 7. They danced, leapt, and kissed. They came afterwards into a circle, the sage and the rest; but the sages stood all together. The first of the sages lifted up his hand aloft and said: Let us follow the Will of God; Our God is truly Noble and Eternal. He plucked up his right foot and under it appeared an 'L'. And the rest in like manner appeared their letters or names.

1. The first seven grew all together in a flame of fire and so sunk down into the transparent fiery globe of the new world.
2. The second seven fell down like dross of Metal.
3. The third seven clasped together and fell down in a thick smoke.
4. The fourth seven joined together and vanished like drops of water.
5. The fifth seven fell down like a storm of hail.
6. The last vanished away.

¶ At another time, they came (being called by King CARMARA) all 42 bringing a round table over their heads flat-wise; and they laid it down and stood about it the letters being as before.

KING BABALEL

He appeared with a crown of gold on his head; with a long robe whitish of colour; his left arm's sleeve was very white; and his right arm sleeve was black. He seemed to stand upon water. His name was written on his forehead: BABALEL.

PRINCE BEFAFES

Prince Befafes appeared in a long red robe, with a circlet of gold on his head. He had a golden girdle, and on it was written BEFAFES. He opened his bosom and appeared lean; and seemed to have feathers under his robes. His seal or character was thus:

THE 42 MINISTERS

Of his 42 ministers, the first seven had circlets of gold on their heads, and the King BABALEL called Befafes saying: Come Prince of the Seven Princes, who are Princes over the waters. Every one of the 42 had a letter on his forehead. They were seven in a row; and six downward. But of the first seven, the letters became to be between their feet; and the water seemeth continually to pass over these letters. The first seven took the water and threw it upwards and it became clouds. The second threw it upwards and it became snow, &c. The 42 dived into the water and so vanished away. And BABALEL and Befafes also were suddenly gone. Their names and characters appeared to be these, which follow in the squares.

KING BYNEPOR

King BYNEPOR appeared as a King, with his Prince next after him; and after the prince, 42 ministers.

PRINCE BUTMONO

Prince Butmono appeared in a red robe, with a golden circle on his head. His seal is this:

THE 42 MINISTERS

They appeared like Ghosts and Smokes without all form, having every one of them a little glittering spark of fire in the midst of them. The first seven are red as blood. The second seven are not so red. The third seven are like whitish smoke. These three sevens had the sparks greater than the rest. The fourth, fifth, and sixth seven are of diverse colors. All had a fiery spark in their middle. Every spark had a letter in it as followeth:

KING BNASPOL

King BNASPOL appeared in a red robe, and a crown on his head. His prince followed him and after him his ministers.

PRINCE BLISDON

Prince Blisdon appeared in a robe of many colours and on his head a circlet of gold.* This is his character or seal:

THE 42 MINISTERS

The 42 seemed to stand about in a little hill round. The hill was of clay. Behind this company seemed to stand an innumerable multitude of ugly people, afar off. Those which stood afar off are spirits of perdition, which keep the earth with her treasures for him, &c. These which seem to stand about the little hill seemed to have in the palms of their hands, letters in order, as here followeth:

* Dee: Perhaps the red colour was most, and so seemed generally to be red as the other their robes were.

THE SEAL OF HAGONEL

KING BNAPSEN

King BNAPSEN appeared as a king with a crown on his head.

PRINCE BRORGES

Prince Brorges appeared in his red apparel; and he opened his clothes and there did four mighty and most terrible and ghastly flames of fire out of his sides; which no mortal eye could abide to look upon any long while. And in marvelous raging fire the word 'BRORGES' did appear tossed to and fro of the mighty flames. His seal or character is this:

THE 42 MINISTERS

The 42 appeared holding a round table. They toss it in fiery flames. In the table were the letters of their names as followeth:

B A N S S Z E
B Y A P A R E
B N A M G E N
B N V A G E S

KING BALIGON

King BALIGON is the same mighty king who is here first described by the name of CARMARA, and yet otherwise among the Angels called MARMARA. But the 'M' is not to be expressed. Therefore he appeared in a long purple gown and on his head a triple crown of gold, with a measuring rod of gold in his hand, divided into three equal parts; in the form of a well proportioned man.

PRINCE BAGANOL

He appeared not by that name yet.†

THE 42 MINISTERS

Note that the king himself is governor over these. The 42 ministers appeared like bright people. And besides them all the air swarmed with creatures. Their letters were on their foreheads. They stood in a circle. They took their letter from their foreheads and set them in a circle.

THE ORATION TO GOD TO BE SPOKEN EVERY DAY,
THREE TIMES SUCCESSIVELY

ALMIGHTY, ÆTERNAL, THE TRUE AND LIVING GOD: O King of Glory, O Lord of Hosts, O Thou, the Creator of Heaven and Earth, and of all things visible and invisible: Now, (even now, at length,) among other Thy manifold mercies used, and to be used toward me, Thy simple servant, JOHN DEE, I most humbly beseech Thee, in this my present petition to have mercy upon me, to have pity upon me, to have compassion upon me. I, faithfully and sincerely, of long time, have sought among men, in Earth, and also by prayer (full oft and pitifully) have made suit unto Thy Divine Majesty for the obtaining of some convenient portion of True Knowledge and Understanding of Thy laws and ordinances, established in the natures and properties of Thy Creatures: By which Knowledge, Thy Divine Wisdom, Power and Goodness, (on Thy Creatures bestowed and to them imparted), being to me made and allure me, (for the same) incessantly to pronounce Thy praises, to render unto Thee, most hearty thanks, to advance Thy true honour, and to win unto Thy Name, some of Thy due Majestic Glory, among all people, and forever. And, whereas, it hath pleased Thee (O God) of Thy infinite Goodness, by Thy faithful and holy Spiritual Messengers, to deliver unto me, long since (through the eye and ear of E. K.) an orderly form, and manner of exercise Heptarchical: How, (to Thy Honour and Glory, and the Comfort of my own poor soul, and of others, Thy faithful servants,) I may, at all times, use very many of Thy good Angels, their counsels and helps; according to the properties of such their functions, and offices, as to them, by Thy Divine Power, Wisdom and Goodness, is assigned, and limited: (Which orderly form, and manner of exercise, until even now, I never found opportunity and extreme necessity, to apply myself unto,) Therefore, I thy poor, and simple servant, do most humbly, heartily, and faithfully beseech Thy Divine Majesty, most lovingly and fatherly to favour: and by Thy Divine Beck to further this my present industry and endeavour to exercise myself, according to the foresaid orderly forme and manner: And, now, (at length, but not too late) for Thy dearly beloved Son IESUS CHRIST His sake, (O Heavenly Father) to grant also unto me, this blessing and portion of Thy heavenly Graces: That Thou wilt forthwith, enable me, make me apt and acceptable, (in body, soul, and spirit) to enjoy always the holy and friendly conversation, with the sensible, plain, full, and perfect help, in word and deed, of Thy Mighty, Wise, and Good Spiritual Messengers and Ministers generally: and, namely, of Blessed Michael, Blessed Gabriel, Blessed Raphael, and Blessed Uriel; and also especially, of all those, which do appertain unto the Heptarchical Mystery, theurgically, (as yet) and very briefly unto me declared: under the method of Seven Mighty Kings, and their Seven Faithful and Princely Ministers, with their subjects and servants, to them belonging. And in this Thy great Mercy and Grace, on me bestowed, and to me confirmed, (O Almighty God,) Thou shalt, (to the great comfort of Thy faithful servants,) approve, to Thy very enemies, and mine, the truth and certainty of Thy manifold, most merciful promises, heretofore, made unto me: And that Thou art the True and Almighty God, Creator of Heaven and Earth, (upon whom I do call and in whom I put all my trust,) and Thy Ministers, to be the true, and faithful Angels of light: which have, hitherto, principally, and according to Thy Divine providence dealt with us: And, also, I, thy poor and simple servant, shall then, In and By Thee, be better able to serve Thee, according to Thy well pleasing: to Thy Honour and Glory: Yea, even in these most miserable, and lamentable days. Grant, Oh grant, O our Heavenly Father, grant this, (I pray Thee,) for Thy only begotten Son IESUS CHRIST, His sake: Amen, Amen, Amen.

THE OFFICES OF KING BARALEL

... who art King in waters, mighty and wonderful in waters; whose power is in the bowels of the waters; whose royal person with the noble Prince Befafes and his 42 ministers, the triple-crowned King CARMARA hath me use to the glory, praise, and honour of him which created you all to the laud and praise of his Majesty . . .

THE OFFICES OF PRINCE BEFAFES

... who are Prince of the seas; thy power is upon the waters; thou drowndest Pharoah and hast destroyed the wicked; thy name was known to Moses; thou livedst in Israel; who hast measured the waters; who wast with King Solomon; and also long after that with Scotus* but not known to him by thy true name, for he called thee Mares. And since thou wast with none; except when thou preservest me through the mercy of God from the power of the wicked; and wast with me in extremity. Thou wast with me thoroughly. Who, of the Ægyptians has been called OBELISON, in respect of thy pleasant deliverance. And by that name to be known and of me noted in record to be the noble and courteous OBELISON; whose noble ministers 42 are of very great power, dignity, and authority. As some in the measuring of the motions of the waters and saltiness of the seas; in giving good success in battles; reducing ships and all manner of vessels that float upon the seas. #### THE OFFICES OF KING BYNEPOR

... upon the distribution of participation of whose exalted most especial and glorified power resteth only and dependeth, the general state of condition of all things. Whose sanctification, glory, and renown, although it had beginning, yet can it not either have ending. He that measureth said and thou wast the End of his workmanship. Thou art like him and of him; yet not as partaking or adherent, but distinct in one degree. When he came thou was magnified by his coming; and are sanctified, world without end.

The highest life,

The best life,

The least life is measured in your hands.

Notwithstanding, thou art not of thyself; neither is thy power thine own. Magnified be His Name. Thou art in all; and all hast some being by thee; yet thy power is nothing in respect of His power which hath sent thee. Thou beginnest new worlds, new people, new kings, and new knowledge of a new government; and hast said to me: thou shalt work marvelously, marvelously by my workmanship in the Highest...

THE OFFICES OF KING BNAPSEN

. . . who saidst unto me that by thee I shall cast out the power of all wicked spirits; and that by thee I shall or may know the doings and practises of evil men; and more than may be spoken or uttered to man . . .

THE OFFICES OF PRINCE BRORGES

. . . who, being the Prince, chief minister and governor under the right puissant King BNAPSEN didst (to my Seer) appear in a most terrible manner, with fiery flaming streams and saidst: I am the Gate of Death. And through the Glory of God I smite the houses of the impious . . .

† Dee gives two rather lengthy notes, one in English, the other in Latin. The English note merely repeats instruction as to the mounting of the stone on the Sigil of Æmeth, and states, once more, that 'wherein thou shalt at all times behold (privately to thyself) the state of God's people through the whole earth.'

The Latin note translates as follows:—See also the sayings of Ephodius where, concerning Adamanta, in which diverse signs are given for responding to God. See Epiphanius concerning precious stones and their meaning. See his writings concerning the Unim and Thumminim. See the book received at Trebonæ. It is written in the books of Epiphanius that the vision that appeared to Moses on the mountain, the laws that were given were expressed in sapphires.

* 1.35 & 1.43: Either Enochian should be OD or English should be 'which'

† The circumflex in Dee's Enochian is actually a brevis in Sl. MS. 3191 and should be pronounced as a short vowel.

‡ 1.46: This is the only time in the keys that ERM is glossed as 'with'; this is a probable copying error. ERM is perhaps 'with the ark', with IADNAH as 'knowledge'; see 30.180: IADNAMAD for 'undefiled knowledge'.

* 1.52 to 1.59: Lacuna in Sl. MS. 3191; Dee's English entered as marginalia. The root column gives a probable reconstruction of the Enochian text.

| 2.20 LORSLQ    | lors-l-q  | the flowres                   |

* 1.88: Possible copying error. ZIR appears as 'I am' in 2.53, 3.4 & 4.46, while ZIRDO appears as 'I am' only in this passage in Royal Appendix. If so the ZIRDO error was repeated in most of the later calls. Note that DONOCO would be linguistically similar to CNOQUO in 21.35, 17.34, & 18.38. The correct passage may be ZIR DONOCO or ZIR CNOQUO rather than ZIRDO NOCO.

† 2.3 to 2.6: A little confusion here in Dee's matching. OM should be 'understand' (see 7.53, 10.54, 16.19, & 30.113). Thus ZONG is 'of the winds', FAAIP is 'your voices', and SALD is 'of wonder'.

‡ 2.7: Is Dee's double 'i' in vi-iv an error or a variation? See 4.13, 5.33, 6.34, & 16.2 for VIV as 'second'.

BOOK FOUR

EARTHLY KNOWLEDGE, AID & VICTORY

WHEN THE MOST HIGH DIVIDED TO THE NATIONS THEIR inheritance, when he separated the sons of Adam, he set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel*. † And had a wall great and high, and had twelve gates, and at the gates twelve angels, and names written thereon, which are the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel†.

* Deuteronomy, Chapter 32.

† Revelation, Chapter 21.

CHAPTER IJJ
THE GREAT CIRCLE OF THE QUARTERS

¶ The four triads are the Names of God extracted from the four lines of the holy spirit, which govern all creatures on the earth (both visible and invisible). They are carried upon twelve banners.

CHAPTER IV
THE FUNDAMENTAL OBESANCE

This is the fundamental obesance to God, and the conjuration for obtaining the benign ministry of the good angels.

IEOVAH ZEBAOOTH, I, JOHN DEE (YOUR UNWORTHY servant) most earnestly invoke and call upon your divine power, wisdom, and goodness. I humbly and faithfully seek your favour and assistance to me in all my deeds, words, and thoughts, and in the promoting, procuring, and mingling of your praise, honour, and glory. Through these, your twelve mystical Names: ORO, IBAH, AOZPI, MOR, DIAL, HCTGA, OIP, TEAA, PDOCE, MPH, ARSL, GAIOL, I conjure and pray most zealously to your divine and omnipotent majesty, that all your angelic spirits (whose mystical names are contained in this book, and whose offices are herein briefly noted) might be called from any and all parts of the universe, or at any time in my life, through the special domination and controlling power of your holy Names (which are also in this book). Let them come most quickly to me. Let them appear visibly, friendly, and peacefully to me. Let them remain visible according to my will. Let them vanish from me and from my sight when I so request. Let them give reverence and obedience before you and your 12 mystical Names. I command that they happily satisfy me in all things and at all times in my life, by accomplishing each and every one of my petitions—if not by one means, then by another—goodly, virtuously, and perfectly, with an excellent and thorough completeness, according to their virtues and powers, both general and unique, and by Your united ministry and office

O God. AMEN.

Through you, Jesu Christe,

AMEN

CHAPTER V
THE TWENTY FOUR SENIORS

These are the twenty-four Seniors (mentioned in the Apocalypse of Saint John) whose names are compiled from the lines of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. The duty of these Good Angels is to impart knowledge and judgement in human affairs.

YOU FOUR ANGELS OF LIGHT, FAITHFUL IN THE MINISTRY of God (our Creator), OYUB or OYAUB, PAOC or PACOC, RBNH or RBZNH, DIRI or DIARI, lords in the Eastern part of the universe, and who (out of the peculiar gifts and dispensations of God) are powerful and learned in the lore of ore-veins, the finding of metal and treasure hoards, the uses and virtues of metals, the coagulation and magical properties of jewels, the places where metals and jewels are gathered, as well as their natures, properties, virtues, and uses, both secret and arcane: I, John Dee, the humble and devoted servant of the omnipotent, living, and true God, IEOVA ZEBOATH, through the inevitable power which is known to the same, our God, in these Names, LLACZA and PALAM, to whom you owe reverence and obedience, I vehemently and confidently require of you, one and all, that, through the whole of my remaining life at whatever time I wish, you come and appear before me, benignly, placidly, visibly, and pleasantly, and be favourable unto me. I beseech thee, one and all, to complete and to make perfect all my petitions for intended deeds, most swiftly, manifestly, certainly, immaculately, and plentifully. Yet I bind myself by this condition, that all my demands, totally or for the most part, be mindful of your peculiar skills, strengths, faculties, and powers over metals and jewels. By the speaking of the divine Names, LLACZA and PALAM, I call and command you, one and all.

Q YOU FOUR GOOD AND TRUE ANGELS OF GOD (OUR CREATOR), ABMO or ABAMO, NACO or NAOCO, OCNM or OCANM, SHAL or SHIAL, who rule in the Eastern part of the world, who received of God in your creation the singular strength, true knowledge, and perfect absolute power of Transformation as your duty and office, that you might impart and make manifest unto men (as preordained by the same, our God) this true knowledge and perfect power, to the praise, honour, and glory of God. Therefore, I, John Dee, the devoted servant of the same, our God and Creator, truly, diligently, and faithfully desiring to praise, honour, and glorify in God, do vehemently demand and confidently beseech you, one and all, to bring to pass and amplify amongst men this your aforementioned true knowledge, through these mystical Names of God (pre-eminently and predominantly peculiar to you): AIAOAI and OIIIT. I, John Dee, demand that you appear benignly, placidly, and visibly to me, at whatever moment in time I should choose, for all the remaining time of my life, and moreover I demand that you deign to be friendly and favourable unto me. I, John Dee, demand that you (one and all), immediately and without delay, perfectly accomplish, manifestly discharge, plainly complete, and plentifully make perfect each and every one of my petitions, by whatever means necessary, that concern or respect your skill, knowledge and power of Transformations, no matter when I shall require it of you, through these Names of our God, here rehearsed: AIAOAI and OIIIT.

This is the invitation to the four good angels of the West, each of whom knows all the creatures living in one element and their use:

O YOU ANGELS OF GOD, FLOWING WITH TRUTH & GOODNESS, I call you, XPEN or XPÆN, VASA or VAASA, DAPI or DASPI, RNIL or RNDIL, who rule in the Western part of the world: so that each one of you, out of the four great elements or sources of the world might wield the duty or office peculiar to him, and his unique skill, knowledge, power, and authority: O you, XPEN or XPÆN, bright angel that liveth in the Air of the West, you who hath vision of all its diverse qualities and who perfectly perceives what uses God created in them for Man; And you, O illustrious VASA or VAASA, who liveth in the Water of the West, who truly knoweth its quality and use; And you, O distinguished DAPI or DASPI, who liveth in the Earth of the West, you who knoweth exactly its varied qualities and to what uses it was created by our God; And finally you, RNIL or RNDIL, shining angel of God, who liveth in the most secret Fire of the West, and who hath plentiful knowledge of its efficacy and vital properties; O all of you, faithful to God and ministers of our Creator, you who dwelleth in the Western part of the world, you who knoweth the arcane secrets of the four elements, conceded, assigned, and deputed to you by our omnipotent Creator, and who, to the praise, honour, and glory of God and out of your great charity towards the human race art able to impart and make manifest these great things and (by the approval of God) bring forth those things that are asked of you. Therefore I, John Dee, a Lover and Seeker for these secrets (to the praise, honour and glory of our God), in the Name of the same, our God and Creator, I humbly supplicate you, one and all. And through these holy Names of God, IAAASD and ATAPA, I require and confidently petition that, at whatever time of my future life (from this very hour) that I should call or summon one, any, or all of you, you appear conspicuous and visible to me in a goodly form. And through these holy Names of God, IAAASD and ATAPA, I require that you benignly consent, clearly discharge, lovingly fulfil, and perfectly make perfect, each and every one of my petitions (respecting and concerning your aforementioned unique offices, knowledges and powers), satisfyingly, satisfactorily, plentifully, and perfectly. AMEN

APPENDIX A

THE PRACTICE OF ENOCHIAN EVOCATION

HERE ARE NO DESCRIPTIONS IN DEE'S EXTANT DIARIES OF actual Enochian evocation rituals, a fact that has led some scholars to conclude that he never attempted the magic. The existence, however, of artifacts such as the wax sigils of Æmeth in the British museum indicate that Dee, at the very least, constructed some of the requisite furniture. In addition, Dee compiled Sloane MS. 3191 (the primary source for The Enochian Evocation) to be a working collection of conjurations for use in magical ceremonies. Although it is possible that Dee never went through with the experiments, it is far more likely that he recorded the events in a separate diary that has not survived. Dee was a rabid diarist, and kept at least three concurrent diaries during the period that he was working with Kelly, each diary covering a different aspect of his life. It would be well in character for Dee to initiate a special diary for the practice of the 'radical truths' that he had sought for so many years.

There are many clues that assist in uncovering the operative portions of this arcane branch of magical lore. Sloane MS. 3191, for example, delineates the portions of Enochian evocation that Dee thought were most essential. Other clues are scattered throughout the surviving diaries. Dee describes many scrying sessions, and it is unlikely that the Enochian rituals differed very greatly from those he practiced with his scryers. In addition, many passages from the scrying sessions contain hints and instructions concerning Enochian evocation. Another valuable source of information is the body of magical literature that was available to Dee and Kelly. The effect of Agrippa, for example, upon Dee's philosophical outlook is obvious, and many aspects of Enochian evocation are dependant upon the world-view of the renaissance Magi. Also, Kelly's involvement in black magic indicates influence from other magical texts. When all these sources of information are gathered together, a coherent picture emerges of the practice of Enochian evocation.

THE HOLY TABLE.

This appendix discusses:

1. The personnel & apparel required for the rituals.
2. The furniture and construction of the temple.
3. The book of prayers & conjurations.
4. The Angelic hierarchies.
5. The talismans for the Angelic hierarchies.
6. The scheduling of the ceremonies.

¶ I. PERSONNEL

ENOCHIAN rituals were practiced by two people, a Magus and Scryer. The Magus chanted the conjurations, compelling the Angels (by the power of the Names of God) to appear within the crystal stone. The Scryer gazed into the crystal and related his visions. The Magus doubled as scribe, recording the visions and the results of the ceremony.

Both Scryer and Magus were expected to lead holy lives (at least while practicing the magic), to cultivate piety and humility, and to abstain from the practice of black magic. During the ceremonies, both were dressed in white linen robes, and the magus wore a magical ring with a gold seal (as shown in Book Two). Other renaissance magical texts recommend that the Magus wear a crown and carry a magical wand and or sword, but none of these are mentioned in Dee's work.

¶ II. FURNITURE

BEFORE practicing Enochian evocation, the Magus and Scryer located or constructed the following items:

1. A crystal ball. This was handled only by the magus or the scryer. Dee's was rather small, about two inches in diameter.
2. A circular wax tablet, 9 inches in diameter and 1.5 inches thick, inscribed on the front with the sigil of Æmeth and on the back with a cross. These designs are shown in Book Two. The center of the front was hollowed out slightly, so that

- the crystal ball could easily be placed on top of the Sigil.
3. Four wax tablets, about 4 inches in diameter, similarly inscribed.
  4. A red silk 'rug', two yards square.
  5. A red and green (or multi-coloured) tablecloth, about 1.5 yards square, with tassels at each corner.
  6. A table constructed of 'sweet wood' [cedar?] a yard (two cubits) square, with yard long legs. Each leg terminated with a hollow cylinder, slightly more than 4 inches on the inside diameter and about 0.5 inches thick. The basic structure of this table is shown in Book Two; because of its low profile, two wooden stools were probably also necessary. A set of elaborate sigils were to be painted in yellow oils on the top surface of the table. The arrangement of these sigils is too complex to be reproduced in this volume, but can be found in The True Relation between the Preface and the first book, on the page labeled 'The Holy Table'.
  7. Twelve banners or flags each embroidered with a Name of God as shown in Book Five.

This furniture was arranged into a temple where Enochian evocation could be practiced. This may have been intended to be in the open air rather than within a building, as there are no descriptions of candles or torches. Furthermore, the magical circle specifies 'Terra' [Earth], which may or may not have been intended symbolically.

The temple was constructed in the following manner:

1. The place of working was enclosed by a circle as shown in Book Five, Chapter Three. The banners were propped at the circle's edge.
2. The red silk rug was laid in the center of the circle.
3. The four small wax tablets were arranged in a square pattern in the center of the silk rug, 1 yard square.
4. The table was balanced upon the wax tablets, so that the hollow cylinders at the end of the table legs overlapped them.
5. The large wax tablet was placed on the center of the table.
6. The silk tablecloth was draped over the table, covering the large wax tablet, so that the tassels dangled almost to the floor.

7. The crystal was laid on the top of the tablecloth, balanced on the indentation in the wax tablet.

III. THE MAGICAL BOOK

THE MAGUS was required to have a book in which prayers and conjurations were recorded for use within the temple. For the complete practice of Enochian evocation, it probably would have had the following contents:

§1: PRAYERS

THE ORATION TO GOD—as shown in Book Two, Chapter Five.

THE PRAYER OF ENOCH—as shown in Book One, Chapter Two.

THE FUNDAMENTAL OBESANCE—as shown in Book Five, Chapter Four.

§2. CONJURATIONS

THE HEPTARCHIC CONJURATIONS—formed by inserting the specific attributes of each King and Prince (as shown in Book Two, Chapter Seven) with the generalized conjuration (as shown in Book Two, Chapter Six).

THE ANGELICAL KEYS—as shown in Book Three. These were to be written in both Angelical and English. Note that the last key was to be repeated 30 times, with the third word altered to indicate the Aire being worked. In Sloane MS. 3191, the the various Aires are listed in the margin. The individual names of the Aires are given in Book Four, Column Four.

THE INVITATIONS TO THE ANGELS OF THE QUARTERS—as shown in Book Five, Chapters Five through Thirteen.

The ordering of Dee's workbooks suggests that he intended a certain cross-semination of the earlier (Heptarchic) and later (Angelical) systems. In any case, the magical book is described in Dee's diaries as consisting first of the invocation of the Names of God and second of the invocation of the Angels, by the Names of God—an ordering is preserved in the contents above.

Note that, unlike other renaissance magical systems, Enochian evocation does not include a 'Dismissal' or 'Licence to Depart', a conjuration designed to send a spirit back to its dwelling place. Dee evidently felt this to be unnecessary, although most renaissance Magi would have considered this omission dangerous.

IV. THE ANGELS

ENOCHIAN evocation was believed to summon three interrelated hierarchies of angels:

1. THE HEPTARCHICAL ROYALTY—who were believed to govern all earthly actions, & disperse of the will of the Creator. One conjured them to obtain knowledge of God truly, the number and doings of His Angels perfectly and the beginning and ending of Nature substantially. These Angels were based upon the 7 planets and the 7 days of the week.
2. THE ANGELS OF THE AIRES—who were believed to rule over the various countries of the earth. One conjured them to subvert whole countries without armies, to get the favour of all the (human) Princes, & to know the secret treasure of the waters, and the unknown caves of the earth. These Angels were based on the 12 houses of the Zodiac and the 30 Aires, which were evidently subdivisions of the 'vault of stars' in which the 'fixed stars' were believed to reside.
3. THE ANGELS OF THE QUARTERS—who were believed to have been put onto the earth so that the Devil's envious will might be bridled, the determinations of God fulfilled, and his creatures kept and preserved. One conjured them to obtain a variety of semi-divine powers and capabilities. These Angels were based upon the 4 Elements and the 4 compass points.

Thus Enochian evocation consisted of a complete panoply of magical art, covering planetary, zodiacal, and elemental operations and reputed to control hundreds of named and thousands of unnamed Angelic creatures. Because of the complexity of these Angelic hierarchies, I shall discuss each in detail.

§1. THE HEPTARCHICAL ROYALTY

THE HEPTARCHICAL Royalty are described in Book Two, Chapter Four, and were believed to rule over the days of the week and the planets. The relationship of the primary Heptarchic hierarchy is shown in the following figure:

KING CARMARA

PRINCE HAGONEL

Note that the 'Son of the Sons' HAGONEL had a different sigil than PRINCE HAGONEL and thus was a different angelic personage.

The names of the 42 ministers were generated from the each table by starting with each letter and continuing rightwards to the end of the table, then looping around to the beginning. This made six sets of seven ministers per day, each set ruling for four hours [beginning at midnight]. For example, the 42 ministers for Prince BAGANOL (Friday) are

|          |         |         |         |         |         |         |         |

The Heptarchical Royalty also included a set of 49 planetary angels, of whom 14 were the Kings and Princes for the days. The 'Table of the 49 Good Angels' at the close of Book Two shows the primary planetary attribution of each of these entities. Curiously, the planetary attributions of the Kings were the only ones that matched the traditional linking of the days of the week with the planets. By extrapolation, it is likely that each angel had a double attribution as follows:

|         | SUNDAY             |         | MONDAY            |
|---------|--------------------|---------|-------------------|

§2. THE ANGELS OF THE AIRES

THE 91 PRINCIPAL Angels of the Aires are listed in tabular form in Book Four.

COLUMN ONE gives the name of the country over which each Angel rules. These are based on Ptolemy's Geography.

COLUMN TWO gives the name of each Angel, which is the same as the name of the part of the Earth as imposed by God.

COLUMN THREE gives the sigil for each Angel. These are derived from the Great Table of the Quarters, by connecting the letters that spell the Angel's name. Note that 'PARAOAN' is an 'overlay' using letters belonging to other Angels, (beginning with the 'P' in PARZIBA) and that 'LEXARPH', 'COMANAN', and 'TABITOM' are generated from the central cross. 'LEXARPH' uses the 'L' at the bottom right corner of the Western quarter. These sigils are not given in Sloane MS. 3191, but are included here for completeness. Note also that a sigil is given in the table for an entity LAXDIZI, which is not in the 91 Aires.

COLUMN FOUR gives the Aire in which the Angel dwells. These are evidently similar to the layers of Heaven described in Gnostic texts. The order LIL is the highest and TEX is the lowest; note that the Holy Land is governed by LIL.

COLUMN FIVE gives the number of servitor Angels (ministers) that are controlled by each Angel.

COLUMN SIX gives the total of all the Angels ruling in each Aire.

COLUMN SEVEN gives the names of the Angelic Kings that rule over each Angel. There is one King per sign of the Zodiac:

1. OLPAGED for Scorpio, 2. ZIRACAH for Aquarius, 3. HONONOL for Leo, 4. ZARNAAH for Gemini, 5. GEBABAL for Libra, 6. ZURCHOL for Pisces, 7. ALPUDUS for Cancer, 8. CADDAMP for Sagittarius, 9. ZARZILG for Virgo, 10. LAVAVOTH for Aries, 11. ZINGGEN for Capricorn & 12. ARFALOG for Taurus.

COLUMN EIGHT gives the tribe of Israel that corresponds to the Angelic King and each sign of the Zodiac.

COLUMN NINE gives the compass points that should be faced when invoking each angel.

§3. THE ANGELS OF THE QUARTERS

THE ANGELS of the Quarters are listed in detail at the beginning of Chapters Five through Thirteen of Book Five. A cursory examination of the crosses on the tables accompanying each 'Invitation' [conjunction] reveals how these names are generated. Many of the Angels have dual names—presumably both are correct, as both are used in the invitations.

The names of the cacodemons in Chapters Six through Nine are generated by taking a letter from the central cross of the Great Table, and combining it with the first two letters of each Angel's name. For example, the cacodemon Xcz is formed by taking the 'X' in EXARP and combining it with the 'Cz' in CZNS or CZONS. These cacodemons are the only vestige of black magic in Dee's evocation system, other than the stipulation that the word VAOAN in the first Angelical key is to be altered to VOOAN when conjuring evil spirits.

¶ V. TALISMANS

THE USE of various talismans were considered necessary for the practice of evocation magic in general, and were probably used for Enochian evocation as well. Only one Enochian talisman has survived: a beautiful gold disk in the British Museum. A True Relation shows an engraving of his disk on page preceding THE HOLY TABLE; the talisman commemorates a vision that Kelly had of the Angels of the Quarters:

A Vision. The sign of the love of God toward his faithful. Four sumptuous and belligerant Castles, out of the which sounded Trumpets thrice.

§ The sign of Majesty, the Cloth of the passage was cast forth.

§ In the East, the cloth red; after the new smitten blood

§ In the South, the cloth white, Lilly-colour

§ In the North, the cloth, Hair-coloured, Bilbery juyce.

The Trumpets sound once. The gates open. The four Castles are moved. There issueth 4 Trumpeters, whose Trumpets are a Pyramis, six cones, wreathed. There followeth out of every Castle 3, holding up their Banners displayed, with ensigne, the Names of God. There follow Seniors six, alike from the four Gates: After them cometh from every part a King: whose Princes are five, gardant, and holding up his train. Next issueth the Crosse of 4 angels, of the Majesty of Creation in God attended upon everyone, with 4: a white Cloud, 4 Crosses, bearing the witnesses of the Covenant of God, with the Prince gone out before; which were confirmed, everyone, with ten Angels, visible in countenance; After every Crosses, attendeth 16 Angels, dispositors of the will of those, that govern the Castles. They proceed. And, in and about the middle of the Court, the Ensigns keep their standings, opposite to the middle of the Gate: The rest pause. The 24 Senators meet: They seem to consult. It vanisheth.

Although the use for the gold disk is not known, it may have been worn as a protective amulet during the Enochian evocation ritual.

The Magus was definitely required to construct a talisman for each group of Angels that he wished to conjure. These were made of 'sweet wood', with the characters 'painted' upon them. The talismans were held in the hand as thou shalt have cause to use them, implying that the Magus held them during the prayers. During the conjurations, however, thy feet must be placed upon these tables, indicating that the Magus' dominance over the Angels was signified by his standing upon the Talisman.

Although none of these talismans appear to have survived, the talismanic methods of Agrippa can be applied to devise probable reconstructions of these important ceremonial objects.

§1. TALISMANS FOR THE HEPTARCHICAL ROYALTY

ALTHOUGH this hierarchy includes several hundred entities, only the prince of each day and the SONS OF THE SONS OF LIGHT actually have their own 'signatures' or sigils. Evidently this means that a single talisman was to be constructed for each day, with an extra one for King CARMARA and Prince HAGONEL. The following sample represents a speculative reconstruction of the talisman for the conjuration of the Angels of Friday:

§2. TALISMANS FOR THE ANGELS OF THE AIRES

EACH OF THE 91 Princes has his [or her] own signature, which clearly implies that 91 separate talismans were to be constructed. The Angelic Kings of the Zodiac have no signatures, which indicates that their name alone (like the magical Names of God) carried the requisite power to invoke their influence. The following sample represents a speculative reconstruction of the talisman for the conjuration of PASCOMB, the Earthly Guardian of Syria:

§3. TALISMANS FOR THE ANGELS OF THE QUARTERS

NONE OF THE Angels of the Quarters have their own signatures, a fact that would seem to indicate the relatively exalted status of these entities. The following sample represents a speculative reconstruction of the talisman for the conjuration of the Angels of Transformation that dwell in the West:

§4. ENOCHIAN LETTERS

It is possible that, rather than Roman letters, the 'Enochian' alphabet was to be used to draw up the talismans (although no Enochian letters appear in Sloane MS. 3191). There are several versions of this magical alphabet in Dee's diaries; the following version appears to be a script rendition, as it is much easier to write with a quill pen than the sigil-like letters that appear later in Dee's notes.

¶ VI. THE CEREMONIES

AFTER THE FURNITURE, book, and talisman had been prepared, the following schedule was to be kept:

1. FIRST FOUR DAYS—prayers were fervently spoken three times daily.
2. NEXT FOURTEEN DAYS—while continuing with the prayers, conjurations were added to the agenda.
3. THE FIFTEENTH DAY—at this point the prayers and conjurations were believed to become effective, and the Angels were supposed to appear within the crystal.

Once the Angels had appeared, it was no longer considered necessary to go through the entire repertory to conjure them. Once successfully conjured, the Angels were to remain obedient to the Magus for the remainder of his life.

It is probable that some cross-semination might have been intended, for example, using the first 18 Keys as preliminary conjurations to summoning the Angels of the Quarters. Dee also tended to punctuate his scrying sessions with readings from the Bible; Psalms 33 is mentioned specifically.

APPENDIX B
TRANSLATOR'S NOTES

The Story of the Manuscripts

THE SURVIVAL OF THE MAGICAL MANUSCRIPTS OF JOHN DEE was an accident, or more accurately, a series of accidents and coincidences that rival in strangeness the subject matter that the manuscripts contain.

Even while they were being written, certain of the most essential manuscripts were almost destroyed. Although the incident and the motivations behind it are not mentioned in any of the extant diaries, Dee describes their reappearance:

*I espied . . . a sheet of faire white paper lying tossed to and fro in the wind. I rose and went up to it and there I found three of my Books lying, which were so diligently burnt the tenth day of April last. The three books were: 1. Enoch his Book, 2. The 48 Claves Angelicæ, 3. Liber Scientia terrestris auxilii & victoriæ.*[Additional manuscripts were then discovered to be:] in the back of the furnace . . . the hole which was not greater than the thickness of a brick.†*

Pethaps to prevent further mishaps, Dee later secreted a number of the more important manuscripts in the false bottom of a cedar chest, whose lock and hinges [were] extraordinarily neat, where they remained hidden for over 50 years. The chest was sold at the auction following Dee's death to one Mr. John Woodall, and eventually found its way into a furniture shop in Adle Street on London. A Mr. Jones, confectioner, bought it for his wife, and for twenty years the chest with its secret treasure remained in her boudoir. Then one day, upon moving the chest, Mrs. Jones heard some loose thing rattle it, toward the right hand end, under the box or till. Her husband pried open the bottom, revealing a private drawer, which being drawn out, therein were found diverse books in manuscript and papers, together with a little box, and therein a chaplet of olive beads, and a cross of wood hanging at the end of them.*

* Casaubon, op. cit., p. 418.

† Ibidem, p. 419.

Ignorant of the value of the papers, they allowed their servant maid to waste about one half of them under pies, and other like uses but later kept the rest more safe. Four years later, Mrs. Jones was forced to flee the great fire of London and, though the chest perished in the flames, because not easily to be removed, yet the books were taken out and carried with the rest of her goods. She later remarried a Mr. Wale, who identified the manuscripts and transferred them to Elias Ashmole, a respected scholar, for transcription and preservation.†

Elias Ashmole also preserved a number of Dee's diaries (December 22, 1581 to May 23, 1583) that were in the library of one Samuel Story. Yet another 17th Century scholar, Meric Casaubon discovered [and published in the True Relation] additional diaries from April 20, 1583 to May 23, 1587 in the library of Sir Thomas Cotton, who had inherited them from his father, Sir Robert Cotton, one of Dee's contemporaries. Casaubon also located a very rare fragment of Dee's diaries from late in his life (March 20, 1607 to September 7, 1607), which had been underground, God knows how long.‡

The preservation of Dee's manuscripts by Ashmole & Casaubon illustrates that the importance of Dee's manuscripts was already recognized within 50 years of his death. These manuscripts have had an enormous effect upon the development of occultism in Great Britain and the United States. An interesting fragment, included at the back of Sloane MS. 3677 (Ashmole's copy of Sloane MS. 3188), describes the finding of treasure using magical names from the Enochian system. From internal references and style of handwriting, we know that this fragment dates from the mid-17th Century, indicating that the Enochian magical system was maintained in practical use after Dee's death. It is possible that elements of the system may have been introduced into the Rosicrucian teachings by Ashmole; in any case magicians of later centuries have constructed elaborate additions to Dee's original system.

GENERAL METHOD OF TRANSLATION & TRANSCRIPTION

THE ENTIRE CORPUS of Dee's magical work is far too large to present in a single volume. The Enochian Evocation is intended to present the essential core of Dee's evocation system arranged in a fashion similar to other renaissance evocation texts. It was transcribed, translated and edited according to the following procedure:

1. Manuscripts copies were obtained in microfilm from the British Library.
2. The various manuscripts were cross-compared to differentiate between essential and non-essential portions. The first level of cross-comparison was performed at this time.
3. The textual material from the essential portions of the manuscripts was transcribed.
4. Latin portions were translated.
5. The resulting corpus was subjected to further cross-comparison and linguistic analysis, and arranged to resemble a typical evocation text of the renaissance.
6. The text was edited for consistency and clarity.
7. The various sigils and figures for the text were carefully traced and restored from microfilm prints of the source manuscripts.
8. To clarify discrepancies, I traveled to London and examined Sloane MS. 3191 personally at the British Library.
9. The resulting material was brought to completion and published by Heptangle Books.

Notes on Book One

BOOK ONE consists of excerpts from four of Dee's diaries, all contained in Cotton Appendix XLVI and published in the True Relation:

Mensis Mysticus Saobaticus Pars primus ejusdem, op. cit. 73-114

Libri Mystici Apertorii Cracoviensis Sabbatici, op. cit., 115-152

Libri Semptimi Apertorii Cracoviensis Mystici Sabbatici, op. cit., 153-202

Libri Cracoviensis Mysticus Apertorius Præteria Præmium Madimianum, op. cit., 203-212

The intent of Book One is to provide the pseudo-history of the magic as related by Kelly's angels, as well as hints as to its purpose and practice. Nearly every renaissance magical text contains such a 'pedigree', which is entirely lacking in Sloane MS. 3191.

Notes on Book Two

BOOK TWO consists primarily of De Heptarchia Mystica, which is contained in Sloane MS. 3191, 32[ro] to 51[ro]. The sigil of Æmeth, the ring of Solomon, and the table are from Mysteriorum Liber Primus in Sloane MS. 3188. The first three chapters of De Heptarchia Mystica (as presented in MS. 3191) contain cross-references to dates in Sloane MS. 3188; these have been omitted as unnecessary. Sloane MS. 3677 and Sloane MS. 3678 (Elias Ashmole's copies of MSS. 3188 and 3199 respectively) were also used for additional readings.

Notes on Book Three

BOOK THREE is based upon the 49 Claves Angelice, contained in Sloane MS. 3191, 1[ro] to 13[ro]. Because so many versions of the Angelical Keys have been published in the past, I have taken a different approach in the present volume.

The first column of Book Three contains a cross-reference number for each Angelical word, showing the key that it is in, as well as its numerical position in that key. The second column shows a corrected version of the Enochian, the result of extensive cross-comparison and linguistic analysis. Corrections based upon NN

Cotton Appendix XLVI have been incorporated, as well as simple corrections based on common-sense grammatical rules. Variants from Sloane MS. 3191 reading have been documented in footnotes, except where the correction was sufficiently obvious. § Presumably an even more self-consistent version of the keys could be generated with further cross analysis. Column 2 represents what I believe to be the logical limit of amendment; further corrections would deviate too greatly from the keys as dictated by Kelly.

Column 3 contains an exact transcription of the Angelical version of the keys in Sloane MS. 3191; the pronunciation marks are Dee's own. Column 4 contains an exact transcription of the English version of the keys in Sloane MS. 3191; the punctuation and spelling is Dee's own. Lacunæ in the text are described in the footnotes. Note that Sloane MS. 3191 shows the Angelical left to right, with the English written above. I have returned the format to that used in Cotton Appendix XLVI—a downwardly enumerated matched list.

Additional readings for Book Three were taken from Sloane MS. 3678 (Ashmole's copy of Sloane MS. 3191) and the following books from Sloane MS. 3188:

Mensis Mysticus Saobaticus Pars primus ejusdem, Casaubon, op. cit. pgs. 73-114.

Libri Mystici Apertorii Cracoviensis Sabbatici, ibid., pgs. 115-152.

Libri Semptimi Apertorii Cracoviensis Mystici Sabbatici, ibid., 153-202.

Libri Cracoviensis Mystici Apertorius Præteria Præmium Madimianum, ibid., pgs., 203-212.

Notes on Book Four

BOOK FOUR is the first part of the Liber Scientiæ Auxilii et Victoriæ Terrestris, contained in Sloane MS. 3191, 14[ro] to 31[ro]. The biblical quotes at the beginning refer obviously to the figure showing the ordering of the tribes of Israel. In Sloane MS. 3191, this figure appears on 31[ro]. I have redrawn it with English captions and inserted it next to the quotes that refer to it. The large table of sigils at the end of Book Four is actually [57vo] & 58[ro] in Sloane MS. 3191; since the sigils refer directly to the third and fourth columns of the lists in Book Four, I have included it here as a bridge into Book Five. These sigils are overlays to the GREAT TABLE in Book Five.

§ An early version of the corrected keys appeared in Gnostica Magazine Number 47, September 1978.

Notes on Book Five

BOOK FIVE is taken from the remainder of Liber Scientia following De Heptarchia Mystica in Sloane MS. 3191, 52[ro] to [80vo]. The GREAT TABLE (not to be confused with the 'Great Table' published in the preface to the True Relation) proposed some interesting transcription problems. Sloane MS. 3191 contains three variants (if you include the sigils shown in Book Four), while two additional variants are given in Cotton Appendix XLVI. Within all the variant tables are corrections, slashed letters, and amendments, indicating a series of changes. The problem lies in that the final version (which wasn't completed until 1587, three years after the original table was dictated) does not match the names of the angels as given in Sloane MS. 3191. I have therefore chosen to give two versions of the table, the first matching the angels, and the second representing the final corrections made in 1587. The intermediary versions I have omitted as unessential. The ambitious scholar is free to retrofit the angelic names to the 'corrected' table, as it is sufficiently obvious how each name is generated from the table.* It should be noted that my presentation of this table as two separate versions departs significantly from the Golden Dawn tradition of including all the variant letters in each square. I judged this approach as unsatisfactory, because every other 'magic square' in renaissance magic contains only one element per square, and because many of the letters included in the G. D. version are clearly scratched out in the original manuscript. The tables in the present volume represent what I believe to be an accurate portrayal of what Dee and Kelly intended. The breakdown of Book Five into individual chapters is not in Sloane MS. 3191, but the material lends itself well to this approach, as there are distinct sets of tables and conjurations.

APPENDIX D

BIBLIOGRAPHY

§1. Manuscripts

The Sloane and Cotton collections are in the British Library. The Bodleian and Ashmolean collections are at Oxford.

SLOANE MS. 3191.

This manuscript is the only book of ceremonial magic extant in Dee's handwriting. It consists of three separate 'books,' each detailing a different aspect of Dee's angelic magical system. The books are:—

49 Claves Angelicæ Anno 1584 Cracoviæ (Liber 18) which contains Dee's transcription of the Angelical Keys (often called the Enochian Keys or Enochian Calls).

Liber Scientiæ Auxilii et Victoriæ Terrestris which contains a complex system of magic based upon the Great Table (often called The Table of Watchtowers). It is entirely in Latin, and related to the Call of the Thirty Aires.

De Heptarchia Mystica which describes a complete system of planetary magic, along with excerpts from the various scrying sessions.

SLOANE MS. 3188.

This manuscript contains Dee's earliest scrying sessions. It contains six individual 'books,' which are:—

Mysteriorum Liber Primus covering December 22, 1581 to March 15, 1582, and containing a ceremony with Saul (Dee's first scryer) and the first ceremonies with Edward Talbot, in which the table and Solomon's ring are described.

Mysteriorum Liber Secundus covering March 6, 1582 to March 21, 1582, and containin the first elements of the Heptarchic system, the spirits of the Sigil of Æmeth, and the first suggestion that an antediluvian language would be delivered to Dee. The title page is missing, but can be inferred from textual references in Sloane MS. 3677.

Mysteriorum Liber Tertius covering April 28, 1582 to May 4, 1582, and containing numerous sigils related but apparently not essential to the Heptarchic system, as well as the names of the 49 good angels.

Quartus Liber Mysteriorum covering November 15, 1583 to November 21, 1583, and containing the remainder of the Heptarchic system; this book is the first to record the name of Edward Kelly as the scryer.

Liber Mysteriorum Quintus covering March 23, 1583 to April 18, 1583, and containing the tables later transcribed by Kelly into Sloane MS. 3189.

Quinti Libri Mysteriorum Appendix covering April 20, 1583 to May 23, 1583, and containing the famous Enochian letters, as well as information concerning the construction of the Great Table.

COTTON APPENDIX XLVI, PARTS 1 & 2.

This manuscript is occasionally referred to as Royal Appendix XLVI, or Sloane MS. 5007. It contains thirteen 'books,' which are:—

Liber Mysteriorum (et Sancti) parallelus Novalisque covering May 28, 1583 to July 4, 1583, and containing the tail end of the Hepharchic system and the only recorded incident of Kelly speaking Greek.

Liber Peregrinationis Prime Videlicet A Mortlaco Angeliae Ad Craconiam Poloniæ covering September 21, 1583 to March 13, 1584, and containing the journey from Mortlack to Cracow Poland and various political speculations.

Mensis Mysticus Sabbaticus Pars primus ejusdem covering April 10, 1584 to April 30, 1584, and containing the dictations of the first four calls (backwards).

Libri Mystici Apertorii Cracoviensis Sabbatici covering May 7, 1584 to May 22, 1584, and containing the remainder of the call (except for the call of the Thirty aires) in the Angelical tongue, and the spirits of the Thirty aires.

Libri Septimi Cracoviensis Mystici Sabbatici covering May 23, 1584 to July 12, 1584, and containing the geographic locations of the spirits of the Thirty aires, the Great Table or Watchtowers, and the first third of the Call of the Thirty Aires.

Libri Cracoviensis Mystici Apertorius Præterea Præmium Madimianum covering July 12, 1584 to August 15, 1584, and containing the remainder of the Call of the Thirty Aires, as well as the names of the Thirty aires.

Mysteriorum Pragensium Liber Primus Cæsareusque covering August 15, 1584 to October 8, 1584, and containing an attempt to convince the Holy Roman Emperor of the canonical nature of the visions.

Mysteriorum Pragensium Confirmatio covering December 20, 1584 to March 20, 1585, and containing mostly political speculation.

Mysteriorum Cracoveinsium Stephanicorum Mysteria Stephanica covering April 12, 1585 to June 6, 1585, and containing an alchemical formula and a letter from Dee's wife to the spirits.

Unica Actio, quæ Pucciana vocetor covering August 6, 1585 to September 6, 1585, and containing religious visions obviously meant to impress the Papal Nuncio who was then attending the ceremonies.

Liber Resurrectionis Pragæ, Pactum seu Fœdus Sabbatismi covering fragments from April 30, 1586 to January 21, 1587, and containing further ceremonies with the Papal Nuncio.

Actio Tertia Trebonæ Generalis covering April 4, 1587 to May 23, 1587, and containing a complex series of corrections to the Watch-towers and the infamous wife-swapping episode.

Jesus, Omnipotens sempiternæ & unæ Deus covering March 20, 1607 to September 7, 1607 and containing the last records of Dee's magical experiments.

§2. Related Manuscripts.

The following manuscripts are of general interest to the scholar of Dee's magical system:

SLOANE MS. 3677—Elias Ashmole's copy of Sloane MS. 3188.

SLOANE MS. 3678—Elias Ashmole's copy of Sloane MS. 3191.

SLOANE MS. 3189, Liber Mysteriorum Sextus and Sanctus or The Book of Enoch revealed to John Dee by the Angels which contains 49 double-sided tables of (apparently) random letters. It is in Edward Kelly's handwriting.

SLOANE MS. 2599—Copy of Sloane MS. 3189, possibly by Ashmole.

SLOANE MS. 78—contains fragments of Sloane MS. 3189.

SLOANE MS. 2575—contains fragments of Sloane MS. 3189.

§3. More Related Manuscripts.

I have not personally examined or researched the following manuscripts, but I include their references as points for future study. Some of the catalogue numbers may be out of date.

SLOANE MS. 307—A collection of Enochian material from other manuscripts.

SLOANE MS. 3190—A copy of the True Relation with notes.

BODELEIAN MS. 8465aa (Black Catalogue 580)—Collation of his printed actions with spirits with the original MSS. (Ashmole).

BODELEIAN MS. 8460* (Black Catalogue 1788, p 38, 65)—Papers concerning the actions (Ashmole).

BODELEIAN MS. 8461* (Black Catalogue 1790, 1-28, 34 &c.)—Papers concerning the actions (Ashmole).

BODELEIAN MS. 8462* Papers concerning the actions (Ashmole).

BODELEIAN MS. 487 Notes from his fifth book of Mysteries (Ashmole).

ASHMOLE MS. 580—Ashmole's copy of True Relation with notes and cross references.

ASHMOLE MS. 1788—Various papers relating to the action, compiled by Ashmole.

ASHMOLE MS. 1790—Ashmole's observations and recollections concerning Dee's magical work.

§4. Published Works.

The following published works also contributed to the writing of this volume:—

Meric Casaubon, ed., A True and Faithful Relation of what passed for many Yeers Between Dr. John Dee and Some Spirits: London, 1659; Republished by Askin: London, 1974. The published version of Cotton Appendix XLVI Parts 1 & 2.

Aleister Crowley, The Equinox, Weiser: New York, 1972, Vol. VII, pages 228 to 243 presents some scattered pieces of Sloane MS. 3191 with Golden Dawn elaborations. Volume VIII, pages 100-128 presents a 'self-pronouncing' interpretation of the Keys.

John Dee, The Hieroglyphic Monad, Weiser: New York, 1975; Dee's early philosophical-magical speculations.

John Dee, The Mathematicall Præface to the Elements of Geometrie of Euclid of Megara, Science History Publications: New York, 1975; John Dee's most influential work, but only marginally concerned with magic.

Peter J. French, John Dee, The World of an Elizabethian Magus, Routledge and Kegan Paul: London, 1972; A definitive look at Dee's life, including an excellent bibliography of manuscripts and published works about Dee.

James Orchard Halliwell, ed., The Private Diary of Dr. John Dee, AMS Press: London, 1968; Another of Dee's diaries, along with a catalogue of the books and manuscripts in his collection prior to its partial destruction.

Donald C. Laycock, The Complete Enochian Dictionary, Askin: London, 1978; Contains an accurate transcription of the Angelical Keys in Sloane MS. 3191, but without pronunciation marks or lacunæ. The English rendering has been modernized. The dictionary also references Crowley's 'phonetic' Angelical. It includes an excellent bibliography of recent minor publications dealing with Enochian matters.

Israel Regardie, ed., The Golden Dawn, Llewellyn Publications: St. Paul, 1971; Book Nine contains an overview of then baroque Golden Dawn 'Enochian' magic, loosely based on Dee's original system. A version of the Keys is also included.

Leo Vinci, GMICALZOMA! An Enochian Dictionary, Regency Press: London & New York, 1976; An exhaustive early dictionary.

A. E. Waite, ed., The Alchemical Writings of Edward Kelly, Weiser: New York, 1975; provides a contrast to Kelly's work with Dee.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

During the course of preparing this book for publication I have incurred the debt of many friends, colleagues and public institutions, without whose help the work could not have been completed.

My grateful thanks are due to the British Library Board for permission to reproduce the first folio of John Dee's De Heptarchia Mystica (Sloane MS 3191) and Edward Kelly's treasure map (Sloane MS 3188); to Desmond Bourke and the staff of the British Museum's Department of Manuscripts for their tireless assistance throughout the duration of my studies; and to the Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library of Yale University, Connecticut, for permission to publish a page from the Voynich manuscript.

I am greatly indebted to my old friend Charles Cattell for his talented and enthusiastic rendering of the Heptarchia's complex and daunting artwork, to Robin Cousins for his contribution on ancient Mortlake, and to Christopher Upton for his translation of Dee's Latin.

My thanks also to Craig Townsend for his preliminary translation of Kelly's treasure text, to Stephen Lauder on matters of textual presentation, and to Theodore Howard, Christian Wilby, Michael Bottomley, Michael Marchant, Nicholas Spalding, Steven Crompton, Shirley McIver, William Cammies, and the staff of Wolverhampton Public Libraries, all of whom came forward with constructive help and encouragement during the various stages of my work.

Special thanks to my wife Patricia for information regarding historical matters, her many valuable suggestions, and for undertaking the unenviable task of proof-reading the entire text.

Finally, I wish to offer my sincerest gratitude to my publishers whose capable, friendly, and active participation has made this new edition of the Heptarchia possible.

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION

Since the first appearance of this work,* so much has transpired, on so many levels, that it has become necessary to present this amended and expanded version of John Dee's De Heptarchia Mystica to the public.

In this new rendering we have been at pains to make good the various shortcomings of the preliminary transcription by careful re-examination of Dee's original manuscript. Errors arising from initial difficulties in interpreting the Elizabethan hand have now, it is hoped, been eradicated, resulting in a more intelligible and coherent text. Additionally, I have been fortunate enough to find Mr Christopher Upton, an apt and erudite scholar who has dealt admirably with the Latin elements in the work. Mr Upton's translations of the integrated section headings and sub-notes greatly enhance the value of the book, making hitherto opaque aspects of Dee's treatise available to the non-Latin reader.

To emphasize John Dee's deep involvement with cryptology and antiquarian matters, I have appended an entirely new item regarding the enigmatic Voynich Manuscript, and a curious treasure map which came into Dee's possession while engaged in his early Angelic experiments. It is hoped that these and other inclusions will prove of interest to both occultist and historian.

The exact location of John Dee's Mortlake home is to this day a subject of some speculation, and due to the state of abject poverty in which Dee lived out the final years of his life, only the faintest details of his burial at the Church of St Mary continue to survive. In order to place the various interrelated aspects of this book in proper context and to paint as accurate a picture as possible of John Dee's life and times, I felt it necessary to furnish the reader with any information which could be obtained regarding these long-neglected matters.

On the subject of Elizabethan and modern Mortlake I therefore consulted Robin Cousins, a young colleague who has conducted extensive antiquarian researches in the Richmond upon Thames area. Robin agreed to investigate historic Mortlake with particular reference to John Dee and to add his findings as a concluding section to this volume.

In Mortlake Revisited, Robin Cousins reveals many fascinating and little-known details regarding Dee's home town, the position of the old house (now long demolished), and provides us with a description of the 'good Doctor's' last resting place which powerfully evokes the wretched circumstances that finally engulfed Elizabethan England's greatest magus.

HISTORICAL FOREWORD

The richness of the Elizabethan epoch – perhaps the greatest period in British history – can be seen as the reflection of those great minds which interwove to produce the glittering tapestry of their time. In this age of worthies, there arose a man of great talents: John Dee. Mathematician, astronomer, geographer and historian, he was a man of great genius whose merits were extolled by royalty and nobility alike; a true Renaissance scholar, equal in every way to the finest minds of his era.

Dee's erudition endeared him to Queen Elizabeth I, who appointed him as her Astrologer Royal and counsellor on certain matters of state and scientific importance. Yet, in spite of his prominence in the Elizabethan world, Dee remains strangely neglected by latter day historians.

It is scarcely necessary to furnish the reader with a detailed account of John Dee's life, as the subject has been adequately dealt with elsewhere.* A single quotation – if rather turgid and pontifical – from Dr Thomas Smith's The Life of John Dee will suffice to indicate the course of Dee's earlier life and development:

John Dee first drew the breath of life at London on the 13th day of the month of July, at 4 o'clock and 11 minutes p.m. in the year of the eternal incarnated Word 1527. His father was Roland Dee, an honourable man, and coming of a family sufficiently genteel, whose care, according to the affection implanted by nature towards his own son, as well as his being a boy of great hope and good disposition, was chiefly bestowed in informing his mind with Greek and Latin literature. The curriculum of the studies in which boys are accustomed to be taught being happily passed, partly in London, partly in Chelmsford in the County of Essex, he was entered by his most loving father in the 16th year of his age, at Cambridge, in the College dedicated to the memory St John the Evangelist, to be taught the higher Sciences, at the end of the year 1542.*

At Cambridge Dee devoured knowledge at an incredible rate, working at his books and tutorials for up to eighteen hours a day. In 1548 he attained to the degree of Master of Arts and left Cambridge to further his education on the continent. His fame spread throughout Europe, and in his twenty-third year (1550) he lectured on Euclid to enthusiastic audiences at the University of Paris.

It seems that Dee's reputation as a philosopher stood him in good stead with the English court throughout two reigns, marred only by his brief imprisonment – falsely accused of conjuring spirits – under Mary, in June 1555. Some measure of Elizabeth's esteem for her philosopher can be gleaned from the fact that in 1558 Dee was appointed to erect a horoscope in order to ascertain the most favourable date for her coronation.

Dee was a prolific writer, producing innumerable books and manuscripts throughout his long life span. These works covered a vast and varied range of subjects: the arts, sciences and philosophies were all represented in admirable and studious detail, some being so long and complex that printers refused to accept them. In 1570, Dee published his widely acclaimed 'Mathematicall preface' to the English edition of Euclid's Geometry (The Elements of Geometrie of the most auncient Philosopher Euclide of Megara, trans. Sir Henry Billingsley, London, 1570), a work of great originality and erudition which exerted a powerful influence on sixteenth-century scientific thought.

Few of Dee's works have been reprinted in modern times, the one notable exception being The Hieroglyphic Monad, which since its first appearance in 1564 (Monas Hieroglyphica,

**The Life of John Dee, an English Mathematician*, Dr Thomas Smith, translated from the Latin by Wm. Alexr. Ayton, The Theosophical Publishing Society, London 1908.

Antwerp, 1564) has passed through six editions and is still available to this day. In this work, Dee attempts to symbolize the homogeneity of the Universe and the Creator, each individual element being portrayed as an interrelating component of the Monad, represented as a Mercuric emblem combined with the point and binary crescents.

Aside from his personal literary pursuits Dee was a prodigious collector of books. His library amounted to some three thousand volumes and several hundred manuscripts, rivalling any collection in the Elizabethan world. These, together with a vast array of Celtic records, ancient seals and genealogies, were preserved at his house in Mortlake.

Dee's Mortlake home also housed his collection of scientific instruments. Astrolabes, quadrants, globes, all manner of optical and navigational equipment filled his laboratories. In his Vita Joannis Dee (1707), Thomas Smith describes the contents of Dee's library as follows:

To the noble furniture of the Library, there appertained a not moderate accumulation of Mathematical Instruments and Machines: also those which at that time had not been brought into common use, as well as those which by his own ingenuity amended and reformed he had brought into a better condition, amongst which that I may omit the rest, were a quadrant and a staff, the semidiameter of it being five feet, but of this, ten, accurately marked with divisions, the globe of Mercator, amended and improved by the help of new observations, by means of which he had inserted the places and motions of the Comets, which appeared at their proper time, the octave, the ninth and tenth of their spheres, according to the hypothesis of the theory of Purbachius, ornamented with a horizon and brass meridian; mariner's compasses of various kinds and fabricated to find the variation; and lastly, a clock, which, in that age, was held almost for a miracle, adapted to measure the second minutes of the hour . . .

Dee invented various navigational instruments of his own design, amongst them a device which he called the Paradoxical Compass, which could be corrected to avoid charting errors. Mariners, however, mistrusted this new innovation (or, more likely, could not understand the complex principle of its operation), and it was rarely used.

Strangely enough, it was Dee's inventive talents that first gave rise to his reputation as a sorcerer. In his early Cambridge days he was responsible for a production of Aristophanes' Pax, for which he contrived a mechanical beetle or Scarabeus, to fly through the air to the Palace of Jupiter, carrying a man and a basket of food. This feat so astonished the audience, who were for the most part ignorant of the mechanical arts, that rumours were spread to the effect that Dee had accomplished this wonder by the aid of demons. Similar superstitious beliefs later (1583) led to Dee's house and library being ransacked by a mob while he and his family were journeying on the continent.

Dee spent most of his life in a state of penury, the majority of his meagre income being taken up in the care of his family and his insatiable appetite for books and travel, for although Queen Elizabeth from time to time sent him gifts of money, it was not until 1596 that she granted him a living as Warden of Christ's College, Cambridge.

After the death of Elizabeth in 1603, Dee's life and health drastically deteriorated. His reputation as a magician continued to hamper him and even at Manchester College he encountered hostility. The Queen's successor James I, author of Demonology – later to become the text-book of witch-hunters – regarded Dee unfavourably, but allowed him to live out the remainder of his life in relative peace.

John Dee died in 1608 and was laid to rest in Mortlake Church. In the present age some will recall him simply as Queen Elizabeth's astrologer, others may acknowledge his contributions to mathematics and navigation, or even remember him as a pioneer of the public libraries system. Nevertheless, it is in the world of occultism that the spirit of John Dee truly lives on. Certain discoveries made after Dee's death tell of a mysteriously hidden aspect of his life. To these findings we devote the remainder of this volume.

INTRODUCTION

Over four hundred years have elapsed since John Dee transcribed his fair copy of De Heptarchia Mystica. Before this, the work existed in embryonic form as a mass of complex and somewhat confusing notes, scattered throughout the early books of his Spiritual Diaries. In the interests of clarity, I have employed Dee's final condensation of the 'Sevenfold Doctrine' as the major text of this volume; to which I have appended an extensive series of notes in an attempt to rectify various shortcomings, and to amplify important points.

The contracted and simplified format of Dee's fair copy seems to have been intended as a basic guide to the system, orientated towards practical experimentation, and possessing striking similarities to many of the grimoires of antiquity. Whether or not Dee actually employed the invocations of the Heptarchia in further attempts to communicate with the forty-nine good Angels is uncertain, and certainly not apparent from the scant references to these beings in the later books of Liber Mysteriorum. All we can say conclusively is that, apart from minor inconsistencies and certain obscurities, the Heptarchical text holds together as a unique system of practical occultism, forming the basis of much of Dee's later work.

Fifty-four years after Dee's death, the manuscript of De Heptarchia Mystica – together with other items – was discovered by a confectioner named Jones. It had been hidden in a secret drawer concealed within the base of an old cedar-wood chest which had been purchased by Jones from a shop in Adle Street, London. Ten years later the manuscript together with a number of additional Dee papers passed into the hands of that champion of the magical arts, Elias Ashmole, who restored them to their place of dignity in the annals of occult history.

Ashmole's account regarding the discovery of the manuscripts, and how they subsequently came into his possession, is recorded in his own words on the flyleaf of Liber Mysteriorum I-V (Sloane MS 3188, British Museum).

Be it remembered, that the 20th of August 1672, I received by the hands of my servant Samuell Story, a part of Dr Dee's Manuscripts all written with his own hand; viz: his conference with Angello, which first began the 22nd of December Ano 1581, and continued to the end of May Ano 1583, where the printed Booke of the remaining conferences (published by Dr Casaubon) begins, and are bound up in this volume.

Besides these the Books entitled: The 48 Claves Angelicae, also Liber Scientia Terrestis – Auxilii & Victoria (These two being very individuall Books which the Angels commanded to be burnt and were after restored by them so appears by the printed (Booke) Relations of Dr Dee's Actions with Spirits, pages: 418 & 419.) The Booke entitled De Heptarchia Mystica – Collectanorum Lib: Primus, and a Booke of (Invocations or Calls beginning with the Squares, filled with letters about the Black Cross). These four Bookes I have bound up in another volume.*

All of which were a few daies before delivered to my said servant for my perusall (I being then at Mr Lillies house, at Hershaw in Surry) by my good friend Mr Thomas Wale, one of his Majesties Wardens in the Tower of London. The 5th of Sept. following Mr Wale (having heard of my return to Town) came to my office in the Excise office in Broad Street: and told me he was content to exchange all the afour said Books for one of myne, viz: The Institution of the Garter: to this I agreed and provided one, which I sent him fairly bound, and gilt on the back.

On the 10th of the said Sept: Mr Wale came thither to me again, and brought his wife with him, from her I received the following account of the preservation of these Bookes, until they came to my hands. Viz: that her former husband was one Mr Jones a Confectioner, who formerly dwelt at the plow in Lumbard street London, and who shortly after they were married, took her with him into Adle street – among the joiners to buy some household stuff when (at the Corner House) they saw a chest of extraordinary neate worke, invited them to buy it. The Master of the shop told them it had been part of the goods of one Mr John *Sloane MS 3191, British Museum collection.

Woodall – Chirurgeon (father to Mr Thomas Woodall late Serjant Chirurgeon to his now Majesty King Charles the Second (my intimate friend) and tis very probable he bought it after Dr Dee's death, when his goods were exposed to sale).

Twenty years after this (and about 4 years before the fatall fire of London) her husband and she occasionally removing the chest out of its usuall place, thought they heared some loose things rattle in it toward the right hand end under the box and by some shaking of it were fully satisfied it was so. Herecupon her husband thrust a piece of Iron into a small crevice at the bottom of the chest and therecupon appeared a private drawer, which being drawn out, therein were found divers Bookes in Manuscript and Papers, together with a little box, and therein a chaplet of olive Beades, and a Cross of the same wood, hanging at the end of them.

They made no great matter of these Books and: because they understood them not; which occasioned their servant maid: to waste about one half of them under pyses, and other like uses, which then discovered they kept the rest more safer.

About two years after the discovery of these Bookes Mr Jones dyed and when the Fire of London hapned though the chest perished in the flames because not easily to be removed, yet the Bookes were taken out and carried with the rest of Mrs Jones her goods into Moon fields, and being brought safely back, she toke care to preserve them: and after marrying the aforesaid Mr Wale, he came to the knowledge of them, and therecupon with her consent, sent to me, as I have before set down.

E. Ashmole

A strange story indeed; was it a fear of persecution which caused John Dee to hide his most cherished manuscripts during the last years of his life? Or had Dee always concealed his papers and, perhaps, other equipment within the chest out of the sight of prying eyes? Of the content of the spoiled documents we can only speculate and wince with frustration, for although she may have acted as an instrument of fate, the Jones' maid has much to answer for!

During the period in which I was engaged in studying the Dee manuscripts in the British Library, I came across a second copy of De Heptarchia Mystica bound up with magical treatises by Caius and Forman (Additional MSS 36,674) entitled Compendium Heptarchia Mysticae. The British Library catalogue note suggests that the manuscript represents a rough draft of Dee's fair copy – Sloane 3191, Art. 3 – and is written in the same hand. Apart from minor differences, and the form of the final table, the work appears to be an exact copy of the principal work, even down to the style of writing, which begins chaotically and settles down to a neat precise hand after the first three pages. In addition, the watermark – a hand in the sign of benediction – on each page corresponds exactly to the better known copy of the work. How this version of the Heptarchia came to be bound up with the Caius and Forman treatises is somewhat of a mystery, but I feel that here the key may be with Forman.

Simon Forman (1552-1611), an astrologer, magician and practitioner of medicine, met with John Dee on July 26, 1604 (from a note in Forman's diary) 'at dinner at Mr Staper's house'.* Although their general approach to the magical arts differed – Forman's verging on sorcery and the forbidden – they obviously had much in common and some form of relationship probably developed. It is therefore just possible that Dee introduced Forman to some of his original findings, and even allowed him to take possession of the earlier transcription of De Heptarchia Mystica.

According to a note by Montague Summers,† the 'grimoire' (Ad. MSS 36,674) at one time belonged to Dr John Caius (1510-1573). If this was so, how could De Heptarchia Mystica, which was not written until 1582, have formed part of it? At the time of Caius' death Forman was barely twenty-one, so it is unlikely that his codex could have been included. Can it be that the Dee manuscript came into the British Museum along with papers belonging to Forman, and was bound up with the Caius treatise at a later date? Whatever the answer, it seems certain that Ashmole possessed only one copy of the Heptarchia.

It is apparent from the records that have come down to us that John Dee first encountered the enigmatic personality of Edward Kelly (sometimes spelt 'Kelley') on March 10, 1582. It is assumed that Kelly's real name was Talbot, and in the first record of their meeting (Mysteriorum Liber Primus) Dee refers to him as such. Nine months later – in November 1582 –

**The Case Books of Simon Forman*, A. L. Rowse, p. 197, Picador (Pan Books Ltd), London, 1976.

†Witchcraft and Black Magic, Montague Summers, Rider and Company, London, 1946.

Dee's references to his skryer change – somewhat abruptly – to 'Edward Kelly'. No convincing explanation for this name change has yet been offered, most authorities considering it to be a convenient let-out for Kelly at a time when his murky past was catching up on him. Whatever the reason for the alias, we do know that the name change took place after certain problems in the Dee-Kelly relationship had been resolved, for the Fourth Book of the Mysteries bears the sub-title 'Post reconciliationem Kellianum' (November 15, 1582), and the name Kelly was employed from this time onward.

Although from time to time Dee had enlisted various other seers, their impact upon Dee's life can be seen as totally insignificant when compared with Kelly. Very little is known regarding Kelly's origin. According to Anthony Wood (Athenae Oxoniensis, 1813), Edward Kelly appears to have been born at Worcester on August 1, 1555. It is said that his father was an apothecary and of sufficient means to send his son to Oxford at the age of seventeen. The University records seem to cast some doubt upon this, although several people named Talbot entered during this period. As a profession, Kelly set up as a notary and copyist of wills, and on this ground history accuses him of producing forged title deeds for gain. For this crime he is said to have been pilloried at Lancaster, and afterwards deprived of his ears. Whether or not Kelly in fact suffered this mutilation is uncertain; he is said to have worn a black skull-cap throughout the rest of his life – not unusual in Elizabethan times – but this does nothing to prove the absence of his ears. Arthur Edward Waite, in his preface to The Alchemical Writings of Edward Kelly,* suggests that the story of Kelly's punishment is likely to be a fabrication perpetuated by Nash, who recorded the events in the History and Antiquities of Worcester (London, 1781). In Waite's words:

The distinguished position which he held subsequently at the Court of the Emperor Rudolph would scarcely have been possible to a man who had lost his ears. The credulity of royal personages at the end of the seventeenth century may have facilitated many impostures on the part of the alchemists whom they protected, but could scarcely have extended to accepting the philosophical illumination of an adept who had been branded by law.†

**The Alchemical Writings of Edward Kelly*, Stuart Watkins, London, 1970.

While travelling in Wales, Kelly is said to have come into the possession of the fabled Book of Saint Dunstan – an alchemical treatise written by the founder of Glastonbury Abbey – together with the White and Red Powders of Projection. The manuscript and two caskets containing the powders were said to have been pillaged from the tomb of a bishop by a fanatical Protestant mob, and subsequently exchanged with an innkeeper for a quantity of wine. The innkeeper – not understanding the significance of these items – is alleged to have sold the curios to Kelly for one guinea. Extant versions of this tale cast little light on the truth of the matter; it is however quite likely that Kelly possessed something of this nature, as Dee makes mention of certain powders and a scroll in various diary sections.

Unlike Dee, Kelly was not a literary man, his two short treatises entitled The Philosopher's Stone and The Theatre of Terrestrial Astronomy (published Hamburg, 1676) being his only contributions to posterity. These two alchemical tracts were written during his period of imprisonment under Emperor Rudolph in the Bohemian castle of Zerner. It seems that Kelly was held prisoner in the castle for failing to produce the transmutation of metals which he had promised the Emperor. It was there in his forty-second year (1597) that Kelly met his death. In an attempt to escape from his captors he fell from the castle ramparts and shortly after died from his injuries.

Kelly's dark reputation as a necromancer stems largely from an account in John Weaver's Discourse of Ancient Funeral Monuments (London, 1631). Weaver relates how Edward Kelly and one Paul Waring by way of incantations caused the spirit of a deceased person to return from the grave. The operation is held to have taken place in the yard of Law Church near Walton Ledale in the county of Lancaster. A well-known engraving of the scene was produced in the second edition of Ebenezer Sibley's Illustration of the Occult Sciences. The Sibley engraving depicts two men standing within a magic circle; one holds aloft a torch, the other reads from a book while pointing to various mystical characters with a wand. Before the two stands the spirit of the deceased dressed in its grave-clothes and seeming to speak. This engraving over the years has caused much confusion, ignorant commentators mistaking Kelly's companion to be John Dee.

Although John Dee was probably aware of Edward Kelly's somewhat nefarious background, it seems to have had little influence upon his assessment of the seer's clairvoyant abilities. From the outset, the visions reported by Kelly far outstripped anything which had been revealed by his previous skyrer (Barnabas Saul), and a definite system of working soon emerged. Without doubt Kelly was a man of remarkable talents, often possessed with the 'gift of tongues' and – if we are to believe Dee's accounts – capable of producing physical manifestations. History has not always given Kelly an easy passage, branding him always as the rogue, the charlatan, and the wife-swapper who lost his ears.* Yet those of us who have examined the wealth of the Dee manuscripts in detail can only wonder if there is not much more to this strangely powerful personality who shaped a whole epoch of magical history.

When we consider that De Heptarchia Mystica represents possibly the only true example of a complete magical system to be found in the Dee papers, it is difficult to see why it has been almost totally neglected by generations of occultists.

Highly synthetic and fanciful adaptations of Dee's later 'Enochian' material were incorporated into the Knowledge Papers of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, with little justification. But apart from a garbled extract in a notebook belonging to F. L. Gardner, I can find no evidence to suggest that the Heptarchical system was ever investigated. In recent years, a well-known Dallas-based American foundation produced a beautifully executed series of printed diagrams of Dee's Sigillum Æmeth, Holy Table, Enochian Alphabet and seven seals. Unfortunately, all of these offerings must be considered to be practically useless due to serious design errors. The American version of Sigillum Æmeth follows that published by Crowley (The Equinox, Volume 1, No. 7) and incorporates a host of rather obvious mistakes; while their 'Holy Table' repeats Casaubon's oddly transposed rendering (see Appendix A, note 6 of the present volume). In addition to this we find an Enochian Alphabet marred by nonsensical Golden Dawn grammatical rules, and above all a totally impossible series of seals which suffer from the artist's inability to distinguish between Dee's lower-case b and the number 6! Thus we have a prime example of the 'blind leading the blind', and the need for properly qualified research into the complex and confusing area of Elizabethan magic.

The illustrations and text of the present work do not suffer from the above defects, the artist and author working in close collaboration and drawing entirely from original sources. A few obscure areas still remain, but in every case these have been strongly indicated in the text. Where alternatives are possible, both versions have been carefully represented in order that the reader has the opportunity to judge for himself.

The main text of this edition of De Heptarchia Mystica has been compiled from a painstaking collation of the two extant Dee texts (Sloane 3191, Additional MS 36,674), with peripheral notes and explanations taken from Liber Myster- iorum Books I-V (Sloane MS 3188 and Sloane 3677 – Ashmole's copy). Diagrams have in all cases been taken from the original texts, Casaubon's printed versions only being referred to by way of comparison.

At this point I feel that it would be of value to mention the well-known Rudd treatise contained in Harley Manuscript 6482. Entitled Tabula Sancta cum Tablis Enochi, article two of the manuscript purports to explain the structure and application of the seven tablets used in conjunction with Dee's Holy Table (see Appendix A, note 9). According to Dr Rudd, each tablet represents elaborate conclaves of spirits – some good, others evil – together with details regarding the number of times certain of these spirits are to be invoked. Rudd's line of reasoning is, to say the least, hard to follow. The method employed by Dee and Kelly to obtain these tablets or tables forbids the validity of Rudd's explanation. In addition, as Dee states that each table is 'proper to every King and Prince in their order', we must conclude even the sequence in which Rudd evaluates each square to be incorrect. The first tablet Rudd names 'Tabula Lunae' (Table of the Moon), yet Dee places its King (Baligon) under the rule of Venus. Rudd's second tablet – which is Dee's seventh – is ascribed to Mercury instead of the Luna influence of Blumaza, and so on. The first table of the Rudd codex is, in his opinion, composed mainly of the names and sigils of Goetic demons – taken from the Lemegeton – a concept which John Dee would find impossible to countenance. In conclusion I feel that we can safely disregard Dr Rudd's hypotheses with regard to these matters and leave the secret of these mysterious tablets with John Dee and the Angels. A final note might be added to the effect that A. E. Waite seemed to consider Dr Thomas Rudd a fictitious character, the alter ego of one Peter Smart, who assembled the Rudd collection in the years 1712-14. The last word on Rudd I leave therefore to Waite who writes on page 401 of his Brotherhood of the Rosy Cross:

I conclude that the Rudd MSS might be commended to the notice of the American Rosy Cross in some of its developments as an early example of its own dispositions in the art of occult fraud.*

Throughout the present text I have, for the most part, adhered to the original phrasing and punctuation of Dee's fair copy in an effort to convey to the reader its atmosphere of unique antiquity. The expansions and elaborations of textual points given in Appendix A have been submitted in order to surmount, to the best of my ability, various difficulties arising from the archaic and contracted form of Dee's original manuscript. In addition, Appendix B has been included to deal with other matters of importance not specifically indicated in the main text. It is hoped that the inclusion of these items will enhance the value of the work and perhaps provide useful leads to serious researchers.

In offering this first edition of John Dee's De Heptarchia Mystica to the world, a preliminary goal has been achieved which, it is hoped, may pave the way for further advancements in this intriguing area of study. I am sure that others will pursue these studies to a greater depth than has been immediately possible, and in time the many paradoxical elements in Dee's text will finally offer up their secrets.

On a practical level, a certain revival of interest in Dee's Heptarchical magic has been noted. A Midlands-based occult group have recently reconstructed the Holy Table, wax discs and other necessary equipment and shortly hope to perform the Heptarchical rite. Whether or not the spirits will welcome this invasion of their four hundred year repose remains to be seen.

A° 1582 November 16, Bralges: the last of the 7 Princes, concluding the First Book hereof with these words:

D.

Beware of wavering: blot out suspicion of us, for we are God's creatures that have reigned, do reign and shall reign forever. All our mysteries shall be known unto you, etc.

Behold, these things and their mysteries shall be known unto you: reserving the secrets of him that reigneth for ever, (the voice of a multitude answered saying) 'Whose name is great for ever'.

King Carmara, eodem tempore (at the same time):
Open your eyes and you shall see from the highest to the lowest. The peace of God be upon you.

November 17:
Venite, gradatim repetamus Opera Dei, etc. (Come, let us gradually seek the works of God.)

Unus est Deus, et unum est opum nostrum. (There is one God, and there is one work of ours.)

D. Note: Libro Creationis 1° principes loquebantur magnalia Dei et secundo reges maxime hoc faciunt. (In the first book of creation, the Princes spoke of God's mighty works and in the second, the Kings mostly do this.)

D. Note: Very many came upon the convex superficies of the transparent globe and said: Parati sumus servire Deo nostro. (We are ready to serve our God.)

King Carmara,

November 19:

This work shall have relation to present time and present use, to mysteries far exceeding it: and finally to a purpose and intent whereby the majesty and name of God shall and may, and, of force, must appear, with the apparition of his wonders and marvels yet unheard of. Dixi. (I have spoken.)

D. Note: As Michael and Uriel at the beginning of these revealed mysteries were present and gave authority to Carmara to order the whole Heptarchial revelation, so, at the conclusion, they appeared again and Raphael with them: and Michael concluded the second book (of this particular revelation Heptarchial) with these words following:

Michael,

November 19:

Merciful is our God and glorious is his name which chooseth his creatures according to his own secret judgement. This art is the 1st part of a three fold art, joining man (with the knowledge of this world, the government of his creatures, and the sight of his majesty) unto him (O I say unto him) which is strength, medicine and mercy to those that fear him.

King Carmara,

November 21, in the appendix of ye second book:

Thou hast a work of three proportions in essence – of seven in form. Which is (of its self) divided by a number septenary. Of the course, estate, and determination of things above, things next, and things below: which of itself is pure, perfect, and without blemish, etc.

King Carmara,

November 21:

O God, how easy is this first understanding. Thou hast been told perfectly, plainly and absolutely, not only the condition, dignity and estate of all things that God hath formed; but also, withall, thou wert delivered the most perfect form and use of them, etc.

King Carmara,

November 17:

Even as God is just, his judgements true, his mercies unspeakable, so are we the true messengers of God, and our words are true in his mercies forever. Glory, O glory, be to thee, most high God.

Michael,

Aprilio 29 A° 1582:

Now you touch on the world and the doings on earth. Now we show to you the lower world. The governors that work and rule under God. By whom you may have power to work such things as shall be to God's glory, profit of your country, and the knowledge of his creatures. So we proceed to one God, one knowledge, one operation. Venite filiae (Come daughters), behold these tables: herein lie their names that work under God on earth. Not of the wicked but of the ANGELS OF LIGHT. The whole government doth consist in the hands of 49 (in God his power, strength, mercy and justice), whose names are here evident, excellent and glorious. Mark these tables, mark them, record them to your comfort. This is the first knowledge. Here shall you have wisdom. Halleluyah.

Mighty and omnipotent art thou, O God, God, God, amongst thy creatures, thou fillest all things with thy excellent foresight. Thy glory be amongst us forever. (D. Amen)

Uriel:

The fountain of wisdom is opened. Nature shall be known. Earth with her secrets disclosed. The elements with their powers judged. Behold I teach: there are 49 Angels, glorious and excellent, appointed for the government of all earthly actions: which 49 do work and dispose the will of the Creator: limited from the beginning in strength, power and glory. THESE SHALL BE SUBJECT UNTO YOU, in the name and by invoking the name of God, who doth lighten, dispose and comfort you.

King Carmara,

November 19, of King Bobogel, his princely ministers:

What doth the Heaven behold; or the earth contain, that is not or may be subdued, formed and made by these? What learning grounded upon wisdom with the excellencies in nature cannot they manifest.

One in Heaven they know:

One and all in man they know:

One and all in Earth they know.

Measure heaven by a part (my meaning is by these few) let God be glorified, his name be praised, his creation well taken, and his creatures well used.

Uriel,

May 5 1583:

He that standeth in the midst of the globe signifieth nature:
whereupon in the first point is the use and practice of this work. That is to say, as concerning the first part, for it is said:

The book containeth three kinds of knowledge:

The knowledge of God truly.

The number and doings of his Angels perfectly.

The beginning and ending of Nature substantially.

Cap 2*Of John Dee, his principal, and in manner peculiar interest to exorcise the doctrine Heptarchical

Uriel,

November 15:

Ultima est haec aetas nostra, quae tibi revelata erit. (This is our last age, which shall be revealed to you.)

Michael:

The mysteries of God hath a time; and behold thou art provided for that time.

Hagonel,

November 16:

The Sons of Light (D. Amen), and their Sons are subject unto my commandment. This is a mystery; I have spoken of it. Note it thoroughly. By them thou shalt work marvels. There are kings false and unjust, whose power as I have subverted (or augmented) and destroyed, so shalt thou.

The second assembly were the governors of the earth. Whose glory (if they be good) the weapons we have taught thee will augment, and consequently (if they be evil) pervert.

Bornogo,

November 16:

I am Bornogo: this is my seal: this is my true character. What thou desirest me, shall be fulfilled. Glory to God.

Befalfes:

Behold, behold, lo behold. My mighty power consisteth in this. Learn wisdom by my words. This is wrought for thy erudition, what I instruct thee from God. Look unto thy charge truly: thou art yet dead. Thou shalt be revived. But oh, bless God truly. The blessing that God giveth me, I will bestow upon thee by permission. O, how mighty is our God which walked on the waters, which sealed me with his name, whose glory is without end. Thou hast written me but yet dost thou not know me. Use me, in the name of God: I shall at the time appointed be ready. I will manifest the works of the seas and the miracles of the deep shall be known.

Carmara,

November 17:

Behold thou desirest, and art sick with desire: I am the disposer, though not the composer of God's medicines: thou desirest to be comforted and strengthened in thy labours, I minister unto thee the strength of God. What I say is not of myself; neither that which is said to me, is of themselves but is said of him which liveth for ever. These mysteries hath God lastly, and His great mercies granted unto thee. I have answered thy doubting minds. Thou shalt be glutted, yea, thou shalt be filled, yea thou shalt swell and be puffed up with the perfect knowledge of God's mysteries in His mercies. Abuse them not. Be faithful. Use mercy. God shall enrich thee. Banish wrath. It was the first and the greatest commandment. I reign by him, and live by him, which reigneth and liveth for ever.

Marginal note: Annael gave me that commandment A° 1581, in the preface as it were to all these actions. (D.)

King Carmara:

November 17:

I have showed thee perfectly. Behold I teach thee again. O how merciful is God, that revealeth so great secrets to flesh and blood. Thou hast 42 letters. Thy tables last contain so many, etc.

King Carmara, eodem tempore (at the same time):

When thou wilt work for anything appertaining to the estate of a good king, thou must call upon him, which is their Prince. Secondly the ministers of his power, are six etc.

King Carmara, eodem tempore (at the same time):

In outward sense my words are true. I speak now of the use of one of the first, that I spake of, or manifested yesterday. Said I not and showed I not, which had the government of Princes, for as it is a mystery to a further matter, so it is a purpose to a present use. If it rule worldly Princes, how much more shall it work with the Princes of Creation. Thou desirest use. I teach use. And yet the Art is to the further understanding of all sciences, that are past, present, or yet to come. Fruit hath further virtue, than only in the eating. Gold his further condition, property and quality, than in melting or common use. Kings there are in Nature. Thou art dignified, etc. . . .

The Ring,

King Carmara, eodem tempore (at the same time):

Last of all thy Ring, which was appointed thee; with the Lamyne comprehending the form of thy own name, which is to be made in perfect gold as is aforesaid.<sup>2</sup>

King Carmara,

Thou shalt be comforted, but respect the world to come. Whereunto thou art provided and for what end: and in what time. Serve God truly, serve him justly. Great care is to be had with those that meddle with Princes' affairs. Much more consideration with whom thou shalt meddle or use any practice. But God hath shadowed thee from destruction. He preserveth his faithful, and shadoweth the just, with a shield of honour. None shall enter into the knowledge of these mysteries with thee, but this worker (i.e. Edward Kelly). Thy estate with the Prince now reigning shall shortly be amended. Her favour increased with the good wills of divers that are now deceased. Thy hand shall shortly be their help; and thou shalt do wonderful and many benefits (to the augmenting of God's glory) for thy country. Finally, God doth enrich thee with knowledge, and of thyself hath given thee understanding of these worldly vanities. He is merciful, and we his good creatures, neither have, do, nor will forget thee. God doth bless you both; whose mercy, goodness, and grace, I pronounce and utter upon you.

King Bobogel,

November 19:

I have said Dee, Dee, Dee, at length, but not too late.

(Note [D.]: King Bobogel said this of my attaining to such mysteries as the Ministers under him made show of.)

Carmara,

November 20:

Lo! thus thou seest the glory of God's creatures. Whom thou mayst use with consideration of the day, their King, their Prince and his character. The King and Prince govern for the whole day. The rest according to the six parts of the day. Use them to the glory, praise, and honour of Him which created them, to the laud and praise of His Majesty.

King Bynepor,

November 20:

Write this reverently, note it with submission. What I speak hath not been revealed: not in these last times of the second last world, etc. Thou shalt work marvellous marvellously by my workmanship in the highest.

King Bnaspol:

Unto my Prince, my subject, are delivered the keys of the mysteries of earth. All these are Angels that govern under him, etc: so use them, they are and shall be at thy commandment.

King Bnaspen,

November 20:

By me thou shalt cast out the power of wicked spirits. By me, thou shalt know the doings and practices of evil men. And more than may be spoken or uttered to man.

King Carmara,

November 20:

O quanta est hominis infirmitas et corruptio, qui Angelis, idque suis bonis, fidem autem Deo vix habet? Omnia Mundana faecas Mundi corruptiones in se habent. Deus noster, Deus noster, Deus (inquam) ille noster, verus cum veris suis Angelis eique servientibus, semper verus est: Pete quae vis. Dixi: et quod dixi, Obumbratum est veritate, iustitia et perfectione.

Ecce . . . holding up the meet rod.

Hic . . . Pointing to the end of the rod.

per hoc . . . Pointing to the middle of it.

Et a mensurae fine nos, nostramque mensurabis potestatem. Age (inquam) Quid vis, obscurum enim nihil est, quod per illum (E.K.) recepisti.

(O how great is the infirmity and corruption of man that has faith in angels and their good works but scarcely at all in God. All worldly things contain the corruption of the world within them. Our God, our God, that true God of ours (I say) with his true angels and those that serve him is always true. Seek what you wish. I have spoken and what I have said is cloaked in truth, justice and perfection.

And from the end of the measure you will measure us and our power. And we will do what you wish, for nothing is obscure that you have received through him [E.K..])

The Receptacle,
King Carmara,
November 21:

One thing is yet wanting, a meet receptacle. There is yet wanting a stone. One there is most excellent, hid in the secret of the depth, etc. in the uttermost part of the Roman possession, etc. Lo, the mighty hand of God is upon thee, etc. Thou shalt prevail with it, with Kings and with all the Creatures of the world; whose beauty (in virtue) shall be more worth than the kingdoms of the earth. Go towards it and take it up. Keep it secret. Let no mortal hand touch it but thy own.

Uriel,
May 5 1583:

Thy character must have the names of the five Angels (written in the midst of Sigillum Æmeth) graven upon the other side in a circle, in the midst whereof must the stone be (which was also brought). Wherein thou shalt at all times behold privately to thyself, the state of God's people throughout the whole earth.<sup>3</sup>

Raphael,
May 26, A° 1583:

Go and thou shalt receive, tarry and you shall receive. Sleep and you shall see. But watch and your eyes shall be fully opened. One thing which is the ground and element of thy desire, is already perfected, etc. Out of seven (or heaven) thou hast been instructed of the lesser part most perfectly.

King Carmara:

All those before spoken of are subject to thy call of friendship at any time, thou mayst see them and know what thou wilt. Everyone (to be short) shall at all times and seasons show thee direction in anything.

One thing I answer thee for all offices. Thou hast in subjection all offices. Use them when it pleaseth thee and as thy instruction hath been.

Uriel,

Apr. 23, 1583:

The Lord saith, I have hardened the heart of one of you: yea, I have hardened him, as the flint, and burnt him together with the ashes of a cedar. To the intent he may be proved just in my work and great in the strength of my glory. Neither shall his mind consent to the wickedness of iniquity: for from iniquity I have chosen him, to be a first Earthly Witness of my Dignity.

Michael,

his manner of apparition:

Note (D): Uriel came in again and another with him, and jointly they two said together:

Praise God for ever. And now Uriel stood behind and the other sat down in the chair, with the sword in his right hand. All his head glistened like the sun; the hair of his head was long, he had wings and all his lower parts seemed to be with feathers. He had a robe over his body, and a great light in his left hand: he said we are blessed from the beginning, and blessed be the name of God for ever.

D. Note: An innumerable company of Angels were about him, and Uriel did lean on the Square Table by. He that sat in the chair said then: Go forward, God hath blessed thee. I will be thy guide, thou shalt attain unto thy searching. The world BEGINS WITH THY DOINGS. Praise God. The Angels under my power shall be at thy commandment. Thou shalt see me. I will be seen of thee, and I will direct thy living and conversation. Put up thy pen.

Michael,

March 14, the Ring:

(Dee: Now Michael thrust out his right arm with the sword, and bade the skryer to look. Then the sword did seem to cleave in two and a great fire flamed out of it vehemently. Then he took a Ring out of the flame of his sword and gave it to Uriel, and said: The strength of God is unspeakable, praised be God for ever and ever.)

Dee:

Then Uriel did make curtsy to him.

Michael:

After this sort must the Ring be. Note it. I will reveal thee this Ring which was never revealed since the death of Saloman, with whom I was present. I was present with him IN STRENGTH AND MERCY. Lo, this it is. This it is wherewith all miracles and divine works and wonders were wrought by Saloman. This it is which I have revealed unto thee. This it is which philosophy dreameth of. This it is which the Angels scarce know. This it is, and blessed be his name for ever, etc. Yea, his name shall be blessed for ever.

Dee:

Then he laid the Ring down upon the Table, and said:
(Note, D: I noted the manner of the Ring in all points.)

Dee:

After that he threw the Ring down upon the Table, and it seemed to fall through the Table.

Michael:

So shall it do at thy commandment: WITHOUT THIS THOU SHALT DO NOTHING.

Blessed be his name that encompasseth all things: wonders are in him, and his name is wonderful, his name worketh wonders from generation to generation.

Note, D: Then he brought in the seal which he showed the other day; and he opened his sword, and bade the skryer read: and he read: EMETH – then the sword closed up again: and Michael said: This I do open unto thee; because thou marvelled at SIGILLUM DEI: this is the name of the Seal which is blessed for ever. This is the Seal self: this is Holy: this is pure: this is for ever.
AMEN.

Michael,

March 15, A° 1582:

As truly as I was with Saloman, so truly will I be with thee: etc.

I was with Saloman, in all his works and wonders. Use me, in the name of God FOR ALL OCCASIONS.

Cap 3*Some remembrances of the furniture and circumstances necessary in the exercise Heptarchicall

King Carmara,

in the presence of Michael, November 17th 1582:

First cast thine eye unto the general Prince, Governor, or Angel that is principal in this world, then place my name whom thou hast already: then the name of him that was showed thee yesterday (with the short coat). Then his power with the rest of his six perfect ministers. With these thou shalt work to a good end. All the rest thou mayst use to God's glory, for every one of them shall minister to thy necessities.

Moreover – when thou workest thy feet must be placed upon these tables which thou seest written last, comprehending 42 letters and names.<sup>4</sup> But with this consideration: that the first character (which is the first of the 7 in thy former book) be placed upon the top of the Table, which thou wast and art and shall be commanded to have and use. Last of all the Ring which was appointed thee with the Lamyne comprehending the form of thy own name which is to be made in perfect gold as aforesaid. Even as God is just, his judgements true, his mercies unspeakable, so are we the true messengers of God and our words are true in his mercy forever. Glory, O glory be to thee O most high God.

King Carmara,

November 26:

Lo, thus thou seest the glory of God's creatures whom thou mayst use with the consideration of the day, their King, their Prince and his character: the King and the Prince govern for the whole day. The rest according to the six parts of the day. Use them to the praise, glory and honour of him which created them, to the laud and praise of his majesty.

King Carmara,

November 21:

The characters of the Kings are in the globe and of the Princes in the heptagonon.

Prince Hagonel,

November 16:

The Sons of Light and their Sons are subject unto my commandment. This is a mystery. I have spoken it. Note it thoroughly. They are my servants. By them thou shalt work marvels. MY TIME IS YET TO COME. The Operation of the Earth is subject to my power and I am the first of the twelve: my seal is called Barees: and here it is.<sup>5</sup>

Hagonel, eodem tempore (at the same time):

In his name with my name, by my character, and the rest of my ministers, are these things brought to pass.

1. These that lie here, those are witches, enchanters, deceivers and blasphemers. And finally all they that use nature with abuse: and dishonour him which reigneth for ever.

2. The second assembly were the Governors of the Earth whose glory if they be good, the weapons which we have taught thee will augment: and consequently (if they be evil) will pervert.

3. The third assembly are those which taste of God's mysteries and drink of the juice of nature: whose minds are divided. Some with eyes looking towards heaven, the rest to the centre of the earth: Ubi non gloria, nec Bonitas, nec Bonum est. (Where there is neither glory, nor goodness, nor good.)

It is wrought (I say) it is wrought for thy understanding by the Seven of the Seven which were the Sons of Sempiternity whose names thou hast written and recorded to God's glory.

Dee, Note: Prince Bulmono said this but the office is under King Bnaspol whose Prince is Blisdon. The mystery of this I know not yet: for Blisdon will be found to be the proper minister of King Bnaspol, vide A° 1583 May 5th of the making of Mensa foederis (the table of the contract), and of my golden Lamayne.<sup>6</sup>

Hagonel:

Mark this: all spirits inhabiting within the earth where their habitation is of force or not of will (except the middest of my self which I know not), are subject to the power hereof (pointing to his seal), with this you shall govern, with this you shall unlock: with this (in the name of him who reigneth) you shall discover her entrails.

King Carmara,
November 17:

When thou wilt work anything appertaining to the state of a good King, thou must call upon him which is their Prince.

Secondly, the Ministers of his power are six whose names contain 7 letters apiece and thy tables do manifest by whom in general, or by any one of them in particular, thou shalt work for any intent or purpose. As concerning the letters, particularly, they do concern the names of 42, which 42 in general, or one of them, do and can work the destruction, hinderance or annoyance of the estate, condition, or degree (as well for body as Government) of any wicked or ill living Prince, etc.

Venito Bobogel Rex et Princeps Nobilitatis. Venito cum Ministris: Venito (inquam) venito cum satellitibus tuis, munitus. (Let Bobogel come, King and Prince of nobility. Let him come with his Ministers. Come (I say) come defended by your attendants.) (Dee: This I note for the form of calling.)

King Bobogel,
to his Prince:

Veni Princeps 7 Principum, qui sunt Aquarum Principes: ego sum Rex potens et mirabilis in aquis, cuius potestas, est aquarum visceribus. (Come, Prince of the 7 Princes who are Princes of the Waters. I am the King, mighty and marvellous in waters, whose power is in the depths of the waters.)

King Carmara:

Venito veni (inquam) adesto. Veni Rex. O Rex, Rex, Rex Aquarum. Venito (inquam) magna est tua, major autem mea potestas. Vitam dedit Deus omnibus creaturis, venite. Veni ignis: veni vita mortalium (inquam) venito adesdum. Regnat Deus, O venite. Nam unus ille regnat, et est vita viventium. (Come, come (I say) be present. Come, King. O King, King, King of the Waters. Come (I say). Great is your power, but mine is greater. God gave life to all creatures, come. Come, fire: come life of mortals (I say) come hither. God reigns, O come. For he alone rules and is life to the living.)

King Carmara,

also Baligon, eodem tempore (at the same time):

Venite, ubi, nulla quies sed stridor dentium. Venite vos, qui sub mea estis potestate. (Come where there is no peace but the gnashing of teeth. Come you who are under my power.)

King Carmara,

November 21:

Behold every one of these Princes must have his peculiar Table.

Uriel,

May 5 A° 1583:

Thy character must have the names of the five Angels (written in the midst of Sigillum Æmeth) graven upon the other side in a circle. In the midst whereof must the stone be which was also brought, whereon thou shalt at all time behold (privately to thy self) the state of God's people, through the whole Earth.

The 4 feet of the table must have 4 hollow things of sweet wood whereupon they must stand. Within the hollowness whereof their seals may be kept – unperished. ONE MONTH IS ALL FOR THE USE THEREOF.<sup>7</sup>

The silk must be of divers colours: the most changeable that can be gotten. For who is able to behold the Glory of the Seat of God?

Note – Dee: The Character or Lamyne for me was noted (A° 1582 November 17) that it should contain some token of my name: and now in this accounted the true character of dignification, I perceived no peculiar mark of letters of my name.<sup>8</sup>

Uriel:

The form in every corner considereth thy name.

Dee:

You mean there to be a certain shadow of Delta?

Uriel:

Well.

Dee:

What is the use of the 7 Tables (like arms) and from what ground are they framed or derived?

Uriel:

They are the Ensigns of the Creation wherewith all they were created by God: known only by their acquaintance and the manner of their doings.<sup>9</sup>

Dee:

Have I rightly applied the days to the Kings?

Uriel:

The days are rightly applied to the Kings.

Dee:

The characters and words annexed to the Kings' names in the outer circumference of the great circle or globe, how are they to be used?

Uriel:

They are to be painted on sweet wood: and so to be held in thy hand, as thou shalt have cause to use them.<sup>10</sup>

IL (the first of the 7 Sons of Sons of Light),

April 28 1583:

Sigillum Æmeth is to be set in the middle of the Table. Grace, mercy and peace be unto the lively branches of his flourishing Kingdoms. And strong thou art in thy glory which dost unite the secret parts of thy lively workmanship and that therefore the weak understanding of man. Herein is thy power and magnificence opened unto man. And why? Because thy divinity and secret power is here shut up in Numero tenario, and quaternario. A quo principium, et fundamentum omne hujus est tui sanctissimi Operis. (. . . the number three and four, from which is the beginning and all the foundation of this, your most holy work.)

IL, the living and semper adherent to King Baligon, and his name is expressed in his character: vide Nov
21 A° 1582:

For if thou (O God) be wonderful and incomprehensible in thine own substance, it must needs follow that thy works are likewise incomprehensible. But lo, they shall now believe, because they see which heretofore could scarcely believe. Strong is the influence of thy super-celestial power: and mighty is the force of that arm which overcometh all things. Let all power rest in thee, Amen.

Leave out the Bees of the 7 names of the 7 Kings, and 7

Princes, and place them in a Table divided 12 by 7. The 7 spaces being uppermost. And therein write in the upper line, the letters of the King with the letters of his Prince following next after his name. And so of the six other: and their Princes and read them on the right hand, from the upper part to the lowest. And thou shalt find then the composition of this Table. Therein they are all comprehended, saving certain letters, which are not to be put in here. By reasons THAT THE KINGS AND PRINCES DO SPRING FROM GOD: AND NOT GOD FROM THE KINGS AND PRINCES. Which excellence is comprehended and is also manifest in that third and fourth member. (Dee: fourth number). Round about the sides (of this square Table) is every letter of the 14 names of the 7 Kings and Princes. HEREAFTER SHALL YOU PERCEIVE, THAT THE GLORY OF THIS TABLE SURMOUNTETH THE GLORY OF THE SUN.<sup>11</sup>

All things else that appertain unto it are already prescribed, by your former instruction.

IL,

Dee: or – E

Aprilio 29, 1583:

God is the beginning of all things, but not after one sort: nor to every one alike. But it is three manner of works with his name:

The One in respect of dignification.

The Second in respect of conciliation.

The Third in respect of an end and determined operation.

Now Sir, to what end would you wear your Character? etc. But how do I teach? The Character is an instrument applicable only to dignification. BUT THERE IS NO DIGNIFICATION (Sir) but that which doth proceed and hath his perfect composition centrally in the square number of 3 and 4. The centre whereof and shall be equal to the greatest. Hereby you may gather, not only to what end the BLESSED CHARACTER (wherewith thou shall BE DIGNIFIED) is prepared: but also the nature of ALL OTHER CHARACTERS.

To the second – Dee: Conciliation you mean?

IL:

The Table is an instrument of conciliation, and so are the other 7 CHARACTERS WHICH YOU CALL BY THE NAME OF TABLES: squared out into THE FORM OF ARMS: which are proper TO EVERY KING AND PRINCE – according to their order: Now to the last –

Dee:

As containing the end and determined operation?

IL:

It only consisteth in the mercy of God and the Characters of these books, etc.

Set down the Kings and their Princes in a Table, as thou knowest them, with their letters backward (excepting their bees) from the right hand to the left. Let Bobogel be the first and Bornogo his Prince, etc. (Dee – Note: here it may appear that Bulmono is Prince to Bynepor and Blisdon Prince to King Bnaspol.)

D. Note:

So on my Character or Lamyne of Dignification are all the names of the 7 Kings and of the 7 Princes, perfectly as in the great Table (called often Mensa foederis) the Bees, only being the first letter (common to them all) kept back in memory.

De Sigillo Æmeth: aliter vocato Sigillo Dei.<sup>12</sup> (Otherwise called the Sigil of God.)

Michael:

I will show thee in the mighty hand and strength of God. What his mysteries are: the true circle of his eternity comprehending all virtue: the whole and sacred Trinity; Oh, holy be he, Oh holy be he, Oh holy be he. (Dee – Uriel answered, Amen.)

Michael:

Now what wilt thou?

Dee:

I would full fayne proceed according to the matter in hand.

Michael,

Martis 19, 1582:

Divide this outward circle in 40 equal parts, whose greatest numbers are 4. See thou do it presently.

Dee:

I did so dividing it first into 4, and then every of them into 10.

Dee:

He called one, by name Semiel, one came in and kneeled down, and great fire came out of his mouth. Michael said: To him are the mysteries of these Tables known. Michael said, Semiel (again) and by and by he answered. O God thou hast said and thou livest for ever: etc: Semiel stood up and flaming fire came out of his mouth, and then he said as followeth:

Semiel:

Mighty Lord what wouldst thou with the Tables.

Michael:

It is the will of God thou fetch them hither.

Semiel:

I am his Tables, behold, these are his Tables, lo where they are.

Dee:

There came in 40 white creatures, all in white silk long robes; and they like children. And all they falling on their knees said: Thou only art holy among the Highest: O God, thy name be blessed for ever.

Dee:

Michael stood up out of his chair: and by and by all his legs seemed to be like two pillars of brass: and he as high, as half way to heaven: and by and by his sword was all on fire: and he stroke or drew his sword over all these 40 their heads. The Earth quaked, and the 40 fell down. And Michael addressed Semiel with a thundering voice; and said: Declare the mysteries of the Living God; our God: of One that liveth for ever (Michael 1582, Mar. 19).

Semiel:

I am ready.

(Dee: Then stepped forth one of the 40 from the rest: and opened his breast which was covered with silk, and there appeared a great  $\Psi$  all of gold.)

Michael:

Note the number.

Dee:

Over the T stood the number of 4, in this fashion  $\text{⌘}$

Dee:

The 40 all cried, it liveth, and multiplieth for ever, blessed be his name.

Dee:

That creature did shut up his bosom and vanished away like a fire.

Michael:

Place that in the first place: it is the name of God.

(Dee: Then there seemed a great clap of thunder to be: and so forth: and note that the whole Second Book is nothing else but the mysteries most marvellous of Sigillum Dei, otherwise called Sigillum Æmeth, whereof here I did but leave a little admonishment. Note further: almost all of the Third Book was of the 7 Ensigns of Creation, whereof mention was here before made.)

(Dee: The chair was brought in again: and I asked what it meant?)

Uriel:

This is a seat of perfection; from which things shall be showed unto thee, which THOU HAST LONG DESIRED.

(Dee: Then was a square Table brought into the stone, and I demanded what the Table betokened.)

Uriel:

A mystery not yet to be known. These two shall remain in the stone, to the sight of all undefiled creatures. You must use a FOUR SQUARE Table: two cubits square, whereupon must be set Sigillum Dei: (aliter divinitatis) ([otherwise of divinity]), etc.

This Seal is to be made of perfect wax.

This Seal must be 9 inches square (D: or diameter)

The roundness must be 27 inches, and somewhat more. The thickness of it must be an inch and a half quarter. And a figure of a Cross must be on the backside of it made thus:

The Table is to be made of sweet wood: and of two cubits high with 4 feet, with 4 of the former seals under the 4 feet.

Dee:

Under the Table did seem to be laid red silk, two yards square. And over the Seal, did seem likewise red silk to lie four square, broader than the Table, hanging down with 4 knopps or tassels at the four corners thereof. Upon this uppermost red silk did seem the stone with the frame to be set: right over and upon the principal Seal: saving that the red silk was between the one and the other.

Dee:

There appeared the first Table covered with a cloth of silk changeable colour red and green with a white cloth under it, all hanging very low.<sup>13</sup>

Caput 4:

Some notice of peculiar forms; and attire; wherein the Kings, Princes, and Ministers Heptarchichal appeared and of some of their actions and gestures at their appearance, etc.

King CARMARA – This King (being called first by Uriel) appeared as a man, very well proportioned, clad in a long purple robe, and with a triple Crown of Gold upon his head.

At his first coming he had 7 (like men) waiting on him: which afterward declared themselves to be the 7 Princes Heptarchichal. Uriel delivered unto this King (at his first appearing) a rod, or straight little round staff of gold: divided into three equal distinctions whereof two were dark or black: and the third bright red. This rod he kept still in his hand. This King only was the orderer, or disposer of all the doctrines which I term Heptarchichal, and first by calling the 7 Princes, and after that the 7 Kings: and by giving instructions for use and practice of the whole doctrine Heptarchichal: for the first purpose and fruit thereof to be enjoyed by me: of the two other there was only mention made.

King CARMARA said: Ecce Signum Operis. (Behold, the Sign of the Work.)

There appeared these two letters reversed and aversed on a white flag, and a woman standing by: whose arms did not appear: on the other side appeared the Arms of England. The flag old.<sup>14</sup>

Prince HAGONEL – Note: All the Princes seemed to be men, and to have red robes, but this Prince, his robe was shorter than the others. All the Princes had circlets of gold on their heads, not crowns, nor coronets. This Prince held in the palm of his right hand as it had been a round ring with a prick in the midst: hanging also over his middle fingers which he affirmed to be his Seal and said the name of it to be Barees: and this it is: ☉

All the Princes held up together Heptagon Stellar (as I term it) and it seemed to be of copper.

The Sons of men (D. Light) and their Sons are subject unto his commandment and are his servants.

7 Filii Lucis,

An° 1582, March 21:

The 7 Filii Lucis appeared like 7 young men, all with bright countenance, white apparelled with white silk on their heads, pendant behind, with a wreath down to the ground all apparelled of one sort. Every one seemed to have a metalyne ball in his hand: the first of gold; the second of silver; the 3rd of copper; the 4th of tin; the 5th of iron; the 6th tossed between his two hands a round thing of quick-silver; the last had a ball of lead. The first had on his breast a round tablet of gold and on it written a great I, and the second on his golden tablet had his name also written: and every one orderly coming forth showed their names upon their golden tablets: at their departing they made curtsy, and mounted up to heavenward.

7 Filii Filiorum:

Appeared like 7 little children, like boys covered all with purple, with hanging sleeves, like priests' or scholars' gown-sleeves: their heads attired all after the former manner with purple silk. They had three-cornered tablets on their breasts: and the tablets seemed to be very green, and on them the letters of their names written. The first two letters made in one type, of E & L =  $\mathbb{E}$ . They made reverences to Michael (who have called the first and these) and so mounted up to heavenward.

Prince HAGONEL,

his 42 Ministers:

At the call of King Carmara (in the second handling this Heptarchical doctrine), when he said: Venite Repetamus Opera Dei (Come let us seek the works of God): Appeared Prince Hagonel and after that upon the Globe his convex superficies appeared 42: who said: Parati sumus servire Deo nostro (We are ready to serve our God). Each of these had somewhat in their hands and they stood in this order, and Hagonel seemed to embrace the company:

Six of these seemed more glorious than the rest and their coats longer and had circlets of gold about their heads, and hold in their hands perfect crowns of gold. The second six had three quarters of crowns in their hands. The third six have robes or clothes in their hands. All the rest seemed to have balls of gold which they toss from one to another but at the catching, they seemed empty wind-balls, for they grip them closing their hands as if they were not solid, but empty like a blown bladder. The first six made curtsy to Prince Hagonel, the second six made curtsy to the first, and the third to the second. And they all, and Prince Hagonel, made curtsy to King CARMARA. Each of these upon their place of standing made a Table, and every Table had but one letter.

The first of the six did go away and in his Table appeared an 0, and so of the rest: but note that the third six cowered down, and was loath to show their Tables, but at length did.

The third row went off lamenting: being commanded by their Prince: all parted in fire, falling into the Globe. The fifth row did sink into the Globe, every one in a sundry fire by himself.

The sixth fell with smoke down into the Globe.

Dee (note):

King Carmara: There are but 6 names that are in subjection unto the Princes: the first 7 next him are those which held the fair and beautiful crowns.

The first 7 are called by those names that thou seest OES (or OFS), etc:

Dee:

Note. This diversity of reckoning by 6 and by 7 I cannot yet well reconcile.

King BOBOGEL:

Appeared in a black velvet coat: and his hose close round hose with velvet upperstocks: overlayed with gold lace: on his head a velvet hat-cap: with a black feather in it: with a cape hanging on one of his shoulders, his purse, hanging about his neck, and so put under his girdle at which hung a gilt rapier. His beard was long, he had pantafels and pynsons, and he said: I wear these robes, not in respect of my self, but of my government, etc.<sup>15</sup>

Prince BORNOGO:

Appeared in a red robe with a gold circlet on his head: he showed his Seal, and said: This it is:

Ministers 42:

Seven of the Ministers are apparelled like Bobogel the King, sagely and gravely: all the rest are almost ruffian or royster-like. Some are like to be men and women: for in the forepart they seemed women, and the back part men, by their apparel. And they were the last 7. They danced, leapt and kissed.

They came afterwards into a circle, the Sages and the rest: but the Sages stand all together. The first of the Sages lifted up his hand aloft and said: Faciamus secundum voluntatem Dei. Ille Deus noster est vere nobilis et aeternus. (Let us perform according to God's wishes. He, our God, is truly noble and eternal.)

He plucked up his right foot and under it appeared an L, and of the rest in like manner appeared their letters or names.

1. The first 7 grow all together in a flame of fire, and so sunk down in the transparent fiery-Globe of the new world.
2. The second 7 fell down like drops of metal.
3. The third 7 clasp together and fall down in a thick smoke.
4. The 4th seven join together and vanish like drops of water.
5. The 5th seven fall down like a storm of hail.
6. The last vanished away.

At another time they came (being called by King Carmara) all 42 bringing a round Table over their heads flat wise: and then they laid it down and stood about it: the letters being as before:

LEENARB
LNANAE B
ROEMNAB
LEAORIB
NEICIA B
AOIDIAB

King BABALEL:

Appeared with a crown of gold on his head: with a long robe white of colour. His left arm sleeve was very white and his right arm sleeve was black. He seemed to stand upon water. His name was written on his forehead: BABALEL.

Prince BEFAFES:

He appeared in a long red robe with a circlet of gold on his head. He had a golden girdle and on it written: BEFAFES.

He opened his bosom and appeared lame: and seemed to have feathers upon his robes. .

His Seal or Character is this:

Ministers 42:

Of his 42 Ministers, the first 7 had circlets of gold on their heads, and the King BABALEL called BEFAFES saying: Veni Princeps 7 Principum qui sunt Aquarum Principes. (Come Prince of the seven Princes who are Princes of the Waters.) Every one of the 42 had a letter on his forehead. They were 7 in a row and 6 downward. But of the first 7 the letters become to be between their feet: and the water seemeth continually to pass over these letters.

The first 7 take the water and throw it up, and it becometh clouds.

The second throw it up, and it becometh hail and snow, etc.

The 42 dive into the water, and so vanish away and BABALEL and BEFAFES also were suddenly gone.

Their names and characters appeared to be these which follow in the squares:

|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|

King BYNEPOR:

He appeared as a King with his Prince next after him: and after the Prince 42 Ministers.

His Seal is this:

Ministers 42:

They appeared like ghosts and smoke without all form having every one of them a little glittering spark of fire in the midst of them.

The First 7 are red as blood.

The Second 7 not so red.

The Third 7 like whitish smoke.

The Fourth, the Fifth, the Sixth are of divers colours.

All had fire sparks in their middle.

} These had the sparks greater than the rest.

Every spark had a letter in it as followeth:

| B | B | A | S | N | O | D |

King BNASPOL:

He appeared in a red robe, and a crown on his head. His Prince followed him, and after him his Ministers.

Prince BLISDON:

He appeared in a robe of many colours and on his head a circlet of gold.

His character or seal:

Dee:

Perhaps the red colour was most and so seemed generally to be red as the others their robes were.

Ministers 42:

The 42 seemed to stand about a little hill round. The hill was of clay.<sup>16</sup>

Behind these people seemed to stand an innumerable multitude of ugly people, afar off.

Those which seem to stand about the little hill, seem to have in the palms of their hands letters in order as here appeareth. Those which stood afar off are spirits of perdition, which keep earth with her treasure for him, etc.

King BNAPSEN:

He appeared as a King with a crown on his head.

Prince BRORGES:

He appeared in his red apparel: and he opened his clothes and there did issue mighty and most terrible or ghastly Flames of Fire out of his sides: which no mortal eye could abide to look upon any long while. And in the marvellous raging fire did the word BRORGES appear, tossed to and fro in the very flames.

His seal or character is this:

Ministers 42:

The 42 appear and holding a round Table, they toss it in the fiery flames.

Dee:

In the Table were the letters of their names as followeth:

B A N S S Z E
B Y A P A R E
B N A M G E N
B N V A G E S
B L B O P O O
B A B E P E N

King BALIGON:

He is the same mighty King, who is here first described by the name of CARMARA, and yet otherwise among the Angels called MARMARA, but that M is not to be expressed. Therefore he appeared in a long purple gown, and on his head a triple crown of gold, with a measuring rod of gold in his hand, divided into three equal parts: in the form of a very well proportioned man.

Prince BAGANOL:

He appeared not by that name yet.<sup>17</sup>

Ministers:

Note: the King himself is Governor over these. The 42 Ministers appeared like bright people. And besides them, all the air swarmed with creatures.

Their letters were on their foreheads.

They stood in a circle.

They took their letters from their foreheads and set them in a circle:

A O A Y N N L
 L B B N A A V
 I O A E S P M
 G G L P P S A
 O E E O O E Z
 N L L R L N A

King BLVMAZA:

Dee: He appeared not yet by that name.

Princes BRALGES:

He appeared in a red robe with a circlet on his head and he was the last of the 7 which hold the Heptagonon, all the rest being set down: who seemed now to extend their hands one towards another: as though they played, being now rid of their work.

Ministers:

The Powers under his subjection are invisible. They appeared like little white smokes without any form.

All the World seemed to be in brightness.

This is the Seal of his Government:

Cap 5

Oratio, ad Deum, singulis diebus, tribus vicibus, ter dicenda. (A Prayer to God to be recited thrice daily.)

O Almighty, Aeternal, the True and Living God: O King of Glory: O Lord of Hosts: O Thou, the Creator of Heaven and Earth, and of all things visible and invisible: now, (even now, at length) among others thy manifold mercies used and to be used, toward me, thy simple servant John Dee, I most humbly beseech thee, in this my present petition to have mercy upon me: to have pity upon me, to have compassion upon me: who, faithfully and sincerely, of long time, have sought among men, in Earth: and also by prayer, (full oft, and pitifully,) have made suit unto thy Divine Majesty for the obtaining of some convenient portion of True Knowledge and understanding of thy laws and ordenances, established in the natures and properties of thy creatures: by which knowledge, thy Divine Wisdom, Power and Goodness, (on thy creatures bestowed, and to them imparted) being to me made manifest, might abundantly instruct, furnish and allure me, (for the same), incessantly to pronounce thy praises, to render unto thee most hearty thanks, to advance thy true honour, and to win unto thy name some of thy due Majestical Glory, among all people, and for ever. And whereas it has pleased thee (O God) of thy infinite Goodness, by thy faithful and holy Spiritual Messengers, to deliver unto me long since (through the eye and ear of E.K.) an orderly form and manner of Exercise HEPTARCHICAL: how, to thy Honour and Glory, and the comfort of my own poor soul, and of others thy faithful servant, I may at all times, use very many of thy good Angels, their counsels and helps: according to the properties of such their functions and offices, as to them, by thy Divine Power, Wisdom and Goodness is assigned, and limited: (which orderly form, and manner of Exercise, until even now, I never found so urgent opportunity, and extreme necessity, to apply myself unto). Therefore, I, thy poor and simple servant, do most humbly, heartily, and faithfully beseech thy Divine Majesty, most lovingly and fatherly to favour and thy Divine Beck to further this my present industry and endeavour to Exercise myself, according to the aforesaid orderly form and manner: and now (at length, but not too late) for thy dearly beloved Son IESVS

CHRIST his sake (O Heavenly Father) to grant also unto me, this blessing and portion of thy Heavenly Graces: that thou wilt forthwith enable me, make me apt, and acceptable (in body, Soul, and Spirit), to enjoy always the Holy and friendly conversation, with the sensible, plain, full and perfect help, (in word and deed) of thy Mighty, Wise and Good Spiritual Messagers and Ministers generally: and namely of Blessed Michael, Blessed Gabriel, Blessed Raphael and Blessed Uriel: and also, especially of all those, which do appertain unto the HEPTARCHICAL Mystery isagogically, (as yet) and very briefly unto me declared: under the method of Seven Mighty Kings; and their Seven faithful and Princely Ministers, with their subjects, and servants, to them belonging. And in thy great mercy, and grace, on me bestowed, and to me confirmed (O Almighty God) thou shalt, (to the great comfort of thy faithful servants) approve, to thy very enemies and mine, the truth and certainty of thy manifold most merciful promises, heretofore made unto me: and that thou art the True and Almighty God, Creator of Heaven and Earth, (upon whom I do call: and in whom I do put my trust). And thy Ministers, to be the true and faithful Angels of Light: which have hitherto principally and according to thy Divine Providence dealt with us: and also I, thy poor and simple servant, shall then in and by thee be better able to serve thee, according to thy wellpleasing to thy honour and glory. Yea, even in these most miserable and lamentable days. Grant, oh grant, O our Heavenly Father, grant this (I pray thee), for thy only begotten Son IESVS CHRIST, his sake:

Amen. Amen. Amen.

BONORUM Angeloru Heptarchicorum. Pice, Deuotæ-que Invitationes. (Pious and devout invocations of the good angels of the Heptarchia.)

The General and Common Exordium, and Conclusion appertaining to the 7 Heptarchical Kings Inviting:

O puissant and right Noble King (N) and by what name else soever thou art called, or mayst truly and duly be called: to whose peculiar Government, Charge, Disposition, and Kingly Office doth appertain thee (N etc.)

In the name of the King of Kings, the Lord of Hosts, the Almighty God, Creator of Heaven and earth, and of all things visible and invisible: O right Noble King (N), come now and appear, with thy Prince and his Ministers, and subjects, to my perfect and sensible eye judgement: in a godly and friendly manner, to my comfort and help, for the advancing of the Honour and Glory of our Almighty God by my service. As much as by the Wisdom and Power, in thy proper Kingly office and Government, I may be holpen and enabled unto: Amen.

COME, O right Noble King (N) I say, COME, Amen.
Gloria Patri, etc.

The General and Common Exordium and Conclusion appertaining to the 7 Heptarchical Princes Inviting:

O noble Prince (N) and by what name else soever thou art called, or mayst truly and duly be called: to whose peculiar Government, Charge and Disposition, Office and Princely Dignity doth appertain thee (N etc.)

In the name of Almighty God, the King of Kings, and for his honour and Glory to be advanced by my faithful service. I require thee, O Noble Prince (N) to come presently, and to show thyself to my perfect and sensible eye judgement, with thy Ministers servants and subjects, to my comfort and help, in Wisdom and Power according to the properties of thy noble office:

COME, O Noble Prince (N) I say, COME, Amen.
Pater noster, etc.

Cap 7

Some recital and contestations by the peculiar offices, words and deeds of the 7 Heptarchical Kings and Princes, in their peculiar Days to be used:

SONDAYE:

King BOBOGEL:

The distributing, giving and bestowing of wisdom and science. The teaching of true philosophy, true understanding of all learning, grounded upon wisdom: with the excellencies in nature: and of many other great mysteries, marvellously available, and necessary to the advancing of the Glory of our God and Creator. And who said to me, (in respect of these mysteries attaining) Dee, Dee, Dee, at length, but not too late.

Therefore, in the name etc.

Prince BORNOGO:

The altering of the corruption of nature into perfection: the knowledge of metals. And generally the Princely Ministering to the right Noble and Mighty King BOBOGEL, in his government of distributing, giving and bestowing of wisdom, science, true philosophy and true understanding of all learning grounded upon wisdom and of other very many his peculiar royal properties. And who sayst to me: What thou desirest in me shall be fulfilled.

Therefore, in the name etc.

MONDAYE

King CARMARA:

Who in this Heptarchical Doctrine, at Blessed Uriel his hand, didst receive the golden rod of government and measuring, and the chair of dignity and doctrine: and didst appear first to us, adorned with a triple diadem in a long purple robe. Who saidst to me at Mortlake: I minister the strength of GOD unto thee. Likewise, thou saidst: These mysteries hath God lastly, and of his great mercies, granted unto thee. Thou shalt be glutted, yea filled: yea, thou shalt swell and be puffed up with the perfect knowledge of God's mysteries, in his mercies.

And saidst: This Art is to THE FARTHER UNDERSTANDING OF ALL SCIENCES, THAT ARE PAST, PRESENT OR YET TO COME. And immediately, didst say unto me: Kings there are in Nature, with Nature, and above Nature. Thou art dignified. And saidst, concerning the use of these Tables: This is but the first step: neither thou shalt practise them in vain: and saidst thus generally of God's mercies and graces on me decreed and bestowed. Whatsoever thou shalt speak, do or work, shall be profitable and acceptable. And the end shall be good.

Therefore, in the name etc.

Prince HAGONEL:

To whose commandments the Sons of Men (D. Light) and their Sons are subject: and are thy servants. To whose power the Operation of the Earth is subject. Who art the first of the twelve: and whose seal is called Barees and this ☉ it is. At whose commandment are the Kings, Noblemen and Princes of Nature. Who art Primus and Quartus Hagonel. Who by the Seven of the 7 (which are the Sons of Sempiternity) dost work marvels amongst the people of the Earth: and hast said to me, that I also by the same thy servant should work marvels. O Noble Hagonel, who art Minister to the triple crowned King CARMARA: and notwithstanding art Prince over these 42 Angels, whose names and characters are here presented:

Therefore, in the name etc.

King BLVMAZA:

[Nothing written for BLVMAZA in the manuscript – R.T.]

Prince BRALGES:

Who saidst: The creatures living in thy dominion are subject to thy own power. Whose subjects are invisible: and which (to my seer) appeared like little smokes without any form. Whose seal of government is this:

Who saidst: Behold I am come, I will teach the names without numbers. The creatures subject unto me shall be known to you.

Therefore, in the name etc.

TVESDAYE:

King BABALEL:

Who art King of the Waters: mighty and wonderful in Waters. Whose power is in the bowels of the Waters. Whose royal person with thy Noble Prince BEFAFES and his 42 Ministers the triple crowned King CARMARA bad me use to the glory, praise and honour of him, which created you all to the laud and praise of his Majesty.

Therefore, in the name etc.

Prince BEFAFES:

Who art Prince of the Seas. Thy power is upon the Waters. Thou drownedst Pharaoh and hast destroyed the wicked. Thy name was known to Moses. Thou livedst in Israel: who hast measured the waters, who wast with King Solomon, and also long after that with Scotus: but not known to him by thy true name: for he called thee Mares.<sup>18</sup> And since, thou wast with none: except, when thou preservest me (through the mercy of God) from the power of the wicked: and wast with me in extremity. Thou wast with me thoroughly. Who of the Ægyptians hath been called OBELISON in respect of thy pleasant deliverance. And by that name to me known: and of me noted in record, to be noble and courteous OBELISON. Whose noble Ministers 42 are of very great power, dignity and authority. As some in the measuring of the motions of the Waters, and saltness of the Seas, in giving good success in battles reducing ships, and all manner of vessels that float upon the Seas. To some all the fishes and monsters of the Seas, yea, all that liveth therein are well known: and generally are the distributors of God's judgements upon the Waters that cover the Earth. Others do beautify Nature in her composition. The rest are distributors and deliverers of the treasures and unknown substances of the Seas. Thou O Noble Prince BEFAFES hadst me use thee in the name of God.

Therefore, in the name etc.

WEDDENSDAYE:

King BNASPOL:

To whom the Earth with her bowels, and secrets whatsoever are delivered: and hast said to me: Heretofore what thou art, there I may know. Thou art great but (as thou truly didst confess) he in whom thou art, is greater than thou.

Therefore, in the name etc.

Prince BLISDON:

Unto whom the Keys of the Mysteries of the Earth are delivered. Whose 42 Ministers are Angels, that govern under thee. All which thy mighty King BNASPOL bad me use and affirmed that they are and shall be at my commandment.

Therefore, in the name etc.

THVRSDAYE:

King BYNEPOR:

Upon the distribution and participation of whose exalted, especial and glorified power, resteth only and dependeth the general state and condition of all things. Whose sanctification, glory and renown, although it had beginning, yet can it not, neither shall it have ending. He that measureth said, and thou was the end of his workmanship. Thou art like him and of him: yet not as partaking or adherent, but distinct in one degree. When he came, thou was magnified by his coming and art sanctified, world without end.

Vita Suprema. (The Highest Life.)

Vita Superior. (The Higher Life.)

Vita Infima tuis sunt mensurata manibus. (The Lowest Life is measured by your hands.)

Notwithstanding thou art not of thyself: neither is thy power thine own: magnified by his name, thou art in all: and all hath some being by thee: yet thy power is nothing, in respect of his power, which hath sent thee. Thou beginnest new worlds, new people, new Kings and new knowledge of a new government. And hast said to me: Thou shalt work marvellous, marvellously by my workmanship in the highest.

Therefore, in the name etc.

Prince BVTMONO:

Who art life and breath in living creatures. All things live by thee: the image of one excepted. All the kinds of beasts of the Earth dost thou endue with thy life. Thy seal is their glory. O God, thou art sanctified: and thou rejoicest. The living, the end and all beginning of all beasts, thou knowest and by sufferance thou disposeth them until thy time be run.

Therefore, in the name etc.

FRYDAYE:

King BALIGON:

Who canst distribute and bestow at pleasure, all and whatsoever can be wrought in aerial actions. Who hast the government of thyself perfectly, as a mystery known unto thyself. Tho didst advertise me of this stone, and holy receptacle: both needful to be had: and also didst direct me to the taking of it up: being presently and in a few minutes of time, brought to my sight (from the Secret of the Depth, where it was hid, in the uttermost part of the Roman possession) which Stone, thou warnedst me, no mortal hand but mine own should touch: and saidst unto me: Thou shalt prevail with it, with Kings, and with all the creatures of the world. Whose beauty (in virtue) shall be more worth, than the Kingdoms of the Earth. For the which purposes here rehearsed: and other partly, now to be exercised and enjoyed: and partly hereafter more abundantly (as the Lord God of Hosts shall dispose), and also because thou thyself art Governor of the 42 thy mighty, faithful and obedient Ministers:

Therefore, in the name etc.

A by-note, of the former SHEW STONE.

Blessed Uriel said to me at Mortlake A° 1583, May 5, a meridie, circa horam 4 am as followeth:

Uriel:

Thy Character must have the names of the five Angels (written in the midst of Sigillum Æmeth) graven upon the other side, in a Circle: in the midst whereof, must the Stone be (which was also brought). Wherein thou shalt AT ALL TIMES behold (privately to thyself) the state of God's people through the whole Earth.

APPENDIX A

ANALYTICAL NOTES

1. a) A literal translation of the title De Heptarchia Mystica would be ‘Concerning the Mystic Sevenfold Dominion’ (ablative case following ‘de’). Alternative renderings are possible, i.e. (nominative case) ‘The Mystic Sevenfold Dominion’ or ‘The Mystic Sevenfold Regimen’. The word Heptarchia is low Latin, from the Greek hepta (seven) plus arche (rulership). English titles are normally in the nominative case.

b) The prefatory quotation in Latin: ‘In septenariis totus Mundus . . . etc.’ is taken from the sixth book of the unfinished Stromateis (‘Patchwork’) of Clement of Alexandria.

Titus Flavius Clemens, or Clemens Alexandrinus (c. 150-213), a Christian theologian of the Alexandrian school, born in Athens of pagan parents, tried to reconcile Greek philosophy with the Mosaic Tradition of the Jews with considerable success. In the early third century A.D. he became one of the major intellectual leaders of the early Christian community.

In Stromateis he sets down his philosophical ideas in a series of unsystematic (Gnostic) notes.

2. a) The ring referred to is not described in detail in the present text. However, a representation of its design is recorded in John Dee’s first Book of the Mysteries (Mysteriorum Liber Primus, Mortlaci: Sloane MS 3188, British Museum).

On Wednesday March 14, 1582, the Archangel Michael reveals the form of the ring to Dee – via Kelly – who describes it in the following manner:

Dec: Then he (Michael) laid the ring upon the table. It seemed to be a ring of gold: with a seal engraved on it, and had a round thing in the middle of the seal, and a thing like a V, through the top of the circle: and an L, in the bottom: and a bar — clear through it. And had these four letters in it, P E L E . . .

John Dee's drawing of the ring.

PELE is an Angelic name meaning: 'He who workest wonders', and according to a marginal note in the manuscript, Dee recognized the name from John Reuchlin's work De Verbo Mirifico, a copy of which is included in his library catalogue: 'Vide Reuchlin, Librum de virbo mirico, de nom PELE' (Dee's note).

b) With regard to the choice of Lamyne, a certain amount of controversy exists. The first example revealed in the Spiritual Diaries is that which follows Mysteriorum Liber Primus, March 10, 1582:

Two marginal notes cast doubt on the validity of this character (said to have originated from the Archangel Uriel):
 (i) 'An illuding spirit straight away introduced himself and this character as may appear Libri Quinti appendice, where the character is described exactly.' (ii) 'This was not the True Uriel as may appear A° 1583: May 5.'

In the appendix of his five books of the Mysteries, Dee is told by the Angel IL that the first revealed Lamyne was 'false and divilish', and therefore not to be employed. Another Lamyne is then revealed by the Angel, first in Roman letters, and later to be converted into the characters of the Angelic Alphabet. Both designs, false and true, were held to contain a 'token' of Dee's name, 'a certain shadow of Delta', but it seems that Dee never understood how this could be. As an explanation, the Angel refers to the characters in the corners of the Lamyne, but unless some form of cypher is involved, it is difficult to see how the letters represent Dee's name.

The True Lamyne (first form: Roman letters):

The True Lamyne (second form: Angelic letters):

Dee is instructed to draw the above figure on paper four inches square. In use it was to be hung round the neck as a defence against evil spirits.

3. a) Sigillum Æmeth: Dee's principal seal consisted of a wax disc 9 inches in diameter and  $1\frac{1}{4}$  inches in thickness, upon which were described certain characters and numbers: a heptagon, a heptagram, and a pentagram, together with various Angelic names and seals.

The seal's design was transmitted to Dee via a series of spiritual communications that took place in March 1582 (Liber Mysteriorum Secundus).

In use, the seal supported the shew-stone, or crystal, five smaller versions being placed under the four legs of the Holy Table, protected from possible damage by wooden cases.

The diagram is a complex geometric design, specifically a 'Sigillum' or magical seal. At its center is a five-pointed star (pentagram) with various letters and symbols inscribed within its points and intersections. Surrounding the star are several concentric rings of text and symbols. The outermost ring consists of numbers (1 through 30) and letters (A through Z) arranged in a circular pattern. Inside this, there are several layers of text, including names like 'Stimul', 'Dmal', 'Eemel', 'Ilem', 'Oxable', 'Edek', 'Admir', 'Emell', 'Akele', 'Ile', 'Beigis', 'Haidene', 'XE', 'DEIMO', 'Akele', 'Ile', 'Beigis', 'Haidene', 'XE', 'DEIMO', 'Akele', 'Ile', 'Beigis', 'Haidene', 'XE', 'DEIMO'. The diagram is highly detailed and symmetrical, with a central point and a circular border.

The curious wax discs engraved with magical figures and names probably came into the British Museum with the books of the Cottonian Library, for among these books were two volumes of MS diaries written by Dr John Dee (1527-1608), the celebrated mathematician and astrologer; and Meric Casaubon relates that Dee's 'Holy Table', with which these discs have the closest connection, was in his time preserved in the library of Sir Thomas Cotton.

The Hebrew word Æmeth (EMETH = truth) is the word of power that is said to have been employed by Rabbi Loew to animate the mysterious Golem of Prague. On his drawing of the seal to be found in BM Sloane MS Folio 30, Dee adds the Latin words 'nuncupatum Dei' (the Name of God), indicating the level on which he regarded the symbol.

On the reverse side of the Sigillum Æmeth, we find the well-known magical word of power AGLA, inscribed about an equal-armed cross. The word is formed from a Qabalistic method of notation called Notariqon, where the initial letters of a sentence are taken to form a word. Thus AGLA = Ateh Gebor Le-Olahm Amen = Thou art mighty for ever, O Lord.

b) John Dee possessed several crystals and scrying mirrors and refers to them variously throughout the Spiritual Diaries. The two examples preserved in the British Museum would seem to be those upon which he placed the greatest reliance: a black obsidian mirror of Aztec origin, and a small but perfect quartz crystal. The latter of these seems to be the speculum or 'shew-stone' intended for the Heptarchical workings.

According to The Third Book of the Mysteries, Dee obtained the stone from an Angel on April 28, 1582. Dee describes the event in the following words:

E.K. (Edward Kelly) looked toward my west window, and saw there, first upon the mats by my books a thing (to his thinking) as big as an egg: most bright, clear and glorious, and an Angel of the height of a little child holding up the same thing in his hand toward me. And that Angel had a fire sword in his hand . . .

Michael: Go toward it and take it up.

Dee: I went toward the place, which EK pointed to: and till I came within a foot of it, I saw nothing, and then I saw like a shadow on the ground or mats hard by my books under the west window. The shadow was round, and less than the palm of my hand. I put my hand down upon it, and felt a thing cold and hard. Which (taking up) I perceived to be the Stone before mentioned.

A crude marginal drawing in the MS indicates that in use, the crystal was set in a gold frame, surmounted by what looks like a Calvary Cross.

A note on Dee's obsidian mirrors can be found on page 383 of the Proceedings of the Society of Antiquaries (O. M. Dalton, 1907):

... the best-known mirror is a flat piece of polished obsidian, evidently one of the mirrors used for toilet purposes by the ancient Mexicans. This mirror, which is in a leather case, was in the collection of Horace Walpole, and sold at the Strawberry Hill sale. It has changed hands a great many times, and when last put up for auction passed into the hands of Prince Alexis Soltykoff, in whose possession it is still supposed to be. Another mirror, also of Mexican obsidian, and said to have belonged to Dr Dee, was sold at the Jeffrey Whitehead sale at Sotheby's in March 1906.

4. The tables upon which the feet of the operator are to be placed during the Heptarchical Workings are almost certainly those given in two forms at the end of each section of chapter 4 of the main text. Each table contains 42 letters (being the names of the 42 Angelic Ministers), which are extracted by a laboriously complex method from the Table of the 49 Good Angels (Tabula Angelorum Bonorum 49). Of the two forms given (a  $7 \times 6$  square and a circular formation), Dee indicates in his notes on The Fourth Book of the Mysteries that the circular table is to be employed in each case: 'Note the Circle upon the ground: vide ante 3 folio, of my feet placed upon these Tables: ergo they should seem to be on the ground.' (Liber Mysteriorum Quartus)

The seal of the appropriate Prince is then placed on top of the 42-fold table upon which the operator stands. Thus the circular form of the table: LEENARB, LNANAEB, ROEM-NAB, LEAORIB etc. (second table 42 Ministers of Bornogo) would be overlaid by the seal of BORNOGO, etc.

5. The seal of Prince Hagonel (Barees) is the planetary symbol of the Sun and the alchemical symbol for gold: ☉. In a later section of Liber Mysteriorum Quartus the symbol is recorded in conjunction with a Calvary Cross: ☩ followed by Dee's note: 'It should seem that this character should be only a circle and a prick fol. 6.6. I have forgotten how I came by the Cross annexed to it.'

6. Mensafaderis (Mensa Faederis): in English, 'League Table' or 'Table of Covenant'. Dee's Holy Table or Table of Practice upon which was set Sigillum Æmeth and the shew-stone. In his Life of John Dee, Thomas Smith writes:

To this Table appertained a peculiar sacred, as it is called, Apparatus, that is to say, a coverlet, a white linen cloth spread over it, a desk, a candle-stick, a wax candle burning at the time of the Operation, a shrine in which red Crosses were interwoven all of which were kept, as is the custom, in the Oratory . . .

After Dee's death, the table passed into the library of Sir Thomas Cotton, along with a portion of the Spiritual Diaries and other items. In 1731 the Cottonian Library, then in Ashburnham House, was severely damaged by fire, and in 1753 its contents were removed to the British Museum. The whereabouts of the Holy Table are to this day unknown, and it is perhaps not unlikely to have been totally destroyed in the fire of 1731.

An engraving of the table was published by Dr Meric Casaubon in his 1659 edition of Dee's Spiritual Diaries (Books 6-18) entitled: A True and Faithful Relation of What passed for many Years Between Dr John Dee and Some Spirits. In the Preface of his Relations, Casaubon mentions that this engraving was taken from a brass cut he caused to be made from the original preserved in the library.

When one compares Casaubon's printed representation of the Holy Table with the drawing of the same given in Liber Mysteriorum Quinta Appendix (the only diagram of the table given in the Spiritual Diaries), the fact emerges that Casaubon's rendering is quite plainly in error. The letters that border the top and bottom edges of the table are obviously written backwards, while those that make up the left and right hand borders are transposed. In addition to these errors the 4 × 3 square that takes up the centre is also given in a reversed order. Detailed notes given in The Book of the Mysteries leave us in no doubt of the intended design of the table, and I am able to state with absolute certainty that Dee's drawing represents the correct form.

It should also be stated that, as all subsequently published renderings of the table – including the version printed in Crowley's Equinox (VII), and those of various contemporary American organizations – have followed Casaubon, the situation has remained unrectified until the publication of the present volume.

From the above statement two questions clearly arise. Firstly, how could Casaubon's engraver have executed such a strangely orientated rendering of the design? Secondly, why have the 'authorities' on Dee's magical writings not discovered this mistake during the passage of the last three hundred and thirty years or so?

As a tentative answer to the first question, I am informed by an expert in early printing techniques that such mistakes were once fairly commonplace, owing to the methods then employed in the art of plate-making. When one considers the upside-down sigils and imperfect magic squares of Barrett's Magus, this might well be the case.

The second question has, perhaps, several possible solutions. Occultists have long adhered to a tradition of imitating the mistakes of venerable predecessors, placing far too much reliance on the printed word, and rarely seeking verification of the facts through close examination of source material. One has only to consider the gross inaccuracies of the Golden Dawn system, and the travesties published by Aleister Crowley, to realize the validity of this point.

Another factor that has perhaps helped to obscure the true interpretation of Dee's table is the inability of the normal mind to work simultaneously in two entirely different symbol systems. Casaubon's version of the Holy Table employs the somewhat alien characters of the Angelic Alphabet throughout, while Dee's diagram consists of Roman letters, with the Angelic characters to be included in the central square referred to by name only: Gisg, Gon, Med, Van, etc. Dee's diagram is therefore the prototype of what was finally rendered into the Angelic counterpart. In addition, various easily disregarded marginal corrections to the structural notes are to be found throughout the relevant text.

The letters which were to be included along the edges and within the central square of the table were obtained in the following manner. First Dee is instructed to make a square  $7 \times 12$  and to write within it the fourteen names of the Heptarchical Kings and Princes backwards (i.e. right to left), in each case omitting the initial letter 'B'. Reading the letters of the square downwards from right to left yields the order of the letters read in a clockwise direction from the top right-hand corner of the table. (In order to achieve this the top line of the table should be transferred to the bottom – R.T.)

l o n e g a n o g i l a o g o n r o l e g o b o s e f a f e l e l a b a o n o m t u r o p e n y n o d s i l l o p s a n
 s e g l a r a z a m u l

To obtain the letters to be included in the central square ( $3 \times 4$ ), Dee is instructed to write the following by Uriel:

o o e l r l r l u
 o i t

(the reversed and inverted letters of the central square). Then: 'rather thus:'

t i o u l r
 l r l e o o

(the correct form of the square).

Dee's note: so they seem to have been meant in the figure of the Table of Practice before described.

Uriel explains that these letters are obtained from a  $7 \times 12$  table following the order of Tabula Collecta (the Table of 49 Good Angels; see further note).

Once more omitting the Bs but this time written left to right. (Dee also lists the names of the Angelic equivalents of these letters against the various parts of the table: in front, to the right, to the left, and towards the breast.)

Note: 'A great B is to be made at each corner.'

Dee is instructed to render the letters into the characters of the Angelic Alphabet.

7. In use the Holy Table was to be set up in the following manner. First, the table was placed upon four smaller versions of Sigillum Æmeth which were protected by wooden cases. Then the major version of Sigillum Æmeth was placed in the centre of the table and surrounded by seven tablets or tables made from purified tin (see note 9). The whole table was then covered with a drape of red cloth shot with green, which hung down the sides of the table with a tassel at each corner. On the top of the silken cloth – exactly over the Sigillum Æmeth – stood the crystal, or shew-stone, within its golden frame.

Dee also notes in his first book that red silk ‘two yards square’ was also to be laid under the table; but whether this was to be laid over or under the four lesser seals is unclear. A crude diagram of the table without the table-cloths can be found in Liber Mysteriorum Primus.

With regard to the colouring of the table, very little is revealed, apart from the instruction that the characters written along the edges were to be rendered in yellow (‘made of perfect oil, used in the church’).

8. See note 2(b).

9. The seven tablets or tables referred to are described in the Diaries as 'Arms' or 'The Ensigns of Creation'. They were obtained clairvoyantly during a series of operations which were carried out towards the end of April 1582. The Angel instructs Dee to make the tablets from purified tin, or to paint them on the table; which method was adopted is uncertain. A note in the Appendix of Liber Mysteriorum Quintus explains that the tablets are 'proper to every King and Prince in their order'.

The order in which the tablets were received is as follows: (Dee: Note Numerus Primus.)

|                                                                                     |                                                                                     |                                                                                     |                                                                                     |                                                                                     |                                                                                     |                                                                                     |                                                                                     |                                                                                   |

In use, the seven tablets were placed or painted upon the Holy Table in the following manner:

(Note: seven inches from the border of the table. Numbers indicate the order of tablets given above.)

10. The tables to be held in the hand during the operation are to be painted on sweet wood. According to a marginal diagram in the appendix to the first five books of the Mysteries, they take the form of three concentric circles. The central circle contains the sigil of the King, the second (middle) circle contains his name, and the third (outer) circle contains letters, some backward, some forward, obtained we are told from 'the Great Globe'. It is uncertain what is intended by this last remark, as nothing in the Diaries seems to correspond to this device. Perhaps Dee refers to something revealed only in the crystal, or the relevant notes have not come down to us (see Introduction).

Dee's marginal diagram is as follows:

11. See note 6.

12. See note 2(b).

13. The white cloth corresponds to the visionary table employed by the Angels, and not to the Holy Table of Practice.

14. A vision of a strange flag is revealed to Kelly in the Action which opens the fourth Book of the Mysteries. A crude diagram shows a woman and the reversed letters 'C B' on a white background. The other side of the flag contains the Royal Arms of England as employed from 1400-1603. Two quarters of the flag each contain three representations of the fleurs-de-lis (representing France), and two quarters three lions passant guardant (for England).

15. Pantafes: a kind of high-heeled overshoe worn to raise the ordinary shoes out of mud and wet, secured to the foot by a leather loop. Pynsono: a thin shoe or slipper (a pump) to be worn with pantafes. Obsolete soon after 1600, no description known.

16. The following sketch of the hill and 42 Ministers is given in Liber Mysteriorum Quintus:

17. Dee's meaning is that no description of the spirit was possible, as he had not yet appeared in the stone, unless under another name.

18. The reference here is uncertain. First, we have John Scotus (ERIGENA) c. 850 A.D., of Irish origin. He was employed as teacher at the court of Charles the Bald. His writings included commentaries on Dionysius the Areopagite and a major work entitled De Divisione Naturae in which he expounds his leading philosophy, viz. the Unity of Nature, proceeding from God through creative ideas to the sensible universe, ultimately resolved into the First Cause. He was an originator of mystical thought in the Middle Ages.

On the other hand, we have the better known John Duns Scotus (Doctor Subtilis) c. 1265-1308. He was a Scottish theologian and a member of the Franciscan Order of Friars. He was a vigorous supporter of the doctrine of the Immaculate Conception and the freedom of the will. Amongst his works were De Modis Significandi sive Grammatica Speculativa (1499), a philosophic grammar, and a work on metaphysics entitled De Rerum Principio. He was one of the first to challenge the harmony of faith and reason, a central point in the doctrine of Thomas Aquinas.

In his Catalogue of Manuscripts, Dee lists two works under the name Scotus: 'Joh. Duns Scoti quaestiones in Porphyrii quinque voces' and 'Joh. Scoti quaestiones super secundo et tertio libro Aristotelis de anima'.

19. Suidas, Lexicon, 10th century.

20. St Epiphanius, Bishop of Constantia, d. 403: De Geranis.

21. Leviticus, VIII, 8 et al.

22. Antonius Mizaldus (Mizauld), Memorabilium (Paris, 1554 etc.).

23. In Liber Mysteriorum Quartus, the diagram of the 42 Ministers of King Bnapsen contains a devilish face, surrounded by what seem to be flames of fire.

24. The Table of 49 Good Angels to be found on the final page of De Heptarchia Mystica represents the synthesis of all the forces which comprise this seven-fold system of Magic. The Angelic names which make up the table were first derived in the following manner. On Sunday April 29, 1582, Edward Kelly receives a vision of seven spirits, each holding up a square table divided into 49 lesser squares filled with letters and numbers. The spirits then join their tables together in the form of a cross (see below). In Dee's Third Book of the Mysteries, Kelly (then known to Dee as Edward Talbot – see Introduction) relates the vision.

All the 7 (which here appear) join their tables in one: which before they held apart. And they be of this form all together. The middlemost is a great square and on each side of it, one as big as it, joining closest it. And over it joined two, which both together were equal to it: and under it were such other two, as may appear in this little pattern [a small drawing follows]: being thus joined, a bright circle did accompany and enclose them all, thus: but nothing was in the circle.

Kelly then repeats each letter and number to Dee who records them in the following diagram:

The names of the 49 good Angels are then extracted from the figure by proceeding in a clockwise manner (beginning in each case with a letter B from the central square numbered 1), and simply observing which letter falls against the relevant number in each instance. Thus the name of the first Angel follows as 1 in the first square = B; 1 in the second square = A; 1 in the third square = L; 1 in the fourth square = I; 1 in the fifth square = G; 1 in the sixth square = O; 1 in the seventh square = N; therefore the name is BALIGON.

Unfortunately, a small piece of the manuscript has been torn away (or perhaps worm-eaten) some time in the past, obliterating three squares in the second table and five squares in the third. We know this must have occurred before 1672 when the manuscript came into the hands of Elias Ashmole, as his copy bears the same defect. As we possess Dee's collected table of the 49 names, we can easily (by working backwards) rediscover the missing letters and numbers. They are in fact: 15A, 30R and 41A in the second table, and 18I, 19A, 38R, 44G and 48R in the third table. The problem is, however, to what squares do we allocate the rediscovered letters? As the distribution of the letters and numbers throughout the square system is totally random, we are left with six permutations in the case of table 2 and one hundred and twenty permutations in the case of table 3.

Having collected the 49 Angelic names from the seven tables, Dee constructed the following list which he called Tabula Collecta: 49 Angeloru Bonoru, Notia continens, from which in turn he formed his circular plan of the system Tabula Angelorum Bonorum 49.

In Casaubon's edition of the later Diaries I have noticed an instance where Tabula Collecta has been employed for the purpose of talismanic magic, details of which are beyond the scope of this present volume.

Addition to Note 4:

Working through the method employed by Dee to generate the names of the 294 Ministers (i.e. 42 to each of the 7 Heptarchical Princes) has revealed several possible errors in Chapter 4 of the original manuscript.

It seems that the first seven Ministers of Prince Hagonel should be:

O S S N G L E rather than O E S N G L E

The fourth septenary of the Ministers of Prince Blisdon should read:

O O G O S R B rather than O O G O S R S

The second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth septenaries of Prince Brorges should read:

B Y A P A O L rather than B Y A P A R E

B N A N G E L rather than B N A M G E E

B N V I G E R rather than B N V A G E S

B L L O L O L rather than B L B O P O O

B A B A P O N rather than B A B E P E N

The rest appear to be correct. It should be noted, however, that Dee had already attempted to correct the second Minister of Prince Hagonel (substituting E for F), as I have indicated in Appendix B of the present work.

JOHN DEE'S RELIGIOUS MAGIC

In order to appreciate John Dee's approach to the magical arts, it is necessary to observe the influences that prevailed during his time and their overall effect on him and his contemporaries.

The philosophical atmosphere of the Elizabethan Renaissance became highly charged with the current of 'new learning' which swept across the known world. An influx of knowledge on a hitherto unprecedented scale brought with it the advancement of ideas, initiating a fervent quest for wisdom and understanding which culminated in the advent of a new being, the Renaissance Magus. With the religious bigotry of the Papal Crown replaced by the scientifically preferable – yet, paradoxically, narrowing – effects of Protestant accession, Tudor England stood on the threshold of a promised Utopia. A new age had dawned.

The emergence of the sixteenth-century Magi gave birth to a great revival of interest in the Hermetic arts of magic, alchemy and the Qabalah: linked with scientific thought, these time-honoured methods were once more to be utilized in a titanic effort to discover the mysteries of God, Man and Nature.

Although John Dee embraced the whole edifice of the Hermetic corpus, it is evident that his main preoccupation was with magic. Magic, in Dee's view, far divorced from the goetic processes of the medieval grimoires, represented a method by which the Divine Will could be interpreted for the lasting benefit of mankind. The search for the Principle of Unity – lost at the Fall of Man – was of prime importance.

Dee held this factor as the key to all mysteries, ensouling the very nature of the Divinity as comprehended by the spiritually illuminated Adept. To this end it was Dee's ardent wish to communicate with the Angels of Light in an attempt to unravel the complexities of universal law, and restore man to his former estate.

It is immediately obvious to anyone who has studied the Spiritual Diaries in any depth that Dee, although personifying the 'New Age Magus' in every sense, cannot be considered as a magician. Piously Christian, much given to prayer and humility, shunning all that smacked of diabolism or irreverence, John Dee stands curiously alone in the history of occultism. Magical texts of all descriptions existed in Dee's library, but it seems that he never employed them during the Angelic Operations. From various references in Liber Mysteriorum it can be seen that Dee's familiarity with magical books was extensive, often recognizing symbols and references during the actions to have counterparts in the works of Reuchlin and Agrippa, or the book known as Arbatel*. Despite this, the only true magical text to be employed extensively throughout the Angelic Operations seems to have been Cornelius Agrippa's Three Books of Occult Philosophy, and even so there is little evidence to suggest that this work was used for purposes other than reference. On the other hand, Edward Kelly (as we have seen) was to a certain extent given to the art of conjuration, but here again it is most unlikely that Dee would allow the performance of such rites in his presence.

Having banished the vision of the Solomonic Adept invoking spirits, wand in hand, let us examine what remains.

From the outset it seems that prayers to God and the Angels played a major role in the modus of the Dee-Kelly operations. Descriptive passages in the Spiritual Diaries refer to Dee praying in his oratory, while Kelly kneels before the Holy Table and awaits the presence of the Angel. Apart from the occasional recitation of psalms, little else of a ritual nature seems to have transpired. The possible employment of talismans to attract the Angelic forces cannot be overlooked, and, indeed, in the later operations, the presence of the Holy Table, tablets and other items lends credence to this argument. In theory at least, the Holy Table and its furnishings take on a semblance to the Hebrew Ark of the Covenant, with its central 'Mercy Seat', silken trappings and insulation from the earth. Dee is told never to look upon the table without the greatest reverence, and during the Heptarchical workings to approach it with a lamen, or breastplate, over his heart, reminiscent of the High Priest in Exodus. On the appearance of the spirit in the stone, Dee and Kelly are commanded by a mysterious voice (heard only by Kelly) to 'move not, the place is holy'. This utterance seemed to signal the commencement of the operation, followed by the appearance of a white cloud within the stone which cleared away at the arrival of the apparitions. The termination of the work seemed entirely dependant on the will of the spirits (unusual in the history of magic), and was indicated by a darkening of the stone. Finally the two offered thanks to the Creator and His servants for their attendance, followed by formal prayers.

**The Arbatel of Magic*, trans. Robert Turner, 1655, reprinted in The Fourth Book of Agrippa, Askins 1978. The Arbatel (first issued at Basel, 1575) contains nine sections or 'tomes', the first of which (Isagoge) contains 49 magical aphorisms; other sections deal with Olympic Spirits, Microcosmic Magic, Sibylline Magic etc. Only the first book seems to be extant.

It will be seen from the above that the Dee-Kelly approach to Angel-magic bears little resemblance to the techniques laid down by tradition. Gone is the protective and confining circle, the formal invocations, banishings, and licence to depart. Gone are the magical weapons, the tripod of invocations, the triangle of Art, and, to a certain extent, the controlling will of the operator.

The unorthodoxy of Dee's system of Angel-magic is even reflected in the nature and mannerisms of the spirits called into the stone, many of them behaving like a riotous band of elementals, seeming to have more in common with the denizens of A Midsummer Night's Dream than those encountered in the field of ritual magic. (One is reminded of the T.R. and John Cokars' translation of the Pseudomarchia Daemonum of Wierus* and its delightful invocations of the beautiful fairy Sybilina.)

**The Pseudomarchia Daemonum* of Johannes Wierus (John Weyer) circulated in printed form during Dee's time (published 1563); in essence it is a true Elizabethan (and Christianized) grimoire. The text was later included in Reginald Scot's Discovery of Witchcraft 1584 (reprinted Centaur Press 1964). The identity of its translator 'T.R.' is unknown, yet it is certain that John Cokars was somehow involved.

Several variant spellings of the name Cokars appear in Dee's Diaries and other works, i.e. Croker, Crockers, Crockars.

Beyond this, Dee's hierarchy of spiritual beings exhibits an overwhelming obsession with the number seven and its permutations, the letter 'b' (probably the Angelic equivalent of the number seven – Dr Laycock please note), and possessing virtually unpronounceable names. Dee's spirits also proved to be remarkably accomplished musicians, exhibiting amazing dexterity as they played tuneful melodies upon pyramidal shaped trumpets and bulbous forty-nine holed flutes (Liber Mysteriorum Quartus)! It is also clear that the virtues of brevity and straightforwardness were not inherent in the natures of these strange creatures. Poor Dee must have been driven half mad by the longwinded and laboriously complicated methods which the spirits employed to transmit simple facts.

With particular reference to De Heptarchia Mystica, several other striking peculiarities emerge. Firstly, we have the matter of unstable personalities: Carmara (or Marmara) becomes Baligon; while Hagonel, with the substitution of B for H and transposition of O and E, would seem to become Bagenol. This explains to some extent Dee's note regarding Bagenol in Chapter 4 of the Heptarchia: 'He appeared not by that name yet'. This transference of identity extends in a certain manner to other spirits in the system in a way so far unexplained, but further research may yield an answer.

Consideration of the planetary attributions allocated to the Heptarchical Kings and Princes gives rise to further confusion. While the Kings follow the traditional order of planetary ascriptions assigned to the days of the week, the Princes do not. A conflicting series of associations emerges which – to my knowledge – has no traditional counterpart. This is further complicated by the inclusion of Carmara (Baligon)/Venus, and Hagonel (Bagenol)/Moon under the headings of both Monday and Friday (see Chapter 7 of Dee's text). The astrological attributions given in Dee's manuscript are as follows:

| Day | KING | Planet | PRINCE | Planet |
|------------|-------------|---------------|---------------|---------------|
| Sunday     | Babogel     | Sun           | Bornogo       | Venus         |
| Monday     | Blumaza*    | Moon          | Bralges*      | Saturn        |
| Tuesday    | Babalel     | Mars          | Befafes       | Sun           |
| Wednesday  | Bnaspol     | Mercury       | Blisdon       | Jupiter       |
| Thursday   | Bynepor     | Jupiter       | Butmono       | Mars          |
| Friday     | Baligon     | Venus         | Bagenol       | Moon          |
| Saturday   | Bnapsen     | Saturn        | Brorges       | Mercury       |

*Carmara and Hagonel also given for this day.

Strange bedfellows indeed. One would expect the qualities of each King to be reflected in his respective Prince, so why this conflict of planetary designation? The astrological incompatibility of the Kings and Princes does not, however, seem to extend to their powers and dominions, each pair exhibiting similar characteristics. Once again a chaotic picture emerges, however, with Babalel and Befafes ruling the Sea (Fire and Fire astrologically, Fire and Water qabalistically), Bnaspol and Blisdon ruling Earth (Air and Water astrologically, Water and Water qabalistically) and so forth. While it is uncertain what to make of these seemingly contradictory elements in Dee's system, perhaps it is easier to consider the Prince in each case as a component part of his King as reflected in Dee's note in The Fourth Book of the Mysteries: 'My Prince is in myself, which is a mystery'.

Although no definite system of planetary hours is ascribed to the Heptarchical Angels, we read in Chapter 3 of Dee's text: 'The King and the Prince govern for the whole day. The rest according to the six parts of the day'. 'The rest' are apparently the 42 Ministers of each Prince. By way of explanation Dee gives the following diagram in The Fourth Book of the Mysteries:

|    |   |   |   |   |   |   |         |            |
|----|---|---|---|---|---|---|---------|------------|
| E* |   |   |   |   |   |   |         |            |
| O  | F | S | N | G | L | E | 4 hours |            |
| A  | V | Z | N | I | L | N | 4 hours |            |
| Y  | L | L | M | A | F | S | 4 hours | = 24 hours |
| N  | R | S | O | G | O | O | 4 hours |            |
| N  | R | R | C | P | R | N | 4 hours |            |
| L  | A | B | D | G | R | E | 4 hours |            |

The example is of the 42 Ministers of Prince Hagonel (Bagenol), each letter representing a spirit – see Appendix A, note 4 – each line of seven spirits therefore rules four hours of the day. The names are generated (as we have mentioned elsewhere) from a method which combines (therefore represents) the letters of the forty-nine Angels, both called and uncalled.

The Heptarchical operation itself seems to be a comparatively simple technique when compared with other magical systems. After deciding what forces are to be invoked, and with due observation of the correct day for their summoning, the operator sets up the Holy Table in the prescribed manner (see Appendix A, note 7). On the ground before the table he places the appropriate circular table of the 42 Ministers (Appendix A, note 4), and covers the same with a tablet containing the seal of their Prince, upon which he stands. He must have the Lamen upon his breast and the ring upon his finger. Holding in his hands a circular wooden tablet bearing the sigil of the relevant Heptarchical King, he reads aloud the oration which begins 'O Almighty, Aeternal, the true and living God . . .' (see Chapter 5), followed by the Exordium of the King, and finally that of the Prince (see Chapter 6). At the conclusion of the operation thanks are offered to God, and the Angels who have attended.

*This E is Dee's correction and replaces F in the manuscript.

As we do not know the offices or the powers of the seven spiritual Ministers that preside in each four-hour cycle, it is impossible to be precise regarding the time of the operation. It seems that the spirits communicate by a form of telepathy accompanied by visions in the crystal or shew-stone. It is unknown whether incense, holy water, or ceremonial robes were to be employed.

It has been argued in recent years that Dee's entire system of Angelic magic is in reality a cipher, or even a complex method of encipherment employed during his activities with the Elizabethan 'secret service'; the magical element being included as a red herring to throw his opponents off the track. Much of this reasoning stems from the fact that Dee bought a copy of the much sought-after Steganographia of Abbot Trithemius* while travelling in the Low Countries during 1562. The Steganographia, as D. P. Walker has pointed out,† is in fact a book concerning various methods of encipherment disguised as a treatise on Angel magic. Although this work most probably gave Dee much food for thought, the nature and content of the Spiritual Diaries makes it most unlikely that a similar method was involved as Donald Laycock admirably demonstrates in his Complete Enochian Dictionary.‡ Another work of Trithemius' known as Polygraphia (published 1516), which may have influenced Dee, contains hundreds of substitution ciphers in the form of poly-alphabets which yield word structures similar to those encountered in De Heptarchia Mystica. For example, the words JOHN DEE enciphered with Trithemius' Tabula Recta (square table) system yield JPKQ DFG. No-one can be quite certain about these matters but in my view – based upon fourteen years of research – Dee's magical writings are what they appear to be and do not involve a system of cryptography. Even De Heptarchia Mystica, the prime candidate upon which to base the 'cipher theory', firmly resists any attempts at cryptoanalysis.

Although throughout his long life John Dee insisted that he neither saw nor heard the apparitions that so haunted him, he nevertheless wrote in his private diary on May 25, 1581: 'I had sight in crystallo offered me, and I saw'. The word 'crystallo' he had transliterated into Greek in an attempt to conceal its meaning. Had Dee something to hide? Did he really see spirits, but was afraid to admit the fact, even to himself? On this matter, perhaps we should leave the final word to Puck: after all, he should know!

'If we shadows have offended,
Think but this (and all is mended),
That you have but slumber'd here,
While these visions did appear.'

(Puck's speech, A Midsummer Night's Dream, Act V Scene I)

MORTLAKE REVISITED: JOHN DEE'S HOUSE AND HIS BURIAL IN MORTLAKE

by Robin E. Cousins

When walking through Mortlake today, little trace can be found of its famous resident, John Dee. His house is no longer standing and his gravestone in the chancel of the parish church of St Mary the Virgin has long disappeared. The only memorial, a dubious commemoration, is in the form of John Dee House, the name of a modern block of flats which stands on the site of Dee's garden, immediately west of the church in Mortlake High Street.

Dee 'dwelt in a house neere the water side a little westward from the church'* on the opposite side of the High Street. The road, in fact, separated most of the garden from the house which stood approximately on the west side of the present Tapestry Alley, which runs between the High Street and the Thames Towing Path. Also known as Queens Head Court, this alleyway is a pleasant grassed area. Once, however, it was a narrow passage with a middle court. The famous Mortlake Tapestry Works previously stood on the east side of the passage and the former Queens Head Inn, now converted to flats, stands to the north-west on the river-bank. The waterstairs leading to the foreshore at the bottom of Tapestry Alley are possibly the 'Watergate Stayres' which Arthur Dee fell down at 12.15 p.m. on July 3, 1582, cutting 'his forhed on the right eyebrow' – an incident John Dee recorded in his diary.*

John Dee was settled in Mortlake by 1570. He lived in Europe from 1583 to 1589 and on February 20, 1596 he was installed as Warden of Manchester College. In November 1604 he returned to Mortlake, where he spent the rest of his days. Dee's house was possibly built during the reign of Henry VII (1485-1509) and originally belonged to his mother, Johanna Wild. On June 15, 1579 she surrendered the house and lands to him and his descendants. The charge for the surrender was twenty shillings which was paid on October 30. Johanna Dee lived with John Dee and his family until she died in October 1580 aged seventy-seven. Dee gradually extended the premises by the purchase of adjoining small tenements, which were developed to house his laboratory and library.

A contemporary description of the property is provided by a survey of Mortlake, dated 1617, then part of the Manor of Wimbledon. The surveyor was Ralph Treswell, who was assisted by a specially appointed jury of thirteen. The survey moved westward along the north side of Mortlake High Street, eventually arriving at a 'howse with yarde and garden plot' and an 'auncient messuage with owhouses, orchard and garden',† separated by a square court.

The 'howse with yarde' was the laboratory, while the 'messuage' to the west of the court was the Dee family home, which at that time belonged to the descendants of Bartholomew Brickwood, who had bought the property on Dee's death in 1608. The old laboratory building stood on land belonging to a Mr John Juxon. This land was acquired by Sir Francis Crane (d. 1536) in 1619 for the purpose of founding the Mortlake Tapestry Works. Crane, a distinguished courtier, had received a subsidy of £2,000 from James I in order to establish the manufactory, which was built forthwith 'upon the Ground whereon Doctor Dees laboratory (& other Roomes for that use) stood'.‡ ever Doctor Dee left behind him', asked John Aubrey (1627-1697), the antiquary, to seek out a local contemporary of Dee for an account of the Doctor. In early January 1673, Aubrey was directed to the Widow Faldo, an eighty-two year old native of Mortlake. Ashmole, however, was dissatisfied with Aubrey's report which was received on January 27, and interviewed the Widow Faldo again on August 11, 1673. The two accounts* cover much the same ground, although Ashmole's report is more ordered.

The Widow Faldo knew Dee well. Her mother 'dwelt neere him, in the same Towne'. Faldo frequented his house which, to confirm its location, was next to a square court west of the 'howse where the Tapistry hangings are made'. In 1673 the house was occupied by a Mr Selbury. Dee had four or five rooms in his house 'filled with bookes' and he kept 'a great many Stille' in which he used 'an abundance of Eggeshells'. He kept a 'plentifull Table and a good Howse' and once showed Faldo and her mother the 'Ecclips of the Sun in one of his Roomes, which he had made darke'.

against Dee's magical work, broke into his house soon after he had left for Poland and caused considerable damage. In 1592 Dee reported his losses to a specially appointed commission and assessed his losses at £200 for destroyed chemical apparatus; £20 for a broken quadrant; £33 for a stolen magnet; and £390 for damaged books and manuscripts.

After the Tapestry Manufactory closed in 1703, the original Queens Head Inn* was built between Dee's house and the Thames on land belonging to the factory.

In 1814 the house was a Ladies' Boarding School administered by a Mrs Dubois and it had contained, a few years previously, a room 'ornamented with red and white roses'.† Sir Richard Phillips (1767-1840) visited the school in 1816, being unable to resist his 'curiosity to view the house in which he [Dee] resided'. He was politely shown through the principal rooms.

In two hundred years, it has, of course, undergone considerable alterations: yet parts of it exhibit the architecture of the sixteenth century. From the front windows I was shown Dee's garden, on the other side of the road, still attached [i.e. belonging] to the house; down the central path of which, through iron gates, yet standing, Queen Elizabeth used to walk from her carriage . . .*

On September 17, 1580, Dee records one such visitation in his diary:

The Quene's Majestie cam from Rychemond in her coach, the higher way of Mortlak felde, and whan she cam right against the church she turned down toward my howse: and when she was against my garden in the felde she stode there a good while, and then cam ynto the street at the great gate of the felde, where she espyed me at my doore . . .†

The garden was fenced with pales, when Dee possessed it, but in 1757 it was an 'orchard inclosed with a brick wall'.‡ A house for the limner or artist of the Tapestry Works was built on part of the garden next to the churchyard wall and a row of houses, known as Victoria Terrace, was erected on the remainder during the nineteenth century. When John Dee House was built in 1957, the site was cleared, even removing an old iron gateway in the garden wall at the rear, possibly the same gateway which Phillips saw in 1816.

Building development along the High Street during the nineteenth century would have enclosed Dee's house. During the 1849 cholera epidemic, Mortlake was severely afflicted, especially in the vicinity of Queens Head Court, where the medical officer reported a privy in a most offensive state.§ The Dee house, however, was soon a memory. For in 1886, John Anderson (1844-1915), a local historian, wrote that there was 'a stone let into the wall up the Court marking the site of his house'.¶ Unfortunately, massive redevelopment during the twentieth century has ensured the disappearance of this commemorative stone in Tapestry Alley. The widening of Mortlake High Street in post-war years resulted in many buildings being demolished. The Tapestry House, which stood on the site of the laboratory, became a tenement house after the closure of the factory, but in 1951 it was declared dangerous and was demolished.

When John Dee died in December 1608, he was buried in the chancel of Mortlake Parish Church. However, seekers of his memorial are doomed to disappointment. Sir Richard Phillips failed in 1816, as did John Anderson, who scoured in vain the Vestry Minutes Books of the first decade of the seventeenth century for a record of the fee of 6s.8d. for Dee's interment in the church.*

Unfortunately, a Register of Burials was not maintained between 1603 and 1613. The Widow Faldo, however, solves the mystery. From their conversations with her, Ashmole and Aubrey discovered that Dee 'lyes buried in the Chancell of Mortlack Church about the midle yet neerer the South side, between the Graves of Mr Holt & Mr Myles, who haue Grauestones with Inscriptions upon them. There also lay an old Grauestone upon him'.†

The old marble stone bore no inscription, but '2 or 3 brasse pinnes' remained from the brass which had been removed 'long before Docotor Dee's buriall'. When the floor of the chancel was 'layd flatt in Olivers time', Dee's second-hand gravestone was removed to the entrance of the chancel, where it must have remained until the chancel was rebuilt in 1885. The brass inscriptions from the graves of Anthony Holt (d. 1602) and Edward Myles (d. 1618), who were both 'servants to Queen Elizabeth', were transferred to the walls of the church, but Dee's old stone must have disappeared in the rubble.

In 1906 the galleries in the church were removed. The West Gallery had been provided by John Dee. The carpenter was the father of the Widow Faldo and in the south end of the gallery was carved:

from the Widow Faldo, as retold by Ashmole and Aubrey, may help. Dee walked '... very upright, without a staff, with his hands behind him, while about home. He was tall, and wore his beard picked [i.e. long and pointed], being very white'. He dressed in a 'black gowne still with long sleeves, with slitts but without Buttons and loops and tufts'. Children dreaded Dee 'because he was counted a conjuror' and, after his death, they would 'runne to Doctor Dees stone' when they played in the church. Nevertheless, Dee was considered a great peacemaker by his neighbours and long after his death they desired a 'Peacemaker such as Doctor Dee was' during disputes.

The Widow Faldo died in 1674, her burial being registered in the Mortlake Parish Register on March 30.

THE VOYNICH MANUSCRIPT AND AN ANCIENT TREASURE MAP

A page from the Voynich Manuscript. Reproduced by permission of the Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library, Yale University, Connecticut.

In 1912 William Voynich, an American antiquarian book dealer, discovered in the vaults of an Italian Jesuit School a unique and most mysterious manuscript. Although the document proved to be unreadable – being written in a seemingly unbreakable code – Voynich purchased the codex along with other works and thus presented to the world what has proved to be the ‘Mount Everest’ for cryptanalysts.

At first glance Voynich’s manuscript appears to be written in a normal flowing longhand penned by an unhesitating scribe; closer scrutiny, however, reveals a text in no known language, which obstinately refuses to give up its secrets despite the laborious efforts of the world’s finest code-breakers over the past seventy years.

The leaves of the manuscript are of high quality vellum measuring six inches by nine inches and contain a text written in black ink, together with a large number of illustrations in red, blue, green, yellow and brown. The opening section of the manuscript is illustrated with drawings largely botanical in nature – one plant to each page – followed by a host of representations of nude females (who appear to be bathing), finally giving way to a series of star-maps and asterisms. Two hundred and four pages remain extant, though experts estimate some thirty pages to be missing owing to indications found in the binding. Untitled, coverless, and unread, the manuscript now resides in the collection of the Beinecke Rare Book Library, Yale University, Connecticut, awaiting a translator capable of unravelling its mysteries.

As we shall see later, some progress has recently been made in deciphering the code employed in the Voynich text, but before we enlarge upon this matter I think it would be well to furnish the reader with a brief account of the history of the Voynich manuscript and its possible connection with John Dee.

Although some authorities date the manuscript at approximately 1500, others with equally sound reasoning attribute the work to the English Franciscan Friar Roger Bacon, who lived in the thirteenth century (1214-1294?). Bacon, an alchemist, inventor and early scientist, has been accredited with the invention of the microscope, the telescope, gunpowder, and – amongst other things – the creation of a talking automaton in the form of a robotic brazen head. Bacon is also known to be the author of several alchemical and chemical tracts written in cipher. John Dee possessed most of Bacon's better known works, and followed the early Baconian tradition with regard to the qualities of the vegetable and mineral kingdoms, and – as we have seen – also shared a common interest in the mechanical arts. A belief in the possibility of conveying a semblance of life and intelligence to machines through magical means was almost universally held in medieval and Elizabethan times.

The attribution of the Voynich manuscript to Roger Bacon was first recorded by Marcus Marci, the rector of the University of Prague, who related that the document had been purchased by Emperor Rudolf II during the late sixteenth century. During this period John Dee and Edward Kelly were frequent visitors to the Prague court of the Emperor, and it is quite possible that Dee, knowing of Rudolf's interest in Friar Bacon's alchemical writings, had sold the manuscript to his host. It is alleged that Rudolf paid the vast sum of 600 golden ducats for the text.

It has been said that John Dee could have obtained the manuscript from the Duke of Northumberland (Dee was tutor to the children of the Duke and in his Mathematicall Preface to Euclid he extols the virtues of his eldest son, the Earl of Warwick), who sacked many monasteries at the order of King Henry VIII.

In the first spiritual diary (1582), Dee refers to one of his books by the name of Soyga, which he is unable to read. Could this have been the Voynich manuscript? Elias Ashmole considered the book Soyga and Dee's complex volume of tables Liber Logaeth, or the Book of Enoch, to be one and the same text, but seems to have ignored the fact that Soyga was written of as an extant text two years before the advent of Liber Logaeth. Dee's son Arthur also refers to a book 'containing nought but hieroglyphicks', to which his father devoted much study during his time in Prague, but which he could not decipher.

In the later books of the Libri Mysteriorum, Dee makes mention of a book called A Sudden Sunshine, indicating that Soyga – perhaps Voynich – was a work that could only be assailed by inspiration, something which lay just below the level of the conscious mind, the tip-of-the-tongue situation which to this day epitomizes the Voynich enigma.

Recent work on the Voynich codex conducted by Robert S. Brumbaugh in 1975/76 provides a partial solution to the mystery that surrounds the manuscript, or at least to the code employed. By utilizing a  $9 \times 4$  box substitution method as a grid system, Mr Brumbaugh seems to have successfully solved the involved cipher, but adds: '... the reader need have no fear that the solution will remove all mystery and ambiguity from the manuscript: it turns out to be one thing to solve the cipher and quite another to edit, translate, and interpret the resulting plain text.'\*

In short, although Brumbaugh's 'solution' provides useful clues to the evaluation of individual words in the codex, we are in reality no nearer to reading the plain text, which proves to be a polylingual jumble never before encountered. What does emerge from Robert Brumbaugh's work is that the manuscript is most likely alchemical, or, as he puts it, '... a treatise on the Elixir of Life'. This conclusion is of course precisely what would be expected if the work indeed originated from Roger Bacon. In the course of his studies, Brumbaugh has brought to light material which would seem to conflict with the Roger Bacon attribution, inasmuch as certain New World plants have been identified in the codex (the sunflower and the capsicum pepper, first brought to Europe by Columbus in 1493). However, as Brumbaugh himself points out, '... this says nothing about the date of the material in this treatise, nor the attribution to Roger Bacon.'† Could these items, therefore, have been added to the text at some later date?

During 1666 Athanasius Kircher, the learned Jesuit scholar, received the manuscript from his pupil Marci who hoped his master would afford a solution to the cryptogram. As with his efforts regarding the ancient Egyptian hieroglyphics, Kircher failed utterly.

Without further appraisal and verification, it is difficult to say whether or not Brumbaugh's conclusions bring us nearer to the truth than Kircher's. In addition, the involvement of both Roger Bacon and John Dee with what has been termed 'the world's most mysterious manuscript' remains unproven to this day. The facts which have so far emerged do seem powerfully to imply such an involvement and, if this proves to be the case, the final solution may well rest with the occultist rather than the cryptanalyst.

Dee indicated – in a marginal note – that the map and cipher were found by Kelly and an associate at Huteos Cross, together with a book on magic and alchemy, having been guided there by a spirit. Dee also notes that the Danes (referred to in the cipher text) were last in England in the year 1040.

As to the treasure itself, little is known, although a book, a scroll and a powder – probably of alchemic significance – are mentioned in later sections of the diaries. Dee suggests that Kelly looks first towards Newbury in his quest, and it seems that the skryer did in fact set off in this direction in search of the treasure. Later, through the intervention of spirits, Dee was told that it was sufficient to obtain earth from the ten locations indicated in the map to bring the treasure to light. As an alternative to digging, this method seems to have been favoured by Dee and Kelly, although we have no records of their success in this matter.

Whether or not the treasure or, for that matter, the monuments indicated on Dee's map ever existed, remaining to this day undiscovered, must remain as a subject of conjecture. Like the Voynich manuscript, the end of the tale is yet untold; we can only hope that some day the final chapter will be written.

Bibliography

P R E F A C E

IN 1842 J. O. Halliwell edited for the Camden Society a volume entitled The Diary of Dr. John Dee. To the diary itself, which extends with considerable gaps over the years (1554) 1577 to 1601, he appended the catalogue of Dee's manuscript library, taken from an autograph MS. in the Gale Collection at Trinity College, Cambridge (O. 4. 20). This catalogue it is my purpose to reprint here, and to furnish what information I can about the books entered in it.

Bibliographers will readily agree that this is worth doing. They will remember that Dee was not merely an alchemist and spiritualist, but a really learned man, and one who had done his best, by petitions and otherwise, to stimulate interest in the rescuing of MSS. from the dissolved monastic libraries and to induce the sovereign to establish a central national collection of them. They will also be aware that we have but very few sixteenth-century English catalogues of manuscript collections, and that the investigation of the destinies of a dispersed library may be made to throw much light upon the formation of the collections which still exist.

It will be as well, before we embark upon the examination of the catalogue, to have before us the leading dates in the life of the owner of the books. John Dee was born in 1527. When the Diary begins, we find him living at Mortlake. In 1583 (on September 21) he left England, with the impostor Edward Kelly, for Bohemia and Poland, whence, after a most unsuccessful and detrimental sojourn, he returned to Mortlake in December 1589. In 1595 he was made Warden of Manchester College (now the cathedral): in 1604 he came back to Mortlake; and in 1608 he died there in poverty.

Our catalogue was made on September 6, 1583, just a fortnight before he started for the Continent. As soon as he was fairly off, a raid was made upon his house by the less respectable residents in Mortlake (among the better sort he seems to have been popular and well-liked), his books were, to some extent, dispersed, and valuable scientific instruments broken or stolen. On his return six years later he was able to recover, it is said, three-fourths of the books, but the apparatus was gone for ever. The cause of the raid was no doubt Dee's dealings with spirits, which not unnaturally earned for him the reputation of being a sorcerer.<sup>1</sup>

The catalogue of 1583, then, cannot be regarded as a full record of the manuscripts which Dee possessed at the time of his death. Some volumes will be entered in it which were lost or destroyed soon after it was made, and, on the other hand, during the twenty-five years that elapsed between its making and Dee's death, it is not to be supposed that he did not make additions to his collection. There are, in fact, volumes in existence which contain his name, with dates of acquisition long subsequent to 1583.

<sup>1</sup> The marginal notes written by Dee in the MS. of this catalogue at Trinity College relate in some cases to this spoliation. One such, which occurs only once in the list of MSS., but very often indeed in that of the printed books, is 'J. Davis spoyle'. There are variants of this: e.g. on f. 3 of the MS. apropos of a work of Cusanus, 'Jo. Davis toke (wth others) by violence out of my howse after my going', followed by the sentence, through which Dee has drawn a line, 'He hath got the Mathematicall part of Cusan.' Again, 'Jo. Davis sent me one volume home, the other lacketh.' 'Jo. Davis spoyle he hath not yet restored, as may appere by his letters.' Other like notes are 'Mr. Jak restored', 'Widdow Gardiner (or Gardiner's Widdow) restored'. Davis, Gardiner, and Jak are all mentioned in the Diary. In Oct. 1579 Davis figures as one of the persons who are continually being 'reconciled' to Dee: in Feb. 1583 he is one of a group who confer with Walsingham about the North-West Passage, and in March he goes off to Devonshire. Robert Gardiner in May 1582 has revelations vouchsafed to him about the philosopher's stone, and seems to have been in Dee's employment. In May 1590 Thomas Jack restores to Dee part of his 'magnes stone', and in July sends him back a hammer.

He may have parted with some of his treasures under stress of poverty during the years immediately preceding his death: his biographers say that he did: but the fact is not of great importance as regards our investigation. It is of more interest to learn what happened to the library when he was gone. Upon this some light is thrown by Archbishop Ussher's correspondence. Sir Henry Bourghier, writing to Ussher in 1624 (sixteen years after Dee's death), speaks of 'Dee's library, which hath been long litigious, and by that means unsold' (Works, x| 227). In another letter (March 23, 1624-5) he says 'Vettius Valens in Greek is Mr. Selden's now, but was sometimes Dr. Dee's, but the rest of his books will be had very shortly, as many as are worth the having'. In October 1626 Dr. Bainbridge, Professor of Astronomy at Oxford, writes to the Archbishop: 'I am bold to enter your grace's bibliotheca with the humble request that I may have the names of such mathematical books as were Dee's.' He adds that he had seen in London a list of bare titles of Dee's books, and had been to Sir Robert Cotton, but his books were not yet ordered in a catalogue. From these passages I gather that litigation (consequent most likely on Dee's debts) had prevented the dispersion of the library until 1625 (probably February 1625<sup>5</sup>), and that, when it was finally sold, Ussher and Cotton had made considerable purchases. Selden, we see, also bought at least one book. We find Dee books, too, in the collections of Digby, Ashmole, Savile (Sir Henry, who died before Dee): but there is a yet more important purchaser. The number of volumes from this source which have made their way to Corpus Christi College, Oxford, cannot fail to arrest attention: it constitutes by far the largest portion of Dee's library that is to be found in any one place.

Now a document exists (C.C.C., Oxford, MS. 280, p. 235) which shows that a number of Dee's MSS. were offered for sale to the College by Brian Twyne, the famous Oxford antiquary, who was a Fellow of the society. The purchase was declined, but the books were ultimately bequeathed by Twyne to the College.<sup>1</sup>

Twyne's special reason for buying the books I can only conjecture; but my conjecture takes this form. John Twyne, his grandfather, schoolmaster, mayor, and antiquarian, of Canterbury, had procured a good many MSS. from the dissolved library of St. Augustine's Abbey there, and these had afterwards come into Dee's hands: Brian Twyne knew this, and desired to recover and keep together his grandfather's collections. Certain it is that many of the Dee-Twyne-Corpus Christi books are from St. Augustine's,<sup>2</sup> less certain that they were owned by John Twyne. Brian Twyne, by the way, did not succeed in securing all the St. Augustine's MSS. that Dee owned: the most important one, the catalogue of the Abbey library, went to Ussher, and is now at Dublin. This is all that I can learn

(a) An acknowledgment of £15 due to John White, bookseller in Little Britain, for MSS. bought by B. Twyne for the use of the President and Scholars of C. C. College in Oxon. to be paid before 14 March. Dated 22 Feb. 1625: signed Th. Amyan, President.

(b) A similar acknowledgment by the same of £3 6s. due to J. White. Dated 23 Feb. 1625.

(c) Notes by Twyne, viz.: 'I made a generall catalogue of these bookes at London, & when they were brought downe to y<sup>e</sup> Coll: y<sup>e</sup> company would not consent that any money shuld be layd out for them. Br. Twyne.

They were returned vpon y<sup>e</sup> President.

They were parcell of Dr. Dees bookes & some of them very rare: & all worthy of y<sup>e</sup> buyinge for y<sup>e</sup> Coll: Library, if they had byn more.'

<sup>2</sup> Several entries, to which I can as yet find no corresponding extant MS., answer to entries in the St. Augustine's Catalogue, viz. Nos. 20, (59), 68, 107, 120, (138), 159, 171, (173). Of the extant MSS. sixteen can be traced to St. Augustine's.

Similarly one or two books may have come from the Austin Friars at York (see the catalogue in Fasciculus J. W. Clark dicatus), viz. Nos. 72, 75.

or guess as to the destinies of Dee's MSS. immediately after their dispersion. We find stray volumes making their way into the libraries of Pepys, Gale, Harley, and Sloane (one at Lambeth must have been bought by Bancroft before Dee's death). I have found but one for certain in a foreign library, and that belonged to Kenelm Digby. Two others, doubtful, are among Queen Christina's MSS. in the Vatican.

There is more, however, to be said about the growth of the collection. We have two lists of Dee's MSS. earlier than 1583. One (List A) is in a small notebook of his at Corpus Christi College, Oxford (MS. 191). This book contains:

1. List of MSS. owned by Dee in 1556.
2. List of MSS. borrowed by him from Peterhouse, Cambridge, to be returned in 1558.<sup>1</sup>
3. Contents of a MS. borrowed from Dr. Hathar.
4. Contents of a MS. borrowed from Queen's College, Oxford.
5. List of MSS. bought by him from John Leland's library in 1556, and from other sources.
6. Alchemical books read by him in 1556. This last item does not concern our present investigation.

The other (List B) is contained in the British Museum MS. Add. 35213 (formerly Phillipps 10701), to which Mr. J. P. Gilson and Mr. J. A. Herbert kindly directed my attention. It is the volume from which Mr. Gilson printed the very interesting catalogue of the MSS. of Long Harry Savile of <sup>1</sup> Of the books (six in number) borrowed in 1556, five are still to be found in the catalogue of 1583. But we must not be hasty in accusing Dee of dishonesty. One of the borrowed MSS. (now Ashmole 424) has a note in Dee's hand to the effect that it was presented to him by Peterhouse in 1564 in exchange for a gift of printed books. Dee parted with it before his death: in 1606 a 'Dominus Hyspsey' gave or sold it to P(atrick) Saunders. These same names occur in another of the books, Ashmole 1471, also with the date 1606.

Banke (d. 1617).<sup>1</sup> On ff. 1-4 it contains a roughly-written list of Dee's books, written and printed, in his autograph, the MSS. being entered on ff. 3<sup>b</sup> and 4. This list cannot be far removed from A in date, but it is not clear to me whether it is a little the earlier or a little the later of the two. List A is, in any case, of greater importance, since it shows the sources whence some of Dee's MSS. came.

My chief object in this investigation is to identify the extant remains of Dee's manuscript library. With this in view I have examined a great many collections at London, Oxford, Cambridge, and elsewhere, as occasion offered: and not without success. Halliwell gave identifications (not always correct) of 22 MSS.: mine, certain and doubtful, number over 120. The means of identification vary. Sometimes we have Dee's signature in full; but often we have to depend on subsidiary marks: autograph notes are not uncommon; other books bear a  $\Delta$  or the astrological sign of Jupiter thrice repeated  $\frac{2}{2}$ , or a mark like a small ladder. Sometimes names of owners, like P. Saunders, whom we know to have been Dee's associates, combine with the contents of a MS. to ensure an identification. Often the contents of the MS. are the only guide. The list itself will afford the reader the means of judging of the weight of the evidence in each case.

I have collated Halliwell's text of O. 4. 20 with the MS. without finding any important differences. One feature, it is true, Halliwell has omitted to notice, and I cannot wholly explain. With few exceptions the entries of MSS. up to no. 67 have a T prefixed to them. The others have in most cases the letters Fr. These same letters, T and Fr., are prefixed to the entries of printed books, which of course fill the greatest part of the MS. For Fr. I can suggest an interpretation. At the very beginning of the volume is this note in Dee's hand, minutely written and somewhat injured:

Andreas Fremonshemijs | Birkmannorum Colo[n]niensium in Anglicos (?) | Distractor Librorum | siue Bibliopola . . . | exscripsit Mortlaci | ipsos omnes . . . | singulos libros | considerans.

The Fr. then may indicate Fremonshemius, the agent of the Birkmanns, who perhaps contemplated buying the library, but cannot ultimately have done so. Who T was I cannot now guess—not Twyne, at any rate. Happily the letters seem to have no value as indicating the present whereabouts of the books.

There is a second MS. of the catalogue of 1583, viz. Harley 1879: it is in the same hand as the Gale MS., but does not contain the letters T and Fr., nor any marginal notes by Dee. It has, however, prefixed to the catalogue on f. 19<sup>b</sup> of the whole volume (which contains several catalogues) a note in Dee's hand (I think) which is not without interest, though it does not bear directly on our subject:

'In the Book of St. Aug<sup>ten</sup> of Canterbury. being a large Foll. Book in an old red cover containing 385 leaves.

The beginning of the book is in a latter hand then most of the book and is an Exemplification and Confirmation of all the charters of the Kings proinde (?) to Ed. the sonn of Edward mad in the time Radulphi Abbatis.

In the first leaf of the old hand, after the former Exemplification, and vnder the charter of King Aethelbert and priueledg of St. Aug<sup>ten</sup> anglorum apostoli, there is wrytten thes words following in a rud secretary hand

Liber Johannis Twyne de grayes Ine ex dono patris sui Johannis Twyne Teste Humfrido Jurdano Rectore ecclesie de Sturmowthe. per me John Twyne

The sam is wrytten in pag. of the sam book 212 over a deed of 3 roods and a half of land in Newland

This book is now in the hands of on Mr. Wylford of Kent an[d] old gentellman being in fette(r) layn a recusant.'

The book here described is doubtless the Cotton MS. Claud. D. x.

We find more of it in Clark (Wood's Life and Times, iv. 91, Oxf. Hist. Soc.). Brian Twyne (xvi. 407) cites: Thomas de Thanet (vixit 1272) Matricula scil. de variis chartis libertatibus ac privilegiis et possessionibus monasterii S. Aug. Cant. Init. In nomine domini J. C. notum sit omnibus tam praesentibus quam posteris quod ego Adhelbertus. It was given by John Twyne of Canterbury (but query of Gray's Inn: see above) to Thomas Smyth high-customer of London, and was afterwards in the hands of Richard James of C.C.C. Oxford: a thick 4to with a red cover.

The notes have some interest as recording the fact that John Twyne owned yet another St. Augustine's book.

Of the general character of the collection a few words must be said. It is in the main a special one, got together to assist Dee in his peculiar studies. Had it survived intact it would have been a first-class repository of mediaeval science books excluding medicine. Alchemy, astrology, astronomy, physics, geometry, optics, mathematics are all very copiously represented; and Dee appears to have given special attention to collecting the works of two great writers, Roger Bacon and Raymund Lull. There is very little theology, and no ancient poetry. Among the classical MSS., one containing the versions of Plato's Phaedo and Meno, which was made in Sicily for Frederick IV—see Val. Rose's articles on it in Hermes, vol. i—is of special interest. History, British and English, is perhaps the subject best represented next to Natural Science. One Welsh MS. occurs.

Few of the MSS. which can be identified are very old. Perhaps the oldest is the Lauderdale Orosius, now at Helmingham, which is not in the catalogue. The Priscianus Lydus (A. 15), Isidore (94), Boethius (114), Aethicus (9,80) are of respectable antiquity.

I have not attempted to collect here notices of MSS. of Dee's own writing.

rationum | Euclidis data | Alfrangi astronomiae rudimenta inter-prète Ioh. Hispaniensi cent. xii. ff. 209.
The items common to the two lists are striking and the discrepancies not beyond what may be paralleled in this catalogue. I believe this Phillipps MS. to be the one which Dee borrowed of Bruarn the Oxford professor of Hebrew and momentary Provost of Eton. But if so, the latter part of it—William of Conches, etc.—must have been detached since Dee's time.]

 [There follows in Halliwell's book, pp. 87-9, Elias Ashmole's list (from MS. Ashmole 1720) of such of Dee's MSS. as had come to his hands. They are all records of his intercourse with spirits, and have no bearing on our present subject.]

Of other MSS. which certainly or probably belonged to Dee, and do not occur in the Catalogue, I have noted the following in various collections: but I have little doubt that the list is incomplete.

Helmingham Hall, Suffolk. Lord Tollemache's Library.

The Lauderdale MS. of Alfred's Orosius is recorded to have belonged to Dee, but his name is not to be found in it.

Lambeth Library.

598, pt. III. Creton's poem on the deposition of Richard II has the note 'John Dee 1575 gave for this booke a booke of the foundation of (blank) in Oxfordshire'.

London, British Museum.

Sloane 2325, paper, cent. xv, ff. 33. Ioannes Dee 1557 beginning: Many a regyon & contre y haue y sowte.
 Stowe 1070, paper, cent. xv-xvi, ff. 74.
 Ioannes Dee.
 Patricius Saunders 1606 (?)
 G. Theophanes (= Tiffin) 1730.
 R. Farmer.

It contains some fourteen alchemical tracts, of which the first are—

1. Tract. Nicholai Comititis.
2. Summa Platonis.
3. Speculum Alkimie Rog. Baconis.

And the last is: Dialogus inter Naturam et filium philosophie.

Oxford, Bodleian Library.

Ashmole 1451, pt. II, a paper MS. of 66 ff. in English and Latin, of alchemical tracts mostly by Brixham with marginalia by Dee.

36 Manuscripts formerly owned by Dr. John Dee

- 1492, pt. I, a paper MS. of 6 ff. Io. Dee 1569. Opus expertum Parisiis . . . 1540.
 Digby 192 (Raymund Lull) Ars demonstrativa; has a note of Dee's of 1576.
 218, art. 3. Bacon's Opus Minus according to Twyne belonged to Dee.

Oxford, Corpus Christi College.

65. Tacuinus, from Twyne, has some notes of accounts, perhaps in Dee's hand.
 101. Ptolemy, etc., has a note on f. 1 by Dee (?) and at the end a letter of Casimir of Poland to Cracow University.
 127, 128. From Twyne; bound together: Bacon de erroribus medicorum and some alchemical tracts: may be Dee's, but have not his hand in them.
 134. Life of St. Oswin; from Twyne: marked 24; but belonged to Savile of Banke.
 136. Collectanea Alchemica, Latin and English; belonged to Dee in 1559.
 144. Astronomica, Alanus de Insula, G. Vinsauf: from Twyne. Came from Tynemouth Priory (as also 134).
 148. Bacon's Greek Grammar: from Twyne.
 152 has the ladder-mark and belonged to Dee: see Wood's Life and Times, iv. 266-7. It contains works of Nic. Kratzer.
 153. Io. Dastin, etc.: from Twyne.
 185 has the ladder-mark and apparently Dee's hand on the verso of a fragment of a will at the end. Contents alchemical.
 191 is Dee's note-book: see above.
 223 has the ladder-mark. Bacon, Urso, etc.
 226. Marbod, etc., partly by the scribe of 227 (see above, no. 169): has a note 'Receyved at Manchester by Col. Arnold from Mistres Marie Nevel 1597 Dec. 17'.
 237. Life of S. Katherine, etc., in English verse: has the ladder-mark.
 238. Alchemical (Rosarium, Ortolanus, Morienus, etc.).
 242. Lydgate's Fall of Princes: ladder-mark.
 250. In Ciceronis Rhetorica, etc.: ladder-mark and 24.
 252. Romance of Marques: ladder-mark.
 276 has 24 24 24. Bernard de Gordonio.
 278. Mesue, etc.: ladder-mark.
 290. Aristotle's Metaphysics: ladder-mark.

ADDITIONAL NOTE

Dee's own account of the pillage of his library, and of its value, is to be found in the 'briefe note and abstract' of his career (drawn up in 1592) which is printed by Hearne in Joh. Glastoniensis (II. 500). Here, on p. 529, we read:—

'The divers bookes of my late library, printed & anciently written, bound & unbound, were in all near 4000: the fourth part of which were the written bookes.' He values them at £2,000. 'And, to make this valuation probable unto your Honour, behold yet here these four written bookes, one in Greek, this great volumn; two in French; and this in High Dutch. They cost me and my friends for me 533<sup>lib</sup>. . . . What is then to be thought of the value of some one hundred of the best of all the other written bookes, of which some were the autographa of excellent & seldome heard-of Authors? The furniture of the said library was of my getting together in above 40 yeares time from divers places beyond the seas, & some by my great search and labour gotten here in England'. He then gives some account of his mathematical instruments, and of two collections of Irish and Welsh deeds (the latter, apparently, rescued from a half-ruined church). On p. 534 he values his lost books (above 500)—'I mean such as may be gotten for money'—at above £150.

I cannot tell what the four MSS. were which he produced as a sample; but the price paid for them is enormous; and the catalogue of the MSS. shows that in 1583 he did not possess much over 200 MSS., whereas here he reckons them at 1,000. I doubt if we can trust his figures; but the extract deserves to be quoted, and the 'abstract' to be read.

who led me to the true Dee.*

Acknowledgements

My work on the lives and techniques of the Elizabethan Magi began over two decades ago. During this lengthy period I have incurred the debt of the many friends, associates and public bodies who have assisted with my researches. This book is therefore not my achievement alone, but a culmination of the collective efforts of all who have helped to make it possible.

My grateful thanks are due to the British Library Board for granting permission to reproduce material from original Dee manuscripts and the portrait of Simon Forman; to the Wellcome Institute for the engraving from Robert Fludd's Philosophia Sacra; to the National Portrait Gallery for the Portrait of Elizabeth I; and the Ashmolean Museum's Department of Western Art for the Portrait of John Dee.

I am greatly indebted to the veteran writer Colin Wilson for taking time out of his hectic schedule to write an admirable Foreword; and to Christian Wilby for the loan of his excellent typescript of Dee's Diaries.

Special thanks to Patricia Shore Turner for her contribution on Twm Sion Cati; Robin E. Cousins for his work on Robert Turner and for compiling the index; Charles Cattell for his excellent artwork; and Christopher Upton for his scholarly Latin translations.

Patricia Shore Turner extends her personal gratitude to M. E. Ling, of Cardiff Central Library for his offer of research facilities; to Christopher Delaney, Curator of Carmarthen Museum for his informative telephone conversation and the photograph of Thomas Jones' claspknife; to Gwynfor Rees of Tregaron Secondary School, for his informative notes, his work at the National Library of Wales, and the high-quality negative of 'The Werna Stones'. To Jane O'Reilly for her impression of Cati and the motif of the swallow-tailed kite; and to the Staff of Wolverhampton Reference Library for their assistance in tracking down various obscure Welsh words.

Robin Cousins wishes especially to thank Bob and Barbara Prichard of Salem, Penrhyncoch, Dyfed for their hospitality and transportation to Ystradffyn in order to photograph Twm Sion Cati's Cave; their son Danny Simkins, who knew the concealed location of the cave; and Carol Cousins for long-term encouragement. He also extends his thanks to the British Library Board for permission to reproduce the portrait of Robert Turner and other important items; to the Staff of Hampshire Record Office in Winchester for their assistance during the search for Turner's origins; and to Holy Cross Church, Bearsted for permission to photograph the Fludd Monument in the vestry.

Finally I wish to record my thanks to our Publishers and the staff of Element Books for their indispensable help at every stage of the work; with special thanks to Simon Franklin for his talented editorial work and invaluable guidance.

Foreword

This book is about a number of 'mages' or occultists of the Elizabethan and Stuart era, chief among whom is Dr John Dee. And I foresee that the book is going to cause severe bewilderment among those who expect it only to contain some curious and entertaining sidelights on the history of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. This, I suspect, is why I have been asked to write the foreword – to form a bridge between the scholarly authors of this volume and the reader who finds himself growing increasingly confused and exasperated.

The problem is this. Dee, Kelly, Fludd, Simon Forman and the rest took it completely for granted that 'magic' really works, and that it is possible to make contact with angels – or demons – and 'control' them. And we readers of the late twentieth century take it equally for granted that magic is a delusion, a mere historical curiosity. We also take it for granted that the writers of this volume share our enlightened attitude. But the authors offer no clue to their attitude; they prefer to write with scholarly detachment about the strange doings and even stranger ideas of these extraordinary men, and leave us to make up our own minds.

I must confess that I feel this is not an entirely reasonable attitude; so for the benefit of those who share my view, I will do my best to explain why I believe that these half-forgotten mages deserve our sympathetic attention.

Let us begin by admitting that, to the modern intelligence, the story of John Dee is an almost impenetrable mystery. What are we to make of this tale of an Elizabethan scholar – one of the greatest of his age – who experimented with the magical invocation of spirits – while all the time insisting that he was not a magician – and who went on to transcribe a great many books at their dictation? When we learn that Dee's partner in most of these experiments was a dubious young Irishman named Edward Kelly (or Kelley), who had lost both his ears for forgery, it is hard to avoid jumping to the conclusion that Dee was simply the credulous dupe of a confidence trickster. This, for example, is the view taken by Rossell Hope Robbins in his widely circulated Encyclopedia of Witchcraft and Demonology, where, after agreeing that Dee was one of the great Elizabethan scholars of 'occult philosophy', he goes on:

Less reputable, possibly, was Dee's connection with John Kelly, a mountebank with whom, in 1581, at Wootton-in-the-Dale, he tried to invoke spirits to discover hidden treasure. In spite of his erudition, or because of it, Dr Dee was easily duped. The most astounding example of his naïveté was swapping wives with his assistant Kelly.

Now, as the author of this present volume would quickly point out, this paragraph contains a remarkable number of inaccuracies. Kelly's name was Edward, not John. Dee met him in 1582, so could not have been with him invoking spirits in 1581. In fact, the exploit in question is supposed to have taken place at Walton-le-Dale (not Wootton-in-the-Dale) near Lancaster, and Kelly's companion was said to be a man called Paul Waring, not John Dee. So it would not perhaps be too unfair to assume that Rossell Hope Robbins does not know what he is talking about.

But what is the truth – or at least, the ‘historical truth’ – behind all this? It is that by the time he was 55 – in 1582 – John Dee was an enthusiastic searcher for the Philosopher's Stone and the Elixir of Life, and had frequently attained moods of mystical exaltation. As a good Christian – and as a student of Paracelsus and Cornelius Agrippa – he naturally believed in the factual reality of angels or blessed spirits, and attempted to contact them by gazing into crystals. According to his diary, he first saw an angel in a crystal globe in May 1581, almost a year before he met Kelly. And in November 1582, seven months or so after he had met Kelly, Dee was on his knees praying when a ‘sudden glory’ filled the west window of his laboratory, and he saw the angel Uriel. The angel smiled benignly, and handed Dee a piece of convex crystal, telling him that it would enable him to communicate with beings of another world and to foresee the future; then Uriel vanished. So clearly, Dee was not merely Kelly's dupe. He believed that he had had direct personal contact with the angel Uriel. And since, whatever else he was, Dee was no fool, we may take it for granted that Uriel was not Kelly dressed up in silver paper and sequins.

As to the notion that Kelly was merely a mountebank and confidence trickster, this is discounted by one of the most distinguished of modern writers on magic, E. M. Butler, who writes (in Ritual Magic): ‘it could undoubtedly have been one long-drawn-out, gigantic fraud practised by [Kelly] on Dee . . . Yet I believe that the generally accepted view of downright and conscious trickery is an over-simplification which distorts the truth.’ (p. 259.)

The truth, she believes, is that Kelly possessed genuine powers of clairvoyance or crystal-vision, and that he undoubtedly heard and saw the ‘spirits’ he described – or firmly believed he did. She goes on to point out that Kelly was terrified of the 'spirits', believing that they were devils and not angels, and that Kelly had no need to keep trying to run away if his only intention was to pull the wool over Dee's eyes. Dee was totally, one-hundred-per-cent, convinced that Kelly was seeing real angels, and there was no need for Kelly to indulge in play-acting. Anyone who has actually gone to the trouble of reading Meric Casaubon's edition of A True and Faithful Relation of What Passed for Many Yeers Between Dr John Dee and Some Spirits (1659) – a book of which I happen to possess a modern reprint – will end up, as Dr Butler was, totally convinced that Kelly was no fraud as a clairvoyant. He believed that he saw and heard real spirits.

That, of course, does not mean that he did. It may have been merely a form of self-hypnosis. And this was, in fact, my own view in the days when, in my late teens and early twenties, I first devoured E. M. Butler's Myth of the Magus, Fortunes of Faust and Ritual Magic (all borrowed from the Wimbledon Public Library). I was quite willing to believe that there may be mysterious unknown forces in the universe; but I could not believe they took the forms of angels and demons. And if I had known the work in those days, I would have thoroughly approved of Lynn Thorndike's classic History of Magic and Experimental Science, whose very title informs us that the author regards 'magic' as a crude and confused form of science.

It was when I was asked to write a history of 'the occult' in the late 1960s that I gradually became aware that my view was, to put it mildly, somewhat simplistic. Yet I must emphasise that mine was no sudden and revelatory conversion to 'occultism'. It was, rather, a slow process of understanding of what 'occultism' really means, viewed as a historical phenomenon, and it was in no way opposed to reason and common sense. And perhaps the best way in which I can explain my change of viewpoint is to tell the reader something of what I learnt about the history of 'occultism'.

Our remote ancestors believed in life after death, in the realm of spirits, in clairvoyance and the prophetic power of dreams, in natural magic, and in the mysterious influence of the stars and planets on human destiny. Many of these beliefs were closely bound up with the tenets of the Christian religion. This is why many of the Christian fathers, such as St Augustine, were opposed to the rise of natural science, believing that these attempts to 'put Nature to the question' were blasphemous, and likely to undermine the true faith. The great Roger Bacon was thrown into prison in 1277 for suggesting that man should be prepared to trust the powers of his reason, and probably stayed there until 1292, the year of his death.

But science flourished, with or without the approval of the Church Fathers. And to begin with, there was certainly no conflict between 'magic' and science; Paracelsus was an alchemist as well as a scientist; Kepler was an astrologer as well as an astronomer; even Isaac Newton himself was a practising alchemist. It was not until the 'Age of Reason', the age of Hume and Voltaire, that most intelligent men decided that magic was no more than ignorance and superstition, and turned their backs on it.

Yet it was in the age of Voltaire that 'occultism' received its greatest impetus since the days of Paracelsus and Cornelius Agrippa. A wealthy physician named Anton Mesmer stumbled upon the discovery that some of his patients could be cured of such ailments as stomach cramps by laying a powerful magnet on their stomachs. And when he was bleeding a patient, he noticed that the flow of blood increased when he brought a magnet close, and diminished when he took it away. That meant that the human body must possess its own form of magnetism – Animal Magnetism, so to speak. Mesmer convinced himself that if magnets were immersed in water, the water became 'magnetised', and could effect cures. Even trees and grass could be magnetised, so that patients who lay in the garden could receive the benefit.

We are inclined to believe that Mesmer had merely discovered the power of 'suggestion'. Yet we could be oversimplifying. For example, in the 1870s, doctors in the asylum at Rochefort began a series of experiments on a youth named Louis Vivé, who was suffering from hysterical paralysis of the right side of his body after being bitten by a viper; they discovered that the paralysis could be transferred from his right to his left side if he was stroked with steel; but nothing happened if they tried other metals. And thirty years earlier, Baron Karl von Reichenbach had also discovered that magnets could produce a powerful effect on his own patients, and he went to some trouble to make sure that this was not merely a matter of suggestion – for example, getting an assistant to hold a powerful magnet on the other side of the wall from the patient's bed, whereupon she instantly detected its presence.

Mesmer was soon branded a charlatan by his fellow doctors, and driven out of Vienna. Yet many doctors were more open-minded (and less envious) than their Viennese colleagues, and came to acknowledge that animal magnetism is not simply a matter of auto-suggestion. One of these was Dr Joseph Ennemoser, who held the Chair of Medicine at the University of Bonn from 1819, and whose massive History of Magic still deserves to be read as a fascinating introduction to the subject. Ennemoser believed that 'magnetism' is one of the basic unrecognised principles of life, and that it permeates all nature. But he also concluded that 'a certain prophetic faculty is a common property of the human race, which becomes conspicuous in proportion as man withdraws himself from the external physical world', and that this 'withdrawal' into himself enables man to discover a 'higher power of the spirit'.

Ennemoser's book fascinated a man of letters named William Howitt, and in 1852, during a voyage to Australia, he settled down to translating the work into English. While on this voyage, he had a dream experience that seemed to confirm Ennemoser's views. He dreamed of being at his brother's house in Melbourne, and observed it in detail: a wood of eucalyptus trees, greenhouses by a wall, and a sloping hillside. On his arrival in Australia, he and his two sons walked along until Howitt recognised the wood of his dreams, and told his sons that they would shortly see his brother's house. A moment later, it came into view, exactly as he had seen it in his dream.

In the following year, his wife – back in England – had a dream in which she received a letter from her son saying 'My father is very ill.' She woke up deeply disturbed. She wrote to her husband the next day describing the dream. Six days later she received a letter telling her that her husband had been very ill, but was now better.

Sceptics will have no difficulty demolishing both these examples, pointing out that we only have Howitt's word for it that the scenery was 'identical', and that Mrs Howitt's dream was probably coincidence. But Howitt went to the trouble of collecting a 150-page appendix to his translation of Ennemoser, with dozens of other examples of 'paranormal phenomena'. A few years earlier, a novelist named Catherine Crowe had assembled a similar collection of anecdotes of the paranormal, and her book The Night Side of Nature (1848) became a well-deserved bestseller. But it was not until thirty-four years later, with the foundation of the Society of Psychical Research, that meticulous collection of evidence made it clear that, whatever Voltaire and Hume had to say to the contrary, paranormal phenomena were a reality of human experience and not a product of human credulity.

Now many of these phenomena investigated by the Society for Psychical Research would now be labelled 'paranormal powers of the unconscious mind'; they included telepathy, clairvoyance, premonitions, and the peculiar phenomena known as doppelgangers or 'phantasms of the living'. But the Society's researches also made it perfectly clear that there was just as much solid evidence for the existence of ghosts and 'poltergeists' – or 'banging ghosts'. And although some of this evidence might be explained away in terms of telepathy or 'clairvoyance', some of it seemed to indicate quite unequivocally that human beings survive their bodily death.

In fact, new and startling evidence for 'survival' had burst upon the world in the year Mrs Crowe's Night Side of Nature appeared. As every student of the paranormal knows, 1848 was the year when a series of extraordinary phenomena began in the house of the Fox family in Hydesville, New York. Mrs Fox asked the neighbours in to hear the loud rapping noises that were keeping the family awake. An exceptionally bold neighbour asked aloud whether the entity was a 'spirit', and a single loud rap answered in the affirmative. The 'spirit' claimed to be the ghost of a peddler who had been murdered in the house by the previous tenant. Now if this had been proved, and the previous tenant hanged, it would have caused a worldwide sensation, and convinced most people of the reality of 'spirits'. What actually happened was that the accused man indignantly protested his innocence, excavations in the cellar failed to reveal the corpse, and it was not until more than half a century later that a skeleton and a peddler's box were discovered accidentally when a wall collapsed in the cellar.

At all events, the poltergeist phenomena in the Fox household led to the foundation of the Spiritualist Church, and within a couple of years, America was full of 'mediums' who summoned up spirits. Scientists reacted with outrage to this new outbreak of 'superstition' – and of course, there can be no doubt that many of these mediums were fraudulent. But anyone who takes the trouble to study the evidence will end up totally convinced that many of them – probably the majority – were genuine.

In my book Afterlife I have jocularly labelled these events 'the invasion of the spirit people'. Which raises the interesting question: why did 'spirits' (if that is what they were) wait until 1848 to begin manifesting themselves en masse? The answer is almost certainly that they didn't. Edward Kelly was practising 'mediumship' more than two centuries earlier, and so were most of the 'magicians' and necromancers from the Witch of Endor to Simon Forman and Robert Fludd. 'Psychics' (as we now call them) have always existed, and the chief characteristic of a psychic is that he or she can see things that other people cannot see.

So what happened in the nineteenth century was not the discovery of the paranormal, but the rediscovery. Of course, the new materialistic science fought it every inch of the way. Auguste Comte declared that human history had passed through three stages: the theological stage, when man invented the gods to try to explain the mysteries of nature, the metaphysical stage, when his intellect begins to overthrow the gods but sets up more subtle 'metaphysical' superstitions in their place, and the positive or scientific, when all the superstitions would vanish like spectres at cockcrow, and man would achieve certainty in the calm light of reason. Comte and his followers – who included most of the scientists of the nineteenth century – were quite certain that all ‘occultism’ could be dismissed as superstition. We, of course, can see clearly that they had simply thrown out the baby with the bathwater.

Yet a few men of science, like Ennemoser, found themselves unable to concur with this simplistic view; they knew that the evidence for the paranormal is overwhelming. Mesmer’s disciple the Marquis de Puységur had also made a discovery of immense importance – hypnosis. He had accidentally placed a shepherd named Victor Race in a trance, and found that in this state he could answer questions and carry out orders just as if wide awake. But Puységur also discovered that Victor Race could read his thoughts while hypnotised, and would obey orders that were not spoken aloud, but given mentally. Again, the medical profession simply declined to accept this observation – in fact, the medical profession continued to regard hypnosis as a delusion for most of the nineteenth century. In the 1840s, a young schoolteacher named Alfred Russel Wallace – co-founder of the theory of evolution by natural selection – tried hypnotising some of his pupils, and was amazed to discover that some of them could read his mind; when one of these was in a trance he could share Wallace’s sense of taste and smell – he grimaced if Wallace tasted salt and smiled if he tasted sugar – and would wince and rub the appropriate part of his body if Wallace stuck a pin in himself. It was these experiments that eventually led Wallace to suggest the founding of a society for investigating paranormal phenomena, a body that eventually became the Society for Psychical Research.

Now when I began to study the ‘paranormal’ in the late 1960s, in order to write a commissioned book about it, I was quite prepared to discover that most of it was pure delusion and wishful thinking. But it was only a matter of weeks before I realised that such a view would simply not hold water. My original theory of the paranormal was that man possesses all kinds of hidden abilities – such as telepathy and a ‘sixth sense’ of danger – which civilisation has suppressed, or allowed to drift into disuse. I was inclined to believe that such phenomena as ghosts and poltergeists are simply manifestations of this ‘unconscious’ part of the mind. This was the view that I expressed in The Occult (1971) and its sequel Mysteries (1978). And I must admit that I was deeply disturbed when, in the early 1980s, I was asked to write a book on poltergeists and reached the conclusion that they are, in fact, ‘spirits’. But I still firmly believe that it is so. I do not regard myself as a ‘spiritualist’, I am not particularly interested in the subject of ‘survival’, and I am not really all that deeply interested in ‘the occult’ as such. Yet I have to acknowledge that twenty years' study of the subject has left me in no doubt whatever that 'spirits' exist, and that the evidence for life-after-death is very powerful indeed.

One more observation, and I shall be ready to return to John Dee and the other subjects of this book. It was Guy Lyon Playfair, the author of The Flying Cow, a study of 'voodoo' in Brazil – where he spent many years – who made me aware that there is a close connection between 'magic' and 'spirits'. I had been willing to accept the reality of both black and white magic, but had been inclined to explain them in terms of the 'unknown' powers of the human mind. But Playfair had seen 'black magic' in operation in Brazil, and had evidence to indicate that the 'spirits' involved are the same entities that in Europe we call poltergeists. The umbanda magician summons them with certain elaborate and precise rituals – the 'spirits' are sticklers for precision – and persuades them to carry out his will. Max Freedom Long had observed the same thing in Hawaii at the turn of the century, and describes it all in a remarkable book called The Secret Science Behind Miracles – an off-putting title for a truly extraordinary piece of work.

When the writer Richard Deacon decided to write a book about John Dee, he consulted the historian Hugh Trevor-Roper. And Trevor-Roper made the following interesting comments:

You have chosen a very difficult subject, and I wonder if you realise how difficult it is. The biographical side of Dee is no doubt straightforward. But to understand his work (largely misunderstood by those who wrote about him) . . . one has to learn a new language to interpret the 'natural magicians' of the pre-Baconian world.

Now since Trevor-Roper is the author of a book called The European Witch-Craze in the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries, we may take it that he does not have the slightest belief in the reality of 'magic' or the paranormal. At the same time, he is too intelligent a man to dismiss Dee as an utterly deluded old man. In some obscure way, he realises that these strange works taken down at the dictation of 'angels' are not mere gobbledegook, but that they require a completely different attitude of mind from that of our post-Baconian era to understand them. If we can go this far with Professor Trevor-Roper, then we shall at least be prepared to understand why Robert Turner is willing to devote so much effort to the study of texts that will strike most of us as totally meaningless.

I, of course, am prepared to venture at least one stage further. A few years ago, I was deeply impressed by a book on the Swedish mystic Emanuel Swedenborg by an American psychiatrist called Wilson Van Dusen. Dusen had been the chief medical officer in the state mental institution at Mendocino, California, and had made the interesting observation that there was a strange similarity between the delusions of patients who were haunted by 'voices'. Most of the 'spirits' seen by his patients seemed to be of a low order; like stupid and naughty children, they would jeer, sneer and repeat silly catch-phrases over and over again. But there was another type of 'spirit' that seemed to belong to an altogether higher order; these were intelligent and sympathetic, and seemed bent on helping the patient. Through his patients, Van Dusen was able to engage in dialogues with these 'spirits' – exactly as Dee engaged in dialogues with 'angels' through Kelly. He also observed that they seemed to correspond very closely to two types of 'spirit' described by Swedenborg – 'high' or 'low' (that is, angelic or diabolic) spirits. The 'low' spirits also seem to correspond to the mischievous spirits evoked by Brazilian umbanda specialists.

I would suggest, then, that once we begin to understand a little of the history of 'magic' and 'occultism', we shall begin to take a new look at figures like Simon Forman, John Dee and Robert Fludd. Even the much-despised science of astrology, as practised by Dee and Forman, may prove to be of far greater significance than we suppose, if the views of scientists like Michel Gauquelin, H. J. Eysenck and Dr Percy Seymour prove to have any foundation in fact.

Finally, let me advise you to take a close look at Simon Forman's account of his encounter with a 'spirit' on page 94, and Robert Fludd's description of his own use of 'geomantic astrology' to assess the character of a young girl (p. 103 et seq.). We may, admittedly, decide to doubt Fludd's word about the accuracy of his assessment, since the anecdote occurs in the introduction to one of his own books. But why should Forman bother to write such an account in his private diary – meant only for his own eyes – if he was lying? Such questions as this struck me many times as I read the typescript of this book, and left me with an increasingly strong feeling that what is being described is not some kind of delusion, but simply an order of reality with which I am personally unacquainted. I do not possess the key to many of the mysteries in this book, and I am inclined to doubt whether anyone in the twentieth century is qualified to understand them completely. But even without the advice of Professor Trevor-Roper, I would be prepared to believe that there is a great deal here that deserves the most careful and sympathetic study.

Introduction

This book is intended to be read on two interrelated levels. Firstly, it represents the crystallisation of over twenty years of research into Elizabethan magical practice, incorporating several highly important theurgic tracts together with extensive commentaries, analytical notes and textual annotations. Secondly, in order to invigorate the general content of the work and banish the gloomy spectre of dull academic presentation, we provide a necessary insight into the personalities of the colourful and multi-talented Masters of these curious Arts. These inclusions have not been injected purely for biographical reasons, but rather in the hope that our efforts towards furnishing a better understanding of these men and their times will lend credence and authority to the work of the Elizabethan Magus.

My first attempt towards unravelling the mysteries of Elizabethan magic are recorded in my work The Heptarchia Mystica of John Dee,<sup>1</sup> which sets forth a system of planetary Invocations hitherto unparalleled in the history of occultism. The present book can be seen as an amplification of this primary volume, yet, pursuing the matter to a much greater depth, contrasting Dee's more advanced techniques with those of his contemporaries. Here the reader will find John Dee's three major magical texts set out in their entirety, which coupled with what has already been accomplished in The Heptarchia represent the sum total of magical manuscripts emanating from this source.

At this point I feel it necessary to digress from the general theme of this introduction in order to tender my views upon what has been recently written on the present subject, with particular reference to the so-called Enochian System.

First and foremost amongst four books that have come to my attention is a work entitled The Enochian Evocation of Dr John Dee, edited and translated by Geoffrey James.<sup>2</sup> This volume purports to be an accurate rendering of the four important digests of Dee's 'Spiritual Diaries' contained in the British Library Sloane collection.<sup>3</sup> Unfortunately, Geoffrey James's book is from the outset marred by elements of pure speculation and, more seriously, suffers greatly from highly inadequate and inaccurate Latin translations. An example of James at his worst serves to illustrate my point:

(James's translation of the final marginal note in John Dee's De Heptarchia Mystica)

See also the sayings of Ephodius where, concerning Adamanta, in which diverse signs are given for responding to God. See Epiphanius concerning precious stones and their meaning. See his writings concerning the Unim<sup>4</sup> and Thummim. See the book received at Trebonae. It is written in the books of Epiphanius that the vision that appeared to Moses on the mountain, the laws that were given were expressed in sapphires.<sup>5</sup>

(cf. Christopher Upton's translation of the above passage taken from my edition of The Heptarchia Mystica<sup>6</sup>)

See Suidas on the word Ephod [where he writes of] the diamond in which, on giving of various signs, the answers from God proceeded.

See Epiphanius with the same argument on precious stones.

See the Scriptures on Urim and Thummim.

See the books received at Trebona.

It is written in the law [says Epiphanius] that the vision which appeared to Moses on the Mount and the law given was expressed in a sapphire, or the Memorabilium of Mizaldus, cent. 4, no. 94.<sup>7</sup>

When one compares the above translation with that given by James it is immediately evident that the American version is seriously in error. We see the word Ephod<sup>8</sup> – an ornamental girdle worn by the Hebrew priests – rendered as a proper noun 'Ephodius'; omissions, contractions and inversions abound – together with the frequent interchange of plural for singular. In short, this misleading translation adds considerable confusion to an inherently complex subject.

Furthermore, as Geoffrey James omits any example of Dee's Latin, the scholarly reader is denied the opportunity of judging for himself.

It will be seen that in the present volume, and all that I have written previously regarding these matters, samples of the original Latin have been included to avoid these defects.

Finally, one can only wonder at the use of the word Evocation in the title of James's book, a term widely associated with demonology and the necromantic arts, rather than the angelically orientated word Invocation.

Curiosity prompted my recent purchase of two books (expensive paperbacks) by Gerald Schueler: Enochian Magic – A Practical Manual, and its sequel: An Advanced Guide to Enochian Magick.<sup>9</sup> With cover captions declaring 'The Angelic Language Revealed', 'A Complete Manual of Angelic Magic', we are led to expect something rather more than an unsavoury mixture of the highly synthetic techniques of the Golden Dawn and Aleister Crowley's Astrum Argentum.

To add to the overall confusion of this text the author sees fit to introduce elements of Eastern mysticism; sex magic; the Whore of Babylon; and directions for the ritual use of cupcakes – yes, cupcakes!<sup>10</sup>

In the introductory passages of Schueler's text John Dee is referred to as 'Sir'<sup>11</sup> (he was never knighted) and we are informed of how Edward Kelly 'robbed Dee of what little money he had left, helped Dee's wife to pack her bags [and, with her] left Dee never to return': a fact history fails to record. (Dee's third wife Jane remained with him throughout her life. She died of plague in 1605. Kelly met his death during 1595.)

In other sections of Schueler's books we are introduced to the 'Ninety-two Governors' of the Aethers; all other sources, including Crowley, give ninety-one.<sup>12</sup> And, in addition, a Tarot deck of seventy-two Keys rather than the traditional seventy-eight.

To list the errors and misconceptions contained in this lamentable volume would be both tedious and unnecessary. To the intelligent and informed reader they will appear only too obvious; for those embarking on such studies for the first time, a perilous pitfall.

It is hoped that the above comments will serve their purpose in guiding the reader towards a more accurate understanding of John Dee's Angelic Magic, and to some measure, prevent his enraged spirit from wreaking vengeance on his literary assassins.

In contrast to the mediocrity of the works so far encountered, Gerald Suster's book John Dee Essential Readings<sup>13</sup> can be recommended as a scholarly and erudite representation of a number of important tracts written between 1556 and the beginning of the seventeenth century. Apart from the author's over-reliance on the magical experiments of Aleister Crowley<sup>14</sup> and the Golden Dawn, I have only one criticism of his digest. This concerns a factual error which occurs in Chapter 8, where an item which claims to have been taken from Dee's Liber Logaeth (Sloane MS. 3189) in fact proves to be an extract from Liber Mysteriorum Quinti Appendix (the Appendix to Dee's Fifth Book of the Mysteries – Sloane MS. 3188). The entry is for Sunday, 8 May 1583 and marked by a crude marginal sketch of a headsman's axe. It is as follows:

Dee: As concerning the Vision which yesternight was presented (unlooked for) to the sight of EK as he sat a supper with me, in my hall, I meane the appearing of the very sea, and many ships thereon, and the cutting of the hed of a woman, by a tall blak man, what we are to imagin thereof?

Ur[iel]: The one did signifie the provisions of forrayn powers against the welfare of this land: which they shortly put into practice. The other, the death of the Queene of Scotts. It is not long unto it.

The Liber Logaeth – apart from a single flyleaf note and a few minor marginal items – contains not a vestige of text, being comprised solely of a series of elaborate alphabetic and numerical squares.<sup>15</sup>

Returning to the present work, I must emphasise that in all instances we have been at pains to ensure that each element of the text has received our in-depth attention. Placing our reliance on original sources, records and official documents, we have done our utmost to avoid the errors perpetuated in former works of this nature. Where translations from the Latin have proved necessary, they have been executed with special care to provide an accurate and intelligible rendering. In addition, for the benefit of classical scholars wishing to make their own comparisons, we have appended examples of the original and unadulterated texts in each instance.

In preparing the typescript upon which the core of this book is based, I have utilised the following manuscripts:

Libri Mysteriorum, Books I–V (1581–1583)

Liber Mysteriorum Sextus et Sanctus (1583)

Libri Mysteriorum, Books VII – XVIII (1583–1587)

48 Claves Angelicae (1584)

Liber Scientiae, Auxilii et Victoriae Terrestris (1585)<sup>16</sup>

A Book of Supplications and Invocations (date unknown)

I have also made use of Elias Ashmole's transcriptions and notes on the above,<sup>17</sup> and Meric Casaubon's printed version of John Dee's Spiritual Diaries VII–XVIII.<sup>18</sup> Other documents, printed works and spurious manuscripts referred to during textual preparation will be found annexed to the relevant sections.

The same care which has been devoted to the textual information presented in this volume is also extended to the artwork. Whenever possible we have reproduced diagrams and engravings in facsimile; where we have been unable to employ original material due to a particular manuscript's poor state of preservation or general illegibility, items have been redrawn from source-works and treble-checked for accuracy. Illustrations from spurious texts not specifically intrinsic to – but relevant by way of explanation of – complete manuscripts, can be found in: Appendix B.

As I have mentioned earlier in this Introduction, much of the material contained in this book can be seen as an extension of the preliminary ideas set forth in my Heptarchia Mystica. Where the major theme of the Heptarchial text can be unerringly designated Planetary in nature (The Sevenfold Kingdom), the later Dee manuscripts that form the bulk of the present work can, with equal certainty, be regarded as Elemental. This statement, which some 'authorities' may deem to be at variance with certain established traditions, I defend unreservedly in the commentaries I have supplied in section III.

Since the turn of the century occultists have attached tremendous importance to the aspect of Dee's Angel Magic known as Enochian (after the biblical Enoch), in some instances with little justification. The essence of this 'system' centres on the existence of forty-eight Keys<sup>19</sup> (or Calls) written in what is claimed to be the language of the Angels (a laborious account regarding the reception of these tongue-twisting ejaculations can be found in the Dee manuscripts which emerged between 1583 and 1584).

The clairvoyant abilities of Edward Kelly (Dee's scribe and assistant) form the rock on which these strange Apocalyptic communications stand. In a manner which – due to lack of information – is little understood, Kelly transmitted verbally, or indicated by some other method, each word of the Invocations (in most cases) letter by letter backwards. Kelly's visions were granted while sitting or kneeling at a specially constructed table, known as the 'Holy Table' or 'Table of Practice'<sup>20</sup> and gazing intently into the shew stone (one of Dee's various crystals).

English translations of the forty-eight Keys were obtained by a similar process and set down in a manner that facilitates direct comparison between the Angelic language and our own tongue. An example extracted from Dee's spiritual 'action' recorded at Cracovia (Poland) on Thursday 12 July 1584 serves to illustrate the systematic method he used to tabulate these Invocations:

| Angelic | English   | Pronunciation  |
|----------------|------------------|-----------------------|
| MADRIAX        | O you heavens    | Madriax               |
| DSPRAF         | which dwell      | Ds praf               |
| LIL            | In the first air | Lil                   |
| CHISMICAOLZ    | are mighty       | Chis Micāolz          |
| SAANIR         | in the parts     | Sa ā nir              |
| CAOSGO         | of the earth     | Ca ōs go              |
| OD             | and              | Od                    |
| FISIS          | execute          | Fisis                 |
| BALZIZRAS      | the judgement    | Balzizras             |
| IAIDA          | of the highest   | Ia -ida <sup>21</sup> |

These lofty and sophisticated utterances seem far removed from the somewhat crude and archaic ritual of Dee's Heptarchial 'grimoire', but nevertheless owe their very existence to this primal and embryonic work:

O noble Prince (N) and by what name else soever thou art called, or mayst truly and duly be called: to whose peculiar Government, Charge and Disposition, Office and Princely Dignity doth appertain thee (N etc.)

In the name of Almighty God, the King of Kings, and for his honour and Glory to be advanced to my faithful service. I require thee, O Noble Prince (N) to come presently, and to show thyself to my perfect and sensible eye judgement, with thy Ministers servants and subjects, to my comfort and help, in Wisdom and Power according to the properties of thy noble office:

COME, O Noble Prince (N) I say, COME, Amen. Pater noster, etc.<sup>22</sup>

The Enochian (or Angelic) language has been the subject of considerable discussion (and conjecture) over the past few decades. Scholars of various academic standings have hotly debated whether the transmitted text represents a valid tongue, a cipher, or is merely elaborate gibberish invented by Edward Kelly. Most important amongst various offerings that have come to print in recent times is The Complete Enochian Dictionary by Dr Donald C. Laycock.<sup>23</sup> This laudable work can at once be seen to be an honest and erudite attempt to solve some of the mysteries surrounding Dee's Enochian. Laycock sets out his case in full: approaching each element of the problem with methodical care he establishes several important points, not the least of which is the English-like nature of the 'language'. He also aptly dismisses the possibility of Dee's magic being a complex cover for a system of encipherment – I have written elsewhere of my own inclination towards this point of view.<sup>24</sup>

Yet, as one might have expected from the statement which Laycock makes in his second paragraph: 'strangest of all is that we still do not know whether it is a natural language or an invented language – or whether it is, perhaps, the language of the angels',<sup>25</sup> and despite his employment of computer analysis and other sophisticated techniques, the matter remains largely unsolved and inconclusive.

Finally, while not wishing to detract from the overall value of Dr Laycock's otherwise highly commendable work, a number of textual errors and inconsistencies were noted.<sup>26</sup>

With regard to the pronunciation of individual Angelic words, the only real guide on which one can rely with any degree of certainty is that contained within Dee's own notes on the subject. Several alternative methods of vocalising the Calls have been generated in modern times, the best-known examples emanating from the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn via the prolific – if over-complicated – pen of MacGregor Mathers (1854–1918), and the work of Aleister Crowley.

The Golden Dawn method – from which Crowley’s version is directly derived – entails the insertion of the next following Hebrew vowel between each consonant of a given Enochian word; therefore, treating each letter of each word separately. Thus: E after B (bEth), I after G (gImel), A after D (dAleth), and so forth. This highly synthetic manner of dealing with Enochian words is inconsistent, cumbersome, and above all, far removed from the magic of Dee and Kelly.<sup>27</sup>

Before moving on to the final section of this introduction, I feel it would be appropriate to make mention of certain spurious Angelic names that have been added to the Enochian Hierarchy by later commentators.

Foremost amongst these often meaningless constructions are the ‘Three Names of God Almighty coming forth from The Thirty Aethers’:

1. LAZodaPeLameDaZodaZODaZodILaZodUOLaTaZoda
PeKALaTaNuVaDaZodaBeReTa.
2. IROAIAEIIAKOITaXEAEOHeSIOIITEAAIE.
3. LaNuNuZodaTaZodODaPeXaHEMAOANuNuPeRePe NuRAISAGIXa.

These names certainly do not originate with Dee and, although the pronunciation pattern is pure Golden Dawn, the only reference that I have been able to find regarding these fabrications is in The Equinox, Vol. 1, No. 8. I therefore conclude that the names were an invention of Aleister Crowley, or a member of his Order.

The method by which these ‘names’ were constructed will be immediately obvious to anyone familiar with the sequence of the Thirty Aires or Aethers set down by Dee and Kelly.

It is only necessary to write the title of each Aether in their naturally occurring order – from LIL to TEX – one beneath the other, and read down each column adding the relevant Hebrew vowels as required.

At the risk of proving tedious to the informed reader, but in an effort to elucidate upon the matter for those embarking on these studies for the first time, I tender the graphic explanation given on page 8.

Four further names can be found in both the papers of the Golden Dawn and the Equinox publications of Aleister Crowley. They are held to be the titles of the ‘Four Supreme Elemental Kings’. For reasons best known to himself, Dr Laycock ascribes the origination of these names to Dee – despite the fact that no extant manuscript of the Libri Mysteriorum series or any of the condensations recorded in Sloane MS. 3191 make mention of these.

 coming forth from The Thirty Aethers:

|                                                                                                | D   | E   | S   |        |
|                                                                                                | Z   | A   | A   |        |
|                                                                                                | B   | A   | G   |        |
|                                                                                                | R   | I   | I   |        |
|                                                                                                | T   | E   | X   | (30th) |

For the truth of the matter we need look no further than the Golden Dawn paper entitled Document X, The Book of the Concourse of the Forces.<sup>28</sup> Here we find full instructions regarding the formation of these names: TAHAOELOG (Air), THAHEBYOBEAATANUM (Water), THAHAAOTAHE (Earth), and OHOOOHAATON (Fire).<sup>29</sup>

The method employed to generate the above names is based entirely on the manipulation of the letters and numbers contained in the outer circle of John Dee's Principal Seal: SIGILLUM DEI AEMETH (The Sign of Truth, the Name of God).<sup>30</sup> Even so, Mathers had to resort to some highly questionable manoeuvres and distortions of the Dee/Kelly system to arrive at these uncalled-for additions.

In my treatment of the three major Dee manuscripts (48 Claves Angelicae, Liber Scientiae Auxilii et Victoriae Terrestris, and A Book of Supplications and Invocations), I have adopted the following approach:

1. A short discourse on the life of John Dee, together with an account of the circumstances and procedures leading to the construction of these texts.
2. A presentation of the above manuscripts in their entirety with translations from the Latin where applicable.
3. Commentaries on each manuscript.

In addition I have appended a series of explanatory diagrams, an expansion of Dee's Liber Scientiae Auxilii et Victoriae Terrestris (for which I am indebted to the scholarship of Robin E. Cousins and the fine artwork of Charles Cattell), an account of Liber Logaeth, and an example of the Latin text of A Booke of Supplications and Invocations. These offerings, together with what has already been published in my Heptarchia Mystica, represent the entire range of John Dee's accessible magical writings that have come down to us.

At the beginning of this Introduction I made mention of the binary nature of the ensuing work. To accomplish this end we have annexed a series of 'brief lives', in an attempt to present manuscript material in context, and to provide some account of the prevailing intellectual and social climate of the Tudor era.

In an effort to avoid needless repetition of what can already be found in print, we have whenever possible directed our attention towards lesser-known, or in many cases hitherto unknown, episodes in the lives of our subjects. Here you will find biographical details regarding John Dee's principal seer Edward Kelly; the enigmatic Dr Simon Forman; the sophisticated Rosicrucian and Kabbalistic thinker Robert Fludd; Dee's elusive Welsh cousin Thomas Jones (alias Twm Sion Cati); and not least the much quoted, yet little understood, Robert Turner of Holshott.

Much of the above information is presented for the first time in print, especially with regard to Patricia Shore Turner's work on Thomas Jones of Tregaron, and Robin E. Cousins' detailed analysis of Turner's life and literary achievements. In both instances the authors have provided the reader with painstaking digests of all extant material, and in so doing, bridge several long-neglected historical chasms.

It is hoped that these inclusions will prove of absorbing interest to those who wish to form an overall picture of these fascinating times, so necessary towards a complete and in-depth understanding of Elizabethan magic.

- 8 The word Ephod is derived from aphad, to tie, to fasten, to gird. In use the girdle passed in various ways across the body of the High Priest and finally over the shoulders with the ends hanging to the ground. Where the Ephod passed over the shoulders were attached two large precious stones, on which the names of the twelve Tribes of Israel were engraved, six on each. When David, Saul, or Joshua wished to consult with God they employed the mysterious Urim and Thummim (perhaps black and white stones), but if they failed to obtain an answer they turned to the High Priest in order to invoke the oracular powers of the Ephod. 'Saul inquired of the Lord,' and that, 'the Lord answered him not, neither by dreams, nor by Urim, nor by prophets.' . . . consequently (on the direction of the Urim) he put on the Ephod (I Sam. 28:6).
- See Calmet's Dictionary of the Holy Bible, Charles Taylor, London, 1845, pp. 381-2.
- Manly P. Hall also ascribes similar powers to the Ephod: 'when the High Priest asked certain questions, they (the stones of the Ephod) emitted a celestial radiance. When the onyx on the right shoulder was illuminated it signified that Jehovah answered the question of the High Priest in the affirmative, and when the left one gleamed, it indicated a negative answer to the query.' 12 The term 'Governors' used in this context seems peculiar when one considers Dee's Latin title for the column of these ninety-one names given in Liber Scientiae Auxilii et Victoriae Terrestris (his work on the thirty Aethers or Aires, 'The Book of Earthly Science, of Help, and of Victory'):

'91 Partium Terra Nomina Divinitus imposita'

(91 Names of the Parts of the Earth divinely given. Sloane MS. 3191).

The form utilised by Schueler seems to have originated with Crowley – see The Equinox Vols. 7 and 8 – who probably never saw Dee's original manuscript and relied on Casaubon's printed version to be found in A True and Faithful Relation of What passed for many Yeeres Between Dr John Dee . . . and Some Spirits, ed. Meric Casaubon, London, 1659.

21 This short extract from the Call of the Thirty Aethers or Aires is taken from John Dee's Eleventh Book of the Mysteries (when taken in strict sequence) but is entitled: Libri Septimi Apertorij Cracoviensis Mystici Sabbatici, Pars Quarta (it begins 23 May 1584 and ends 12 July following). The column I have headed 'Pronunciation' does not specifically fulfil this function, but furnishes the reader with some guidance and illustrates the manner in which words are divided and vowels stressed.

29 In his Equinox magazine Vol. 1, No. 7, Crowley renders the first, second and fourth names: TAHAÖELOJ, THAHEBYOBEEATAN, OHOOOHAATAN respectively, and gives no instructions for their use (apart from a caution against the light use of these names). The Golden Dawn also remains silent in this matter.

John Dee

The Sage of Mortlake 1527–1608

"We are such stuff as dreams are made on and our little life is rounded with a sleep."

(Prospero, in The Tempest, Act IV, Scene i)

In recent times much has been written in an effort to extol the virtues and talents of the celebrated Elizabethan Hermetic Scientist, Doctor John Dee. In this twentieth-century reassessment of Dee we can observe the slow, yet certain, re-emergence of a powerful and piercing intellect long neglected by academic posterity.

Much of Dee's former obscurity stems from his involvement in what is now known as occult practice and a misguided interpretation of the role of the Renaissance Magus. Heavily biased and ill-informed commentators, from the self-righteous Meric Casaubon<sup>1</sup> to the woolly-minded and credulous Thomas Smith<sup>2</sup> (and others), have done much to undermine the character of one of Tudor England's greatest worthies.

Amongst Dee's most recent biographers the work of the late Dr Peter French remains without parallel. In his John Dee – The World of an Elizabethan Magus<sup>3</sup> Dr French sets forth a scholarly account of the life and achievements of Dee against the background of Renaissance Angel magic and the Kabbalah. This method of portrayal succeeds admirably, and does much to disperse the air of charlatanism that has long sullied Dee's reputation.

In her learned series of books devoted to the philosophy of the New Era, the late Dame Frances Yates also flies to Dee's defence. Defining him as 'the leader of the Elizabethan Renaissance', she states: 'the old prejudices against him as a ludicrous figure still subsist, though very much diminished in force as it becomes more and more apparent that Dee had contacts with nearly everyone of importance in the age.'<sup>4</sup>

Frances Yates' statement is well borne out by the innumerable references in Dee's Diaries to such associates as: Gerard Mercator, Humphrey Gilbert, Martin Frobisher, Walter Raleigh, John Davis, Sir John Hawkins and the Queen herself. When one adds to this impressive list the host of foreign dignitaries, philosophers and mathematicians known personally to Dee, one cannot fail to gain some understanding of his sphere of influence.

Although John Dee claimed descent from the Welsh King Roderick the Great, his life began in fairly humble circumstances. Born on 13 July 1527, Dee entered a world on the verge of religious upheaval. The split with Rome was imminent and great and far-reaching changes were shortly to occur. For some of these revolutionary changes Dee was destined to be the instrument.

His parents, Roland Dee, a gentleman server at the court of Henry VIII, and his wife Joanna (daughter of William Wild) lavished great affection on their son, and although of slender income decided that he should receive a formal education. To this end he was sent to Chelmsford Grammar School, from where he passed in 1542, at the age of 15, to St John's College, Cambridge. He became Bachelor of Arts in 1544 and a Fellow in 1545. Later, after its foundation by Henry VIII, he became a founder fellow of Trinity College. Dee's brilliant academic career had begun.

In his twentieth year (1547) Dee embarked on the first of his many journeys to the Continent. On his return to Cambridge he took his Master's degree; but deciding to further his education abroad he left the following year and travelled to Louvain (Belgium) where he remained in such famous company as Gemma Frisius, Abraham Ortelius, Finaeus, Mercator and Pedro Nuñez, until 1550. Dee's travels then took him to Paris where (at the age of 23) he lectured on Euclid's Theorems to huge audiences.

On his return to England (1551) he secured the rectory of Upton-on-Severn in exchange for the annual pension granted to him under the Royal patronage of Edward VI. Dee had earlier (and wisely) dedicated two books to the young King.

After the untimely death of Edward (1553) and the accession of Mary Tudor (Bloody Mary), Dee's fortunes took a turn for the worse. In June 1555, he was thrown into prison and charged with treason and 'lewd and vain practices of calculating [casting nativities] or conjuring'. This imprisonment lasted only a few months, being almost immediately cleared of the first charge, but held for a time under custody to Bishop Bonner 'for examination in religious matters'. Dee conducted his own case with great authority and eloquence afforded by his vast and detailed knowledge of ecclesiastical matters, and in due course the charge of heresy was also dropped. His fellow prisoner Barthlet Grene was not so fortunate: he was burnt at the stake on the same accusations.

Although Dee's attention had been directed towards the Kabbalah, alchemy, astrology and angelic magic for some time, much of his reputation as a magician stemmed from his knowledge of the mechanical arts. During his period at Cambridge he was made responsible for the production of several classical plays. To enhance the performances he introduced various 'special effects' of a nature largely unwitnessed. These 'marvels', which made objects appear, disappear, and men fly through the air, although accomplished by way of levers, pulleys, wheels and such like, were in some cases held to have been achieved by the help of spirits 'whereat was great wondering and many vain reports spread abroad of the means how that was effected'.

On the morning of 17 November 1588 Mary died, and the Roman Church lost its last true foothold in England, regaining tenure only briefly during the reign of James II (1685–8). For John Dee and others of like mind a new age had truly begun: an age in which he was able to spread his philosophical and scientific wings without the hindrance of Papal restriction, and free from fear of religious persecution, to indulge his interests in alchemy and Kabbalistic Angel-magic.

The young Elizabeth summoned Dee to court and requested that he cast a horoscope in order to decide the most auspicious date for her coronation, which he set for 15 January 1589. The long and successful life of Elizabeth I will be seen by some as a fitting testimonial to her Astrologer. Dee remained devoted to his Queen throughout her reign, refusing to leave the Royal Service, despite the high honours and monetary awards offered to him by foreign princes. And although Elizabeth did not grant him a regular living until 1595 (the Wardenship of Manchester College) as a token of her esteem, she several times bestowed upon him gifts of money.

Dee married three times.<sup>5</sup> His first wife was Katherine Constable, the widow of a London grocer, who lived with him from 1565 until her death during 1574. The identity of Dee's second wife is unknown. He married her in 1575, but to his great loss, she died in the spring of the following year. In 1578 Dee took his third wife Jane Fromond, lady in waiting to the wife of Lord Admiral Howard. She bore all of his ten children (some authorities record eight) and remained at his side until her death by plague in 1605 (three years before his own death).

Shortly before 1570 Dee settled in Mortlake in Richmond-upon-Thames, at the house left to him by his mother. It was here in the rambling assembly of rooms and outbuildings that he gathered together what has been termed 'Elizabethan England's greatest Library'. His collection comprised almost three thousand printed books and one thousand manuscripts in various languages. The house suited Dee's needs admirably, for in addition to his literary collection, it adequately accommodated his many scientific instruments and afforded space for laboratory experimentation. Frequented by the learned of the age, Dee's home became an important centre for scientific thought and the furtherance of ideas. Apart from his various stays on the Continent Dee was to live out the remainder of his life in Mortlake, and was buried there in 1608 at the church of St Mary the Virgin.<sup>6</sup>

Any attempt even to summarise the extent and impact of John Dee's tremendous contributions to the navigational arts, mathematics, geography, philosophy, astronomy, and scientific thought of his age is quite beyond the scope of the present volume. It is hoped that some who have read this far will be persuaded to investigate these matters in further depth, and to this end I wholeheartedly recommend the works of the late Peter J. French<sup>7</sup> and E. G. R. Taylor.<sup>8</sup>

Dee's knowledge was not, it seems, won easily as he recalls of his earlier years at Cambridge:

In the years 1543, 1544, 1545, I was so vehemently bent to studie, that for those yeares I did inviolably keepe this order; only to sleepe four houres every night; to allow to meate and drink (and some refreshing after) two houres every day; and of the other eighteen houres all (except the tyme of going to and being at divine service) was spent in my studies and learning.<sup>9</sup>

Dee's contributions to scientific and antiquarian literature were extensive, but with the exception of his Hieroglyphic Monad,<sup>10</sup> few of his works remain in print. Yet, like his Queen, Dee has received some degree of immortality through the writings of William Shakespeare. The Tempest<sup>11</sup> (written after Dee's death) indelibly engraves the archetypal image of the Elizabethan magus in the form of Prospero. Who but Dee could have formed so adequate a basis for the Bard's portrayal of the benign Agrippan sage, served by the dainty spirit Ariel? Who but Dee would so fervently wish to control the mariners' hostile and reluctant elements?

And promise you calm seas, auspicious gales,
And sail so expeditious, that shall catch
Your royal fleet far off. [Aside to Ariel] My Ariel, chick,
That is thy charge. Then to the elements
Be free, and fare thou well!

Prospero's final speech, The Tempest, Act V, Scene i.

Likewise, in a speech given by Oberon in A Midsummer Night's Dream (Act II, Scene ii), Queen Elizabeth is ensouled as the 'Virgin Queen':

Flying between the cold moon and the earth,
 Cupid all arm'd: a certain aim he took
 At a fair vestal throned by the west,
 And loos'd his love-shaft smartly from his bow,
 As it should pierce a hundred thousand hearts:
 But I might see young Cupid's fiery shaft
 Quench'd in the chaste beams of the wat'ry moon,
 And the imperial vot'ress passed on,
 In maiden meditation fancy-free.<sup>12</sup>

Although Dee's experiments with Angelic Magic began in his Cambridge days, it was not until his settlement in Mortlake that any real developments were to take place. His methodology and general approach to the subject seems to have centred on the use of various crystals and mirrors and the employment of earnest (Christian) prayer, coupled with the techniques set forth in Cornelius Agrippa's Three Books of Occult Philosophy.<sup>13</sup> As Dee (apart from one unaccountable instance) apparently lacked clairvoyant ability, he employed a number of Seers or Mediums in an effort to make contact with divine beings; he himself acting as recorder of the visions received.

From the records that have come down to us, it is obvious that Dee was both dissatisfied and dismayed with these early attempts to communicate with the Angels. The content of the received dialogue, lack of true consistency and general inferiority of the supposed communications all pointed towards deception on the part of the Seer. This suspicion was finally realised when Barnabas Saul (a lay-preacher and occultist), one of Dee's earliest scryers, first saw visions in the crystal and later (after some involvement with the law, perhaps on charges of sorcery), claimed that he had seen nothing.

This episode did not, however, dampen Dee's enthusiasm in his quest for contact with the intelligences of higher spheres. And shortly, to his own satisfaction at least, his ideal was to be achieved.

On 10 March 1582, Dee records in his Liber Mysteriorum Primus (The First Book of the Mysteries):

One Mr Edward Talbot cam to my howse, and he being willing and desyrous to see or show some thing of spirituall practise, wold have had me to have done some thing there in. And I truely excused my self therin as not in the vulgarly accounted Magik, neyther studies, or exercised: But confessed my self long tyme to have been desirous to have help in my philosophi-call studies through the company and information of the blessed Angels of God. And there uppon, I brought forth to him, my stone in the frame (which was given me of a frende) and I sayed to him, that I was credibly informed, that to it (after a sort) were answerable Aliqui Angeli boni [Some Good Angels].

This encounter was to immediately cement a long-lasting relationship.<sup>14</sup> On the same day Talbot (shortly to become Kelly), established contact with what Dee undoubtedly believed to be the Archangel Uriel. Following this an interchange takes place where Dee is informed (via Talbot), that the Archangels Michael and Raphael are also 'answerable' to the stone. Further (highly satisfactory, to Dee) discourse then took place regarding Dee's mystical book SOYGA, which was held to have been concerned with the revelations of various Angels before the 'Fall from Paradise'.

After five months in Dee's employ, Talbot – somewhat abruptly – changed his name to 'Kelly'. The reason for this is unknown, but Dee always referred to him as E(dward)K(elly) henceforth.<sup>15</sup>

Kelly was almost 27 when he entered Dee's service (for the fee of £50 per annum). Although born in Worcester, he was by nationality Irish and the son of an apothecary. Little is known regarding Kelly's movements prior to his arrival at Mortlake, but it is clear that he had already gained some reputation as a magician, and had involved himself in the nefarious art of necromancy.<sup>16</sup>

The early Angelic operations of Dee and Kelly gradually gained momentum. Almost daily they sought contact with an ever growing number of spiritual entities, and each 'action' (Dee's term for his dealings with spirits) was recorded in minutest detail. Shortly they were to receive instructions (from the spirits) regarding the construction of certain items of magical equipment. These requisites comprised the Holy Table (or Table of Practice); the Sigillum Dei Aemeth (or Sign of Truth), a complex wax pentacle nine inches in diameter; and the Seven Ensigns of Creation: seven talismans to be used in conjunction with the Holy Table. (At first Dee is told to construct the 'Ensigns' from purified-tin, but is later instructed to paint them directly upon the Table in blue lines and red letters.) Finally, a Lamine (or magical breastplate) of parchment or paper is described. (See Appendix B for further details of these ritual items.)

A magical ring, 'of the finest gold', is also mentioned. It was to have a square or oblong bezel engraved with the name PELE (Hebrew: 'He who works wonders') and a central symbol. Although Dee is told of the ring (via Kelly) 'WITHOUT THIS THOU SHALT DO NOTHING',<sup>17</sup> it remains uncertain whether it was ever manufactured.

A new crystal – said to have been obtained from an Angel – was to be set in a frame of gold upon the Sigillum Dei Aemeth (a red silken cloth lay between), which in turn reposed upon the Holy Table. Four smaller versions of Sigillum Aemeth were – protected by wooden cases – placed beneath the legs of the Table.

From the extant manuscripts it is difficult to discover the exact manner in which this apparatus was meant to have been employed. It has even been suggested that Dee and Kelly never made practical use of the equipment they had so carefully constructed, being unable to understand the principle of its operation. Yet it is my personal belief that the Holy Table and other items were in fact employed in some of the later Actions, and evidence exists that along with the Books of the Mysteries, the Table, shew-stone and Sigillum Aemeth were often taken with them to the Continent.

After the emergence of the Heptarchial system of Planetary magic, events took a turn in another, quite different, direction. On 26 March 1582 Kelly produced an alphabet of twenty-one characters relating to what he held to be the language of the Angels. Dee records the reception of the alphabet in his Fifth Book of the Mysteries:

(E)dward (K)elly - he sheweth a boke, as he did before (all gold) and it is truth; whose truth shall endure for ever.

E.K: The leaves of the boke, are all full of square places, and thos Square place have Characters in them, some more than other: and they are all written with cullor, like blud, not yet dry. 49 square spaces, every way, were on every leaf. Which made in all, 2401, Square places. He wiped his finger on the top of the Table, and there cam out above the Table Certayn Characters enclosed in no lines: but standing by themselves, and points between them. He pointed orderly to them with his finger, and loked toward the skryer at every pointing.

Me [a female spirit of the Moon]: Note what they are.

(a row of twenty-one characters are given here. See p. 22 for their final forms)

(D)ee: They are noted.

E.K: He toke from under the Table, a thing like a great globe, and set that in the chayre and uppon that Globe layd a boke. He pointeth to the Characters: and cownteth them with his finger, being 21, and begynning from the right hand, towards the left. He putteth the Crown of gold, from his hed: and Layeth it, on the Table. His here appereth yellow. He maketh cursy: and from under the Table taketh a rod of gold in his hand, being divided into three distinctions.

He putteth the ende of the rod on the first of the Characters, and sayeth Pa and there appeared in english, or latin letters, Pa: he sayd Veh: and there appeared Veh in writting.<sup>18</sup>

THE ANGELIC ALPHABET

Thus each letter of the Angelic Alphabet was named and assigned to its Latin equivalent. The first series of Characters (which must have been written down by Kelly) were crudely drawn, but later (6 May 1583) they appeared in 'yellow cullor' on one of the pages of Liber Mysteriorum. By drawing over these ghostly outlines in ink, Kelly arrived at the final highly stylised form of the Alphabet.<sup>19</sup>

Dee notes (on his return from London):

But it is to be noted, that, when E. K. could not aptly imitate the forme of the Characters, or letters, as they were shewed: that then they appered down on his paper with a light yellow cullor, which he drew the blak uppon, and so the yellow cullor disapearing there remayned onely the shape of the letter in blak.

Between 29 March and 6 April 1583 Dee and Kelly were engaged in writing the first section of the Angelicly transmitted book Liber Logaeth. This work (also known as The Book of Enoch, Liber Mysteriorum Sextus (et Sanctus)<sup>20</sup> and The Book of the Speech of God) consisted of firstly a series of Invocations in the Enochian or Angelic language, and secondly a large number (49×49) of squares containing letters and, in some instances, numbers. The exact method in which the book was delivered is, to say the least, confusing. Kelly's visions (as they are recorded) seem to indicate that each leaf of the book was held before him by the spirits and he read from them in turn, letter by letter. But as the actions run on he (after gaining permission from the spirits) forms words such as: 'Amidan gah lesco van gedon amchih ax or mandol cramsa ne dah vadge lesгамph ar: mara panosch aschedh or samhampore asco pacadabaah . . .', which Dee would have to record without knowledge of the involved spelling. Perhaps as this earlier version of the Angelic language lacked an English translation, Dee simply wrote the words as he heard them and disregarded their exact structure.

The Angels commanded that the entire Liber Logaeth must be written within forty days, and it was in fact completed on 6 May 1583, thirty-nine days after the reception of the first of these primary Angelic Invocations. Although the copy of Liber Logaeth (in Kelly's hand) is written in ordinary Latin letters, the Angels further instructed that the book was to be rewritten in the characters of the Angelic Alphabet and bound in silver – I can find no evidence to suggest that this was ever done, and on 16 August 1584 Dee writes: 'God he knoweth, and the Heavens, that I did the best I could, to have had the book silvered.'<sup>21</sup>

It seems that in some unknown manner the Liber Logaeth was used to generate the Forty-eight Angelic Keys system arising in later Actions. Indeed at the beginning of the section of the Spiritual Diaries dealing with the reception of these forty-eight Keys or 'Calls', Dee makes mention of the mystical book in his address to the Angel Nalvage (12 April 1584, at Cracovia): '(Dee to Nalvage) You mean the mystical Letters, wherein the holy book is promised to be written: and if the book be so written and laid open before us, and then you will from Letter to Letter point, and we to record your instructions.'<sup>22</sup> A series of most abstruse manoeuvres follow where dictated numbers are applied to the Tables of Liber Logaeth, employing a method that has not come down to us. The explanation fostered by the late Israel Regardie (and others of similar persuasion), that the dictated numbers simply refer to the 'rank and column' of a given square will be seen to be meaningless in the face of Angelic instructions such as: 'R The 43th. from the upper left angle to the right, and so still in the Circumference, 34006' or 'A 24th. from the Center ascending to the left angle, 25000.'<sup>23</sup> The most likely explanation is that some form of grid-system is involved, coupling the squares in a manner which could accommodate the many extremely high positional numbers. Whatever the answer, it is not to be found in the pages of Liber Mysteriorum or any other extant Dee manuscript.

The Angelic operations that took place between 13 April and 13 July 1584 resulted in the generation of three interlinked (in some places, somewhat tenuously) magical systems. They were, namely: 48 Claves Angelicae (Forty-eight Angelic Keys), Liber Scientiae Auxillii et Victoriae Terrestris (The Book of Knowledge, Help and Earthly Victory), and A Book of Supplications and Invocations<sup>24</sup> (this book, in Latin, deals with the Invocation of the Angels who preside over the Four Quarters of the Terrestrial sphere).

SQUARE FROM LIBER LOGAETH Sloane MS.3189 fol. 17r.

These treatises, together with Dee's earlier Heptarchia Mystica, represent all that has survived of Dee's complete magical tracts. Their importance is reflected in the fact that fair copies of each book were made for easy reference, and that they were taken by Dee and Kelly on most of their travels.

The Book of the Forty-Eight Angelic Keys contains a series of 'Calls' or Invocations in the Angelic or Enochian language, together with an interlined English translation. These Calls were, in most cases, received letter by letter backwards in an attempt to prevent magical occurrences during their dictation. The English translations (mostly received at the same time) possess great poetic beauty, comparable in some instances to certain verses of the Apocalypse of Saint John. On this level the clairvoyant abilities of Edward Kelly have been extolled by many.

The Book of Knowledge, Help and Earthly Victory comprises a mass of tabulatory material connected with the Invocation and modus operandi of the system of the thirty Aires or 'Aethers'. It is directly associated with the final Call contained in The Book of the Forty-Eight Angelic Keys alongside which the names and division of the Aethers are given.

The Book of Supplications and Invocations is almost entirely based upon the manipulation of four alphabetic squares, their involved hierarchy of spirits, the ministry of the spirits, and the methodology of calling them forth. It is connected with The Book of Knowledge, Help and Earthly Victory, inasmuch as the sigils of the former are replicated in the squares.

Although the sophistication of these later communicated systems is apparent, it is strange to note that the only real practical example of Dee's employment of any of the transmitted techniques stems from his usage of earlier and unrefined Heptarchia Mystica (The Mysteries of the Sevenfold Kingdom).

The Heptarchial system is based upon a hierarchy of 'good Angels' all of which have names beginning with the letter B. Seven Kings, seven Princes and thirty-five lesser Angels are represented, rejoicing in such names (all of seven letters) as Baligon, Bornogo, Bapnido, Besgeme, etc. Dee collected the names of these forty-nine Angels together in a table which he called 'Tabula Angelorum Bonorum 49' (Table of 49 Good Angels). It was this Table that provided the basis for the only recorded example of talismanic magic to be drawn from the Angelic Actions. Furthermore, it seems that the characters of the Angelic Alphabet were employed here for the first time with any definite purpose.

Early in 1583 Dee petitions the Angel Murifri on behalf of two women, one afflicted in soul, the other in body. The first plea for help is upheld, the second refused on the grounds that it was requested in the interests of vanity.

The woman to receive help is Isabel Lister, of whom Dee states: 'the wicked Enemy has sore afflicted long with dangerous temptations, and hath brought her knives to destroy her self withall she resisteth hitherto.'

Murifri informs Dee that he will find his name under the numbers 49, 43, 35, 47, 9, 33, and 42<sup>25</sup> when applied to the positions indicated in his Table of Good Angels. This Dee accomplishes, but not without some difficulty as the number 35 did not yield the letter R in the first instance. (This first example was given purely to illustrate the way in which Dee was to utilise the Table.)

ISABEL LISTER'S TALISMAN

Later Dee is instructed to write down the numbers 7, 30, 25, 44, 37, 35, 46 representing (letter by letter) the word SOLGARS. Then adding the first and last numbers of the sequence, the number 53 is produced and in turn engraved within a septagon upon a plate of lead.

On the outer angles of the septagon the numbers corresponding to the word SOLGARS were to be engraved and on the inner angles the Angelic Characters of the same.

The obverse side of the Lamin, or talisman, was to bear the numerical equivalents of Isabel Lister's name<sup>26</sup> written in a circle about the number 7 (perhaps to indicate that the seventh table or column was used to generate the sequence of numbers).

All seems very complex and confusing until we employ Dee's Table of the 49 Good Angels and number the columns from left to right as shown on page 27.

The asterisks set against the letters in column three represent the numbers of the name SOLGARS,* while those in column four furnish those of Isabel Lister's. Read horizontally each row of seven letters yields one of the Forty-nine Heptarchial names.

Dee is told (by Murifri) to apply the talisman to the afflicted woman's body as he thinks fit. No record of the talisman's effectiveness exists.

When Dee returned to England (after almost six years travelling in Europe) in 1589, Kelly remained in Prague to continue his alchemical experiments. They were never to meet again, although they occasionally corresponded and seem to have parted on friendly terms.

* As the R in the name SOLGARS cannot be attributed to the number 35 in the third column, I have used the 33 twice in the above examples, being the nearest of seven possible alternatives. R.T.

Six years later (1595), Edward Kelly met his death while trying to escape from his imprisonment in the Bohemian castle of Zerner, where he had been held for some time after failing to provide the Emperor Rudolph with long-promised alchemical gold.

If Dee felt any grief at the final loss of his trusted seer, it is hardly discernible in his scant diary reference to Kelly's death: 'Nov. 25th, the newes that Sir Edward Kelly was slayne.'<sup>27</sup>

Although it seems likely that Dee continued to ponder the mysteries of his Angelic books, all serious attempts to communicate with the spirits were clearly abandoned after his parting with Kelly.

The death of Elizabeth (1603) heralded the most miserable period in Dee's long life. His beloved Queen gone, he now added to his ever-growing burden of ill health, poverty and old age (he was now 76) the ministrations of a new and unsympathetic monarch.

Dee's reputation as a magician still followed him. James I, author of the three-volume Demonology (shortly to become the witch-hunters' guide), looked upon Dee's religious Hermeticism with suspicion. To this king, all forms of magical art, natural, philosophical, or otherwise, were anathema and 'the assaults of Satan'.

John Dee would never again receive the benefit of royal protection and favour he had so long enjoyed under Elizabeth. He died at his Mortlake home in 1608 comforted only by his devoted daughter Katherine and memories of a great age past.

. . . Lend thy hand,
And pluck my magic garment from me – So:
Lie there my art.

(Prospero, to Miranda, The Tempest, Act I, Scene ii)

It is not to be supposed but that Her Majesty's woman-heart was accurately read by Shakespeare as those of all her sisterhood; and more delicate, as well as fancifully beautiful, verse-homage was never paid by writer to lady.' # The Angelic Manuscripts

In 1662, fifty-four years after John Dee's death, his lost Angelic texts were discovered. They were found in a secret compartment of an old wooden chest by a London confectioner named Jones.<sup>1</sup> Although the finder did not understand the nature or significance of these manuscripts, and seemed uninterested in their content, he nonetheless retained them at his dwelling in Lombard Street. Two years later Jones died (perhaps of plague) and, shortly after, his house was destroyed in the Great Fire of 1666. Fortunately, although the chest perished in the flames, the papers survived and were taken to Moon Fields by Mrs Jones<sup>2</sup> along with the rest of her goods. Later Mrs Jones married Thomas Wale (a Warden at the Tower of London), a close friend of Elias Ashmole. Wale soon realised that the papers were of some importance and, with his wife's permission, conveyed them to Ashmole for his opinion (Ashmole's deep interest in mystical and antiquarian matters was well known). The Wale subsequently offered to exchange the papers with Ashmole for his book on The Institution of the Garter, to which he readily agreed.<sup>3</sup>

Fate had indeed played a strange hand in restoring Dee's Angelic manuscripts to the world, yet one unfortunate incident mars the tale. While the papers were in the possession of Jones the confectioner, his housemaid saw fit to use half of the manuscripts in lighting fires, wrapping pies and other such uses. Of the content of these missing papers we can but speculate and conclude that certain elements of John Dee's Angel-magic may have been irretrievably lost.

The surviving manuscripts were received by Ashmole on 20 August 1672. They comprised (according to Ashmole): Libri Mysteriorum I-V (The first five books of the Mysteries); The 48 Claves Angelicae; Liber Scientiae, Auxilii, et Victoriae Terrestris (The Book of Knowledge, Help and Earthly Victory, A treatise on the 30 Aires); A Book of Supplications and Invocations (in Latin); and De Heptarchia Mystica.

Libri Mysteriorum I-V contain Dee's notes and observations on the early spiritual Actions which I have discussed in some detail above. They begin on 22 December 1581 and end in May 1583. 48 Claves Angelicae, Liber Scientiae and the Book of Supplications and Invocations form the substance of the following section of this book. De Heptarchia Mystica I have published elsewhere (see Notes and Bibliography).

THE THIRTY AIRES

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE
HELP AND EARTHLY VICTORY

A<sup>o</sup>1585

May 2<sup>o</sup>

(New style)
Cracow in Poland<sup>5</sup>

Note

In the original manuscript, each column of correspondences is headed with a lengthy title in Latin. For technical reasons we have been unable to adopt this system of notation in the present volume; and have therefore utilised a series of Roman numerals to represent each column in accordance with the following key:

- I: A continuous series of 91 parts.
- II: 91 Names of the parts of the earth imposed by men.
- III: 91 Names of the parts of the earth divinely given.
- IV: 91 symmetrical characters divinely given.
- V: 30 Spheric orders of good princes of the air.
- VI: Tripartite number of the good servants of each order.
- VII: Total number of the tripartite good servants in each order.
- VIII: 12 Angel Kings ruling their 30 orders, who are over 12 tribes also.
- IX: 12 Tribes of the Israelite people at the dispersal.
- X: 4 Zones of the world assigned to the dispersed tribes.<sup>6</sup>

Special Note on Column X

The zones of the world assigned to the Twelve Dispersed Tribes of Israel do not (as certain commentators have indicated) represent the usual points of the compass: North, South, East, West, North N-W, East N-E, etc. The key to Dee's intended directions can be clearly found in the second diagram he appends to his manuscript (given here on p. 58). The diagram is representative of the order of the Tribes at their dispersal (and indeed in 1585) drawn within the walls of the Holy City. To interpret Dee's intentions it is necessary to imagine oneself viewing a particular wall of the city from the outside. Then following the directive with reference to the relevant diagram the meaning becomes obvious. E.g. 'On the East side, to the right-hand = NAPHTALI (Dee: Oriens-dexter=Nephthalim); on the West side, to the left-hand = ISSACHAR (Dee: Occidens-sinister=Isacarah); to the North = MANASSEH (Dee: Aquilonaris=Manasse) etc.' Therefore in each instance the direction in which one is facing (i.e. towards a particular wall of the city) would be geographically opposite the Cardinal point named in this column (X).

In the present transcription I have represented the points of the compass (North, South, East and West) in the conventional manner, i.e. by their initial letters: N, S, E, W (Dee MS: Aquilonaris, Meridies, Oriens, Occidens – Lat.), and the directions Left and Right by the letters L and R respectively. Thus E-L signifies 'Looking towards the Eastern wall (of the Holy City), to the Left-hand side', etc.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE, HELP AND EARTHLY VICTORY

When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, when he separated the sons of Adam, he set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel.

Fundamental Prayer to God and entreaty for the benign ministry of Good Angels

O IEOVA ZEBAOOTH, I invoke and implore most earnestly your Divine Power, Wisdom and Goodness (I, John Dee, your unworthy servant), and most humbly and faithfully ask you to favour and assist me in all my works, words and cogitations, concerning, promoting or procuring your praise, honour and Glory. And by these your twelve mystical names. ORO, IBAH, AOZPI, MOR, DIAL, HCTGA, OIP, TEAA, PDOCE, MPH, ARSL, GAIOL, most ardently do I entreat and implore your Divine and Omnipotent Majesty: that all your faithful Angelic Spirits whose mystical names are expressed in this book and whose offices are briefly noted, in whatever part of the world they be and, in whatever time of my life they are summoned by (the said John) by means of their peculiar powers or authority of your Holy Names (likewise contained in this book), that most swiftly they come to me (the aforesaid John) visible, affable, and appear to me peacefully and remain with me visibly according to my wishes, and that they disappear at my request from me and from my sight. And through you and that reverence and obedience which they owe you in those twelve mystical names above mentioned, that they give satisfaction amicably to me also (the said John), at each and every moment in my life, and in each and every deed or request to all, some or one of them, and to do this quickly, well, completely and perfectly to discharge, perfect and complete all this according to their virtues and power both general and individual and through the injunctions given them by you (O God) and their charged offices and ministry. AMEN.

Through you, Jesus Christ,

AMEN.

Address to the Four Good Angels of the East, skilled and potent in Transformation.

O you Four Good and true Angels of God (our maker) Abmo, or Abamo, Naco, or Naoco, Ocnm, or Ocanm, and Shal, or Shial, who are dominant in the eastern part of the world and who have received from our and your Creator a particular power, true knowledge and perfect and absolute potency in transformation in our creation, as it were a gift and office, so that this same true science and perfected power might be imparted and made plain by you to me (preordained by Him) for the Creator's praise, honour and glory. Wherefore I John Dee, the devoted servant of our Creator and God, earnestly desire to promote and amplify His praise, honour and glory, truly, diligently and faithfully among mankind through this your aforementioned knowledge and the true employment of the same. By that God, our maker and by these mystical names of our God which have particular authority and power over you AIAOAI and OIIIT, I strongly require and confidently seek you, individually and together, to be willing to appear to me, the said John, peaceably, content, and visible at whatever point during the remainder of my life and as often as I shall wish; and deigning to appear favourable and friendly to me the said John, that you be willing to fulfil and complete truly, perfectly, plainly, manifestly and fully, all and each of my requests, in whatever manner, that concern and involve your skill in transformations, knowledge and power, such as are required or sought by me, the said John, of one, some or all of you, at whatever subsequent time, through these names of our God set down, AIAOAI and OIIIT; and that you perform and do the same requests at once, without delay or at least as soon as they can be performed in any way. AMEN.

By these Holy and mystical Names of GOD
AIAOAI and OIIIT. AMEN.

O you Angels, full of the truth and goodness of God (you I say), Acca, or Acvca, Npat, or Nprat, Otoi, or Otroi, and Pmox, or Pmzox, who have authority in the eastern part of the world such that each of you has your particular gift or office, peculiar skill, knowledge, power and authority in each of the Four Elements or matrices of the world. O you ACCA, or ACUCA, eminent Angel that perceives all the diverse species of living creatures in all the eastern air and perfectly understands for what uses to mankind they were created by God; you also illustrious NPAT, or NPRAT, who understands the species and true use of the living creatures in all the eastern waters; and you famous OTOI, or OTROI, that exactly comprehends the various species that enjoy life in all the eastern land and for what uses they were created by God; and finally you PMOX, or PMZOX, shining Angel of God, that has cognition fully of the vital properties, most secret and efficacious, of the eastern fire. O you all (I say), faithful ministers of our God and maker, who, in the eastern part of the world, understand these and many other secrets and mysteries of the Four Elements, granted, assigned and deputed to your knowledge and offices by our Omnipotent maker, and are able to impart and clearly communicate such secrets (with God's approval) to us (called and elected by the living heavenly voice) to the praise honour and glory of God and through your own great charity to the human race. Therefore, I John Dee, most ardent lover and seeker, after secrets of this kind (and that particularly for the praise, honour and glory of our God) in the name of that God and our maker, humbly supplicate you that I have named, both individually and together, trustfully seek and require you, by the Holy Names of our God AOVRRZ, and ALOAI, willingly and entirely to fulfil, benignly to grant clearly to enact and lovingly to accomplish the completion, achievement and execution, both plain, entire and perfect, of all my requests at whatever occasion in my life (after this hour) that I should ask and seek the helpful presence and personal appearance of all or one of you, such petitions as concern and entail your said particular offices and gifts or your special knowledge and power, by these Holy Names of God AOVRRZ and ALOAI, AMEN.

Through these revered and mystical names of God,
AOVRRZ and ALOAI. AMEN.

Commentaries on the Angelic Manuscripts of John Dee

1. The Forty-Eight Angelic Keys

From the outset, these calls or Keys will be seen to bear striking resemblance to the cryptical utterances of the Apocalypse. References to 'the vials of wrath'<sup>1</sup> (9th Key), 'the bed of a Harlot (Jezebel?)' (19th Key), 'the house of death (Babylon)' (9th Key), 'sharp sickles' (3rd Key), cries of 'Woe unto the earth' and many other elements, strongly indicate Apocalyptic influence. Although it cannot be stated with any degree of certainty, it is my personal view that Kelly was to some measure 'inspired' by passages in the Book of Revelation, and subconsciously coloured the Angelic invocations.

The Forty-eight Keys comprise eighteen lesser invocations and the Key or Call of the Thirty Aires or Aethers. For each of the Aires, the same Key is repeated varying the name of the Aire (Lil, Arm, Zom, etc.) in each instance when recited in the Angelic language, and the number (1st, 2nd, 3rd, Aire) when read in English. Dee and Kelly are further instructed, that the Keys are in fact forty-nine as a hidden call 'that of the Godhead and not to be called' is mystically represented. The Forty-eight Keys were intended to be used, together with the Holy Table and Sigillum Aemeth, to bring about great changes in the world and a new 'state of perfection' in all things.

There is no evidence to indicate that Dee ever made practical use of the Forty-eight Keys, which seem to stand apart from the other elements of the Angelic magic, despite the titanic efforts of Mathers and others to interrelate the calls with the Angelic Tablets and other aspects of Dee's work. With the Dee papers the word 'system' must be used lightly.

It has been suggested (in some depth) that Dee's record of Enochian magic is in reality a system of encipherment which he employed in his role as the 'Queen's intelligencer'. It is well known that Dee was deeply concerned with matters of state security (Dee invented the title 'British Empire'), and possessed an extensive knowledge of encoding and decoding messages. To this end he was overjoyed when he discovered a manuscript copy of the Stenographia of Trithemius (teacher of Cornelius Agrippa) which disguises a system of encipherment under the mask of a magical text. Of the Stenographia Dee writes: 'a boke for which many a learned man has long sought and dayly doth seeke; whose use is greater than the fame thereof is spread'.

In modern times the chief exponent of the 'cipher theory' has been Richard Deacon. In his book John Dee: Scientist, Geographer, Astrologer and Secret Agent to Elizabeth I,<sup>2</sup> Richard Deacon sets forth a mass of material to validify his case. How far he succeeds is, to a certain degree, a matter of conjecture. However, it is my opinion that Deacon's work does contribute a possible solution to some of the more enigmatic aspects of Dee's magic and his angle of approach is well worth investigating in further depth. The situation may well be as D. P. Walker suggests<sup>3</sup> in his analysis of the Stenographia of Trithemius, that Dee's Invocations can be read on two levels, one as a treatise on Angel-magic, and the other – hidden beneath the plain-text – a system of cryptography.

The above may be seen by some readers to be a retraction of my earlier ideas regarding Dee's magic (cf. The Heptarchia Mystica of John Dee), but I forward my present view in the light of recent research undertaken by my colleagues and myself. It has even been indicated that elements in the Angelic language may have been inspired by Dee's delvings into ancient Welsh (another link with Cati?). Finally, when one considers John Dee's sentiments towards the sixteenth-century Spanish throne, consider the Angelic word for iniquity: 'madrid'.

2. The Book of Knowledge, Help and Earthly Victory

In this manuscript Dee tabulates the correspondences of the Thirty-Aires, or Aethers. First he lists ninety-one regions of the earth 'named by man': and then adds a series of divinely imposed equivalent titles; symmetrical characters; details of the associated Angelic Hosts; Angelic Kings and their relevant Hebrew tribes and finally, the assignation of the twelve tribes of Israel at their dispersion.

Regarding the reception of this information Dee records (in his Seventh Book of the Mysteries) on 23 May 1584:

(E. K.) There appeareth a great thing like a Globe, turning upon two axell-trees (marginal note: D: The earthly Globe appearing).
 Nalvage [the Angel]: Turn to the first Air . . . (D) I have done.
 Nalvage: The Earth in the first ayre, is this [E. K. pointing on that Globe to it.]

D. We beseech you to bound or determine the Countries or Portions of the Earth, by their uttermost Longitudes and Latitudes, or by some other certain manner.

Nal. Our manner is, not as it is for worldlings: We determine not places after the forms of legs, or as leaves are: neither we can imagin any thing after the fashion of an [D] horn: as those that are Cosmographer do.

Notwithstanding the Angel of the Lord appeared unto Ptolomie, and opened unto him the parts of the Earth: but some he was commanded to secret: and those are Northward under your Pole. But to you, the very true names of the world in her Creation are delivered.

D. There appeared a great water, long and narrow, reddish, and thereby appeared . . . written Egypt.<sup>4</sup>

These Ptolemaic divisions of the earth are referred to in Cornelius Agrippa's First Book of Occult Philosophy, Chapter 31, entitled How Provinces, and Kingdoms are Distributed to Planets. Of these Agrippa states:

These we have in this manner, gathered from Ptolomey's opinion to which according to the writings of other Astrologers, many more may be added. But he who knows how to compare these divisions of provinces according to the Divisions of the Stars, with the Ministry of the Ruling Intelligences, and Blessings of the Tribes of Israel, the lots of the Apostles, and Typical Seals of the Sacred Scripture, shall be able to obtain great and prophetic oracles, concerning every region of things to come.<sup>5</sup>

Dee's list of earthly zones (with certain Angelically derived exceptions), follows Agrippa in general, but gives a different order of place names, and makes no reference to planetary attributions.

Of the extent and dominion of the Aires, or Aethers the Angel Nalvage states: 'Understand therefore, that from the fire to the earth, there are thirty places or abidings: one above and beneath another: wherein these aforesaid Creatures have their abroad, for a time.'<sup>6</sup>

This spacial allocation of the Aethers was perfectly in line with the pre-Copernican model of the universe generally accepted in Dee's time (although Dee was one of the first open advocates of the true, sun-centred, Copernican system).

This system placed the Earth at the centre, being in itself the first of the four Elements of Aristotelian physics, surrounded with the spheres of Water, Air and Fire. Above these elemental regions revolved the spheres of the Moon, Mercury, Venus, the Sun, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, the 'fixed stars' and the Primum Mobile. Therefore, the thirty areas of space occupied by the Aethers were confined to the Elemental zones related to the Earth. As the Angels of the Aethers are held to ‘. . . bring in and again dispose of Kings and all the Governements upon Earth, and vary the Natures of things: with the variation of every moment’,<sup>7</sup> their region once more reflects the Aristotelian conception that change could only take place beneath the sphere of the Moon.

The Angels imply that the ‘New Era’, or ‘State of Perfection’ that Dee so earnestly desired, was to be established by the invocation and manipulation of powers of the Aethers: ‘Unto whom, the providence of the eternal Judgement, is already opened.’<sup>8</sup>

Note

1. In my transcription of this manuscript I have rendered the names of the Twelve Tribes of Israel into their modern forms: Judah, Zebulun, Simeon, Reuben, Gad, Manasseh, Ephraim, Benjamin, Asher, Dan, Naphtali and Issachar. Dee employs: Jehudah, Zabulon, Simeon, Ruben, Gad, Manasse, Ephraim, Benjamin, Asseir, Dan, Nephthalim and Isacaraah.
2. It is to be noted that the first symmetrical character in Dee’s manuscript is different, in form, to that given in his combined table of characters (Figure.10). The reason for this difference is unknown.
3. For further information on the physical location of the Ninety-one divisions of the earth, see Appendix C.

3. A Book of Supplications and Invocations

This book begins with a series of three square tables and one round table. The first table, although containing all relevant elements of the second, proves to be erroneous and Dee includes a note to this effect: ‘On 20th April, 1587, these reformed by Raphael.’ The second table (Figure 9) provides a basis from which a number of God and Angelic names are subsequently drawn in accordance with certain rules.

The Table as a whole consists of four lesser tables, or tablets joined together by a central cross: The Cross of Union. Although each lesser table is treated independently, the same rules of construction apply to the involved names.

As Dee tabulates the entire system of these names in his Book of Supplications and Invocations, a brief example will serve to illustrate their method of construction:

(a) First the Three Names of God are drawn from the ‘Line of the Holy Spirit’ (Linea Spiritus Sancti): ORO, IBAH, AOZPI. This is the central line in the table, numbered 1 in the diagram.

EASTERN TABLE

2

(b) Second a further God Name is generated from the seven letters at the centre of the equal-armed Cross formed by the intersection of the Line of the Holy Spirit and the double column of letters known as 'The Line of the Father and the Son' (Linea, Patris, Filii), numbered 2 in the above diagram: BATAIVA (or BATAIVH, depending on what final letter is employed) viz:

2
a T
1 b A H a
V i

(Note: letters form a clockwise spiral)

(c) Third, the six names of the Seniors are drawn from the equal-armed cross as follows:

f A i d a r z o o m a T o r o i b A H a o z p i
 V i
 T p o o
 T t a g r a

(H)ABIORO, AAOZAIF, HTMORDA, (A)HAOZPI, HIPOTGA, AUTOTAR, read from the centre of the cross outwards.

(d) Fourth, eight further God Names are formed from the letters which form calvary crosses in the lesser quarters of each square. The first name taken from the vertical line of the cross and read downwards, is held to call forth the spirits. The second name, taken from the horizontal line of each cross, is held to command the spirits, e.g.:

i a r d z a o
 i g
 o

(Upper left-hand quarter of the Eastern Table)

IDOIGO: To call forth.

ARDZA: To command.

(e) The names of the sixteen Angels which answer to the God Names taken from the calvary crosses, are formed from the four lines of letters that fall beneath the horizontal God Name on each cross. Depending on the use of the central letter, they are of four, or five characters. Those under the power of Idoigo, Ardza are therefore:

Cz(o)ns
To(i)tt
Si(g)as Fm(o)nd

To these a series of further Angelic names are added, constructed from the permutations of the names given above each calvary cross. These names are in turn answerable to God Names derived in the following manner:

The letters contained in the Cross of Union are formed into a 5×4 square thus:

|   |   |   |   |   |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| E | X | A | R | P |
| H | C | O | M | A |
| N | A | N | T | A |
| B | I | T | O | M |

By prefixing the appropriate letter from the square (or table of union) expanded God Names are produced, e.g. the E of exarp added to the name of four letters found above the cross of Idoigo-Ardza (RZLA) produces ERZLA, the Name of God that has power over the four Angels Rzla, Zlar, Larz, Arzl, the permutations of the name Rzla. Similarly the remaining letters of the line e—x,a,r,p are added to the first two letters of the Angelic names beneath the cross to produce their demonic counterparts:

Xcz
Ato
Rsi
Pfm

which are called forth and commanded by the reversed names of God. The same rules apply throughout the system.

(When conducting these permutations, Dee identifies the lesser square in question by annexing the unused upper letter in a given calvary cross to his tabulations.)

The third square table given at the beginning of the Book of Supplications, contains the symmetrical characters of The Book of Knowledge, Help and Earthly Victory and forges a possible link between the two manuscripts.

The round table bears the twelve names of God extracted from the squares but, strangely (possibly a transcription error), transposes the names applied to the north and west quarters.

The formula of the Book of Supplications and Invocations was derived from a vision which appeared to Edward Kelly on the morning of 20 June 1584:

There appeared to him (E.K.) four very fair Castles, standing in the four parts of the world: out of each he heard the sound of a trumpet.

Then seemed out of every Castle a cloath to be thrown on the ground, of more then the breadth of a Table-cloath.

Out of that in the East, the cloath seemed to be red, which was cast.

Out of that in the South, the cloath seemed white.

Out of that in the West, the cloath seemed green, with great knops on it.

Out of that in the North, spread, or thrown out from the gate underfoot, the cloath seemed to be very black.

Out of every gate then issued one Trumpeter, whose Trumpets were of strange form, wreathed, and growing bigger and bigger toward the end.

After the Trumpeter followed three Ensign bearers.

After them six ancient men, with white beards and staves in their hands.

Then followed a comely man, with very much Apparel on his back, his Robe having a long train.

Then followed one great Crosse, and about that four lesser Crosses.

These Crosses had on them, each of them ten, like men, their faces distinctly appearing on the four parts of the Crosses, all over.

After the Crosses followed 16 white Creatures.

And after them, an infinite number seemed to issue, and spread themselves orderly in a compasse, almost before the four foresaid Castles.

Dee later engraved the vision on a plate of gold in honour of its reception: preserved to this day in the collection of the British Museum (see Appendix B for diagram). It is interesting to note that a manuscript (Sloane MS. 307), written at least a century after Dee's death, contains copious notes on the methods by which the Angelic names are drawn from the squares, together with rules for their practical application. A part copy of the same manuscript circulated in the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn under the title 'Document H, CLAVICULA TABULARUM ENOCHI'.<sup>9</sup>

Notes

1 In the ninth Enochian Key 'eight vials of wrath' are referred to. The Apocalypse (Chap. XV, XVI) mentions only seven. They are the seven golden cups, or vessels 'full of the wrath of God' that the Angels poured out upon the earth, and not, as Geoffrey James suggests in his Enochian Evocation, an early form of violin!

Simon Forman

Physician, Astrologer and Necromancer 1552 – 1611

*These metaphysics of magicians
And necromantic books are heavenly;
Lines, circles, letters and characters,
Ay, these are those that Faustus most desires.*

Dr Faustus, C. Marlowe

Born under the Sign of the Goat (30 December), in 1552, at the Wiltshire village of Quidhampton, Simon Forman entered a Tudor world poised on the brink of uncertainty. The young King Edward's health was rapidly failing (he died of tuberculosis on 6 July 1553), and many feared the consequences of Mary's succession: as history records, this was not without considerable justification.

Had fate allowed Mary more than five short bloody years to pursue her relentless persecution of all that she considered heretical, a very different Simon Forman may have emerged. For during his life Forman was to become notorious as a necromancer: expert in the arts of conjuring spirits; communication with the dead; and the manufacture of philtres; charms and talismans; aphrodisiacs and even poisons. In high places his trusted – and perhaps, feared – reputation was to earn him the title 'sweet Father Forman'.

As the details of Simon's earlier life have been adequately dealt with elsewhere<sup>1</sup> we need not elaborate here, though it is worth mentioning that, like Dee, he received a grammar-school education, and became reasonably proficient in Latin.

In 1589 (at the age of 37) Simon moved to London where he took lodgings near Cripplegate. Although his establishment in the city first led to an empty purse and its attendant hardship; affairs quickly took a turn for the better when he became actively engaged in the practice of magic and astrology, and later, medicine.

London provided the ideal outlet for Simon's various talents. A city of complexities, problems, poverty, riches, and innumerable maladies of the flesh; it was ripe for the picking.

Simon's medical qualifications remain a subject of some speculation. It seems that it was not until 1603 that he received an official licence (from Cambridge University) to exercise his art, and before this he was constantly harassed by the Guild of Barber-Surgeons and the Royal College of Physicians for his 'illicit' ministrations.

For the most part it seems that Simon chose to ignore the admonishments of the authorities, and although this was finally to lead to his imprisonment (for a year) and a hefty fine, he remained undeterred and escaped beyond their jurisdiction to Lambeth.

To Forman's credit he behaved with great courage during the frequent visitations of plague that vexed the city. While many doctors fled to the country to avoid the pestilence, Forman remained in town, along with other valiant souls, to administer to the afflicted. His cures, crude as they were, were not totally without success; he even suggested that the rats that infested London were somehow responsible – could he have guessed that the rat-flea passed on the bacillus? A short, yet unlikely, step before the invention of the microscope.

In addition to the usual diagnostic techniques of urinology, physiognomy and haematology, Forman utilised astrological calculations in order to assess his patients' condition. His curative measures involved the use of herbal remedies, minerals, lancing, bleeding, and possibly the application of leeches. None of this was unusual in Elizabethan times when doctors employed poultices of cow dung and unguents compounded of lizards and snakes' vertebrae. But Simon seemed to succeed where others failed and soon he amassed a considerable fortune (at his death his estate was valued at £1,200, a very substantial sum by seventeenth-century standards).

Aside from his, what can only be termed, obsession with magic and astrology, Forman possessed a voracious sexual appetite. His copious diaries teem with amorous escapades, all, I might add, of a highly heterosexual nature. In the diaries the term halek is used to denote the act of sexual intercourse. Judging by the frequency of its usage, in reference to his wife and several mistresses, we are left in no doubt regarding the status of Simon's virility. Freudian elements often entered his dreams and in one which he records during January 1597, he even extends his passion to the Virgin Queen, Elizabeth:

I dreamt that I was with the Queen, and that she was a little elderly woman in a coarse white petticoat all unready; and she and I walked up and down through lanes and closes, talking and reasoning of many matters. At last we came over a great close where were many people, and there were two men at hard words. One of them was a weaver, a tall man with a reddish beard, distract of his wits. She talked to him and he spoke very merrily unto her, and at last did take her and kiss her. So I took her by the arm and put her away; and told her the fellow was frantic. And so we went from him and I led her by the arm still and then we went through a dirty lane. She had a long white smock, very clean and fair, and it trailed in the dirt and her coat behind. I took her coat and did carry it up a good way, and then it hung too low before. I told her she could do me a favour to let me wait on her, and she said I should. Then, said I: 'I mean to wait upon you and not under you, that I might make this belly a little bigger to carry up this smock and coats out of the dirt.' And so we talked merrily and then she began to lean upon me, when we were past the dirt, and to be very familiar with me, and methought she began to love me. And when we were alone, out of sight, methought she would have kissed me.<sup>2</sup>

As the Queen deliberately cultivated an image of Virgin purity and unobtainable female sexuality, perhaps such dreams were not uncommon amongst her male subjects.

Although many scandalous accusations were directed towards Forman during his lifetime, the incident which historically brands him as a nefarious necromancer and poisoner, reached its conclusion some years after his death.

The beautiful young Countess of Somerset (formerly Frances Essex, daughter of the Earl of Suffolk) was unhappy in her arranged marriage to the Earl of Essex, and employed philtres supplied by Forman in an attempt to render her husband impotent. She apparently succeeded and, as the marriage remained unconsummated, a decree of nullity was subsequently granted.

Having gained her freedom from Essex, the young lady proceeded to make amorous overtures to the Earl of Somerset whom she had long desired. It is said that she secured the Earl's love by image-magic involving waxen figures constructed by her 'sweet father', Forman. Once more her ardent wish was granted and she married Somerset in 1613. The Earl's friend Sir Thomas Overbury had, it seemed, tried to warn Somerset of his new wife's involvement with Forman, but before he could get word to the Earl he was arrested under some political charge and imprisoned in the Tower of London.

The Countess, being aware of Overbury's intentions, seized the opportunity afforded by his imprisonment and made plans to poison him. As Forman was dead, a former associate of his was summoned: Mrs Anne Turner, a skilled poisoner. It seems that Mrs Turner was prevailed upon to secrete toxic substances in Overbury's food, and shortly afterwards he was found dead in his cell.

Anne Turner was accused of murdering Overbury, and after she gave her account, the Countess and Earl were also arrested as accomplices. They were tried by Lord Chief Justice, Sir Edward Coke in 1616, who on hearing of the earlier sorceries, denounced Forman as the Devil, and Anne Turner as his daughter.

All three were found guilty, but the Earl and his wife were finally pardoned by King James. Anne Turner was put to death at Tyburn.

Forman's diary records that he met with John Dee on 26 July 1604 at the House of a certain 'Mr Staper'. Although in many ways their common interest in the spirit world and astrology would seem to weld them together as kindred magicians, their practical techniques differ greatly. Dee always approached his Angelic operations from a devotional angle employing, as we have seen, prayer and pious ejaculations as his chief method of invoking the spirits; whereas Forman, like Kelly, was much given to the grimoire approach advocated by such works as The Key of Solomon and the Pseudomarchia of John Weyer (Johannes Wierus).

Evidence of Forman's somewhat 'fleshy' attitude towards the Mysteries is contained in a manuscript<sup>3</sup> that once belonged to the celebrated Dr John Caius.<sup>4</sup>

If the date on this manuscript is to be believed – 1558 – it cannot of course be Forman's own work – he was six years old – but as it seems to be in his hand, it is most likely a transcript of an earlier work that came into his possession.

The content of the manuscript is of great interest. It proves to be a type of practical guide to magical operations set out as a beginner's instructional manual. It lists the colours of the inks used in drawing characters and talismans; the order in which the spirits are to be called forth; perfumes; protective seals, and details of planetary hours together with a mass of other related material. It is without doubt that Simon made use of such manuscripts in his frequent encounters with the spirit world which prompted such diary entries as:

He cast out much fire, and kept a wonderful ado; but we could not bring him to human form: he was seen like a great black dog and troubled the folk in the house much and feared them. And between 11 and 12 at night the bed (shook?) four or five times, and cast out such fire and brimstone that it stank mightily. That night he kept much ado and reared mightily.

This spirit was called on the Eve of All Hallows' 1597. He was to return on All Souls' day following:

This night he came according to his wont and raved much; we bound him strongly and kept him till almost four o'clock in the morning.

The shape-changing, binding and the general ferocity of the spirit are all indicative of the ceremonial magic of the grimoires. A far cry from the docile Angel magic of John Dee.

Although many notes and tracts belonging to Forman have survived, it remains uncertain which formal magical texts he utilised in his various necromantic experiments. To bridge this gap I have been at pains to discover a hitherto unpublished manuscript typical in form and representative of Forman's Age. To this end I have reproduced an English text which I came across while attempting to catalogue the most important magical tracts in the British Museum collection.<sup>5</sup>

The English manuscript, anonymous; of uncertain date; and mysterious origin; suited my purpose admirably. In addition it forges a tenuous link with Dee's Angel magic, in as much that it makes mention of Liber Scientiae Terrestris; the book of the Thirty Aires, reproduced elsewhere in this volume.

The 'grimoire' lacks a title page but the first folio proclaims it to be an Operation by the Regal Spirit Usiel, by means of which twenty-eight further spirits (of the day and night) may be called.

OPERATION BY THE REGAL SPIRIT USIEL

THE GREAT SEAL OF KING USIEL

THE LESSER SEAL
ACCORDING TO TRITHEMEUS

The Spirit Usiel is a great and potent King, and third in Degree and Order under ye mighty Spirit Amenadiel Emperor of the West Angle of the Air; and hath his Mansion in the North-West point of the compass, wherein he ruleth over many other Spiritual Princes and Dukes with many other Servient and Subservient Spirits residing in the said Mansion.

This Regal Spirit Usiel hath many Spiritual Dukes attending him in the day and many in the night and who again have many servient and subservient Spirits in Degree, Order, and Office, superiour and inferiour serving under them. The Diurnal Spirits (or Spirits of the day) may be moved and called forth to visible appearance in the day; and the Nocturnal Spirits (or Spirits of the night) may be moved and called forth in the night, for the Diurnal Spirits appear not in the night, nor the Nocturnal in the Day.

Out of the many fore mentioned Spiritual Dukes and Presidential Spirits serving in Degree, Order, and Office under Usiel we shall nominate only fourteen Diurnal Dukes and fourteen Nocturnal with their proper Seals or characters appropriated unto each of them and also a particular number of servient and subservient attending them viz:

Note

Following the above, the manuscript continues with a series of conjurations similar in nature to those found in the Key of Solomon, and concludes with the usual dismissal of the Spirits, or Licence to Depart.

Postscript

On 8 September 1611 Simon Forman died. According to an account by William Lilly, Forman had astrologically predicted his final hour with perfect accuracy, and on that fated day, while rowing on the Thames (towards Puddle-dock), he fell dead at the oars.

Robert Fludd

Hermetic Philosopher and Medical Practitioner 1574–1637

Little is known regarding the earlier life of Robert Fludd. He was born in 1574 at Milgate House, Bearsted (near Maidstone), Kent, the fifth son of Sir Thomas Fludd, Treasurer for Her Majesty's forces in the Netherlands. Apart from these scant details, we have no surviving record of Fludd's first eighteen years prior to his entrance into St John's College, Oxford in 1592. During 1596 he graduated as Bachelor of Arts, and two years later, at the age of 24, he received his MA.

After obtaining his Master's degree in 1598, Fludd left England for the Continent where he remained for almost six years. Although Thomas Fludd was a man of considerable means, and well able to support his son throughout his travels abroad; Robert chose to supplement his income by tutoring the children of high-born families in Germany, France, Italy and Spain: thus, like Dee, Fludd earned a scholarly reputation.

On his return to England he entered Christ Church Oxford, and there in 1605 he secured a Doctorate in Medicine, but due to his adherence to the 'new' Paracelsian techniques he failed to gain his Fellowship of the Royal College of Physicians. It was not until September 1609 (after three attempts at the examination) that he finally obtained the required qualification and was allowed to practise medicine.

Fludd moved to London where he set up the practice which he was to maintain for the greater part of his life. His curative measures were at that time considered highly unorthodox. Fludd held that the mind and spirit of the patient must be healed first and the disease which afflicted the body second. He engaged a private apothecary who compounded Fludd's 'special medications' on the premises, utilising only the purest materials mixed in exact proportion. Although looked upon disdainfully by his fellow physicians, Fludd's methods of treatment, far removed from the Galenic techniques of his day, were largely successful and highly regarded by an ever growing number of respectful and devoted patients.

Like Forman, Fludd employed astrology as a diagnostic aid; analysed urine samples; and placed much store on the condition of the blood – indeed, one of his close friends was William Harvey the discoverer of the circulatory system. Here the similarity with Forman ends, for Fludd always counselled against the sins of the flesh: advising his patients and associates to avoid drunkenness, gluttony, and womanising (he never married).

Fludd's deep interest in the sciences, music and medicine gradually became more and more integrated with his mystical inclinations. His views on the Kabbalah, magic, divination and alchemy, were often compounded with the laws of harmonics, mechanics and human physiology. These ideas are ensouled in their fullest sense within the pages of his magnum opus: Utriusque Cosmi . . . Historia (the History of the Macrocosm and the Microcosm) published during 1617. In this beautifully illustrated work, Fludd gives forth his theories of God, man, and the Universe. The second volume concerns incarnate man, and studies the divinely inspired sciences of astrology, palmistry, prophecy, the art of memory, physiognomy, pyramidology and geomancy.

In the art of geomancy Fludd was an expert, and friends and associates often called upon him to practise his science in answer to matters that troubled them. Geomancy is one of the oldest forms of divination known to man. It involves the construction of sixteen figures derived from the odd or even nature of a series of point marks made in the earth with a wand or stylus, marks on a sheet of paper, or even the random selection of items such as pebbles. Each figure has an attributed Latin name: Puer – boy, Puella – girl, Amissio – loss, Carcer – prison, Via – a way, Populus – people, etc. The figures each composed of four lines of one or two dots, were also held to represent the influences of the planets and zodiacal signs as a further aid to their interpretation. The figure Puer (a boy) ♂ indicated the rash, fiery, impetuous nature of Mars and Aries, the reverse influence of Puella (a girl) ♀ which symbolised the benign powers of Venus and Libra.

While concentrating on the object of the divination the geomantic operator would make sixteen rows of dots in the sand or earth tray, or take sixteen handfuls of pebbles, and then count the number in each row. If the number was even he would make two dots for the first line of the figure, if odd, one dot. This procedure was repeated until the first four figures were generated, by manipulation of these first formed characters (known as the four Mothers) twelve further figures were formed and entered into a chart, or geomantic shield. The derived chart was then analysed with reference to the significance of each figure and the order in which it falls.<sup>1</sup>

Some indication of Fludd's skilled and intuitive application of the art of geomancy can be gleaned from records of his early experiences contained in the second tract of Historia Macrocosmi (History of the Macrocosm). Here he states that the hand which makes the geomantic marks 'emanated from the very soul', and errors in the figures were due to 'base and incongruous mutation of the human body'.

In the biographical section of his History of the Macrocosm Fludd describes one of his early geomantic exercises in the following words:

In the penultimate year of the life and reign of the glorious Queen Elizabeth of England (whose fame will never die) I was compelled to spend the whole winter in the city of Avignon, because the winter was very severe, with so much snow covering the mountains of [St] Bernard that the passage into Italy was entirely blocked. With many other young men of gentle birth and of sound education (former pupils of the Jesuits) I received board and lodgings at the house of a certain captain. One evening, while we were drinking at the table, I discussed philosophical subjects with the others and noticed their various opinions on geomantic astrology. Some of them denied its virtue altogether; others, with whom I sided, defended stoutly the validity of that art. I adduced many arguments whereby I proved myself fairly well versed in geomancy.

The meal being over, I had no sooner repaired to my chamber, when one of my companions followed me there and asked me for our love's sake to try my art (which he said, he had seen was considerable) in the resolution of a problem of some importance which, he said, filled his mind with much anxiety. Having made many excuses, I was at last prevailed upon by his entreaties. So instantly I projected a geomantic scheme for the question he had proposed. This question was: whether a girl with whom he had vehemently fallen in love returned his love with equal fervour, and her entire mind and body, and whether she loved him more than anyone else.

Having drawn my [geomantic] scheme, I assured him that I could rather well describe the nature and bodily disposition of his beloved and, having duly described to him the stature and shape of the girl's body, I indicated also a particular and rather noticeable mark or blot thereon, namely a certain kind of wart on her left eye-lid, which he confessed was there. I said also that the girl delighted in vineyards, and this detail, too, was with pleasure confirmed by him. He said that her mother had for that very reason built her house among the vineyards. Finally I gave the following answer to the question he had proposed: that his beloved was inconstant and by no means steady in her love of him, and that she loved somebody else rather more than him.

Whereupon he said that he had always very much suspected that this was the case and that he was [now] seeing it, as it were, with open eyes.

He left my room in haste and then related to his companions with some admiration the verity and virtue of my art. Yet some of them, who knew the girl rather well, denied altogether that she had any such mark on her eye-lid as I had described, until they talked to her the following day and thus became witnesses of the correctness of that detail which I had discovered to them by the art of geomancy and which even they had never previously noticed.<sup>2</sup>

Aside from his involvement in the fields of geomancy, astrology and the Kabbalah, Fludd experimented in other matters, some of which possessed strange and sinister undertones.

Searching for the quintessence of life, Fludd distilled human blood, and on one occasion claimed to have removed a human head, complete with face, eyes, nose and hair, from the vessel, 'upon which it emitted a frightful noise'. Was Fludd attempting to make the alchemical blood-stone from which Paracelsus is said to have extracted the philosophic mercury; a substance used to feed his Homunculus (little man)? The idea of creating life without the aid of woman, the ultimate proof of man's divinity, would have most certainly appealed to Fludd, who in his own words remained throughout his life an 'unstained virgin'.

Paracelsus (1493-1541), the celebrated alchemist, physician and occultist, writes of his manufacture of the Homunculus:

Take a man's semen and place it in a hermetically-sealed retort, bury in horse manure for forty days and magnetise. During this time, it begins to live and move, and at the end of the forty days it resembles human form, but it is transparent and without body.

Feed daily with the 'arcanum' of human blood (the extract of the blood-stone) and maintained at the constant temperature of a mare's womb, for a period of forty weeks (when) it will grow into a human child, as normal as any child born of woman, yet much smaller. It may be raised and educated like any other child, until it grows older and is able to look after itself.

The Scottish doctor William Maxwell hints darkly at Fludd's possession of a human-magnet which had the power to attract the bodily organs; of this Maxwell states: 'the Fluddian magnet is nothing other than dessicated human flesh, which certainly possesses the greatest attractive power: it should be taken, if possible,

HOLY CROSS CHURCH, BEARSTED, KENT Photograph R. E. Cousins

from a body still warm, and from a man who has died a violent death.<sup>13</sup>

It is perhaps undoubtable that Fludd's deep and far-reaching researches did from time to time lead him to regions that in his day would be considered 'forbidden knowledge'. But in our modern world of the clone and the test-tube baby, Robert Fludd's memory lives on through his contributions to philosophical thought, psychology, and religion, rather than his triflings with homunculi and the human-magnet.

Robert Fludd died on 8 July 1637 at the age of 63. He was buried in Holy Cross Church Bearsted, beneath a stone which he personally prepared before his death. The year following his interment his nephew Thomas erected a monument (which stands to this day) to his memory. The memorial depicts Fludd sitting beneath his family arms with an open book before him. On the pedestal of the monument a Latin inscription reads:

Sacred to the memory of Robert Fludd alias De Fluctibus, <sup>4</sup> Doctor of both medicines, who, after a peregrination of some years which he had successfully undertaken in foreign parts to cultivate his intellect, was at last restored to his native land and was elected, not undeservedly, to the society of the famous College of Physicians in London. He peacefully exchanged death for life on the eighth day of the seventh month (July) in the year of Our Lord 1637, at the age of 63.

This urn does not smoke with sumptuous perfumes nor does a fine tomb cover your ashes. What is less mortal, yourself, we alone entrust to you – the monuments of your intellect will live here. For whoever writes and dies like you creates an eternal tomb for all posterity.

Thomas Jones of Tregaron (1530–1609)

In the Shadow of the Hawk by Patricia Shore Turner

'He was a man of superior information and by the vulgar in the age he lived regarded as a magician.'

(Lewys Dwnn: Heraldic Visitations of Wales between 1586 and 1613 . . .
ed. S. R. Meyrick, page 7, Llandovery, 1846)

In Wales, as in Scotland, Ireland and the Isle of Man, poetry, song and legend are the substance of literature, indicating patterns of custom, social observance and above all, fantasy. Before I enter into a more detailed consideration of the life and times of Thomas Jones, better known as Twm Sion Cati, examples of the mischievous tricks alleged to have been engaged in by this colourful and flamboyant character are thought to be in order.<sup>1</sup>

Things in real life are not quite as legend has them. But then, the Twm Sion Cati legend has acquired a reality of its own.

It is said of Twm he had a sense of humour. Being informed of a famous highwayman in the area he decided to rob him of his horse. Riding a brokendown nag and taking with him a leather bag of shells he went to meet the highwayman who ordered him to stop and deliver. Twm acted suitably reluctant and threw the bag over the hedge. Furious, the highwayman ordered Twm to hold his horse and jumped over the hedge. Promptly Twm changed horses and galloped off.

Another tale tells of a poor man who needed a pitcher (an earthenware jug with two ears and a lip). Twm agreed to help and together they visited a shop. After deriding some of the wares, Twm informed the seller there was a hole in one – which he instantly denied. Twm desired the seller to see for himself by putting his hand in it while indicating to the poor man to creep out with a pitcher. When the seller announced that he could find no hole, Twm mockingly asked him how else he could have put his hand in – and went away laughing.

On another occasion, he observed a woman selling cloth at a fair. Cunningly he tacked one end to his coat, gave a swift turn twisting it round him, and lost himself in the crowd. Shortly afterwards he met the woman grieving over her loss and condoled with her, lamenting that so many rogues frequented fairs, wondering she should be so careless. He told her he always tacked his own cloth to his coat.

The fascination of caves still holds many people. In folklore there are traditions and stories related about these secret places in which heroes sleep in a deathlike state to be awoken in times of danger. Other tales tell of hidden treasure, mythical beasts or fugitives using them as a safe refuge from the law. Situated on the River Tywi (Towey) about twelve miles north of Llandovery is the cave said to have been frequented by Twm Sion Cati during his 'Robin Hood' activities; and possibly used for his more amorous assignations. 'As Sir John Rhys pointed out: "... some of these cave stories . . . reveal to us a hero.'"*

Why was there such a desperate need for a Welsh Robin Hood or Rob Roy? Although Henry VII had waived many of the penal laws which deprived Welshmen of the benefits of ordinary citizenship giving preferential treatment to their English overlords, the division of Principality and Marches led to a complete lack of uniformity of law. This ambiguity produced much scope for lawlessness.<sup>2</sup>

The merciless regime of Bishop Rowland Lee in the reign of Henry VIII was far from 'affable to any of the Walshrie'.<sup>3</sup> President between 1534 and 1543 of the Council of the Marches of Wales (Cyngor Cymru a'r Goror), he applied a policy of fierce repression, hunting outlaws and wrongdoers, and hanging them in batches as an example to others. Known as the 'hanging judge' he hated the Welsh, boasting of executing between five and six thousand in six years 'and did not disdain to ride after malefactors in person'.<sup>4</sup>

The hills behind Tregaron, in Cardiganshire, were infested by people who had been declared outlaws for failing to appear at the Great Sessions of the shire. But whether all outlaws were genuine felons is debatable.<sup>5</sup>

This state of affairs, together with the high number of Englishmen in positions of authority, did not help the situation in Wales. Fortunately, the tidy-minded administrator Thomas Cromwell rose to power; realising that Rowland Lee's negative policy did not work, for feuds between Welsh uchelwyr<sup>6</sup> and English bureaucrats, between Principality and Marches were rapidly becoming endemic.

Were these contributory causes to future legislature changes? Yes, indeed. A similar situation arose in Scotland with the Massacre of Glencoe (13 February 1692)<sup>7</sup> at the time of William of Orange and much later with the Accession of the Hanoverian Dynasty in England. It was fortunate indeed that Cromwell dealt with the basic problem in Wales at that time with the most comprehensive code for the whole area since Edward I's Statute of Wales, by incorporating the Seven Charters of Henry VII, in which he contented himself with rewarding his most loyal supporters, waiving certain penal laws, and allowing others to drop into disuse.

A more liberal legislation aimed at the administration of Wales (1534) was placed on the Statute Book. An added improvement followed (27 Henry VIII, c.5, 1536), which provided for the appointment of Justices of the Peace in Chester, Flint, Anglesey, Caernarvon, Merioneth, Cardigan, Carmarthen, Pembroke and Glamorgan. Finally, there was passed the 'Act for laws and justice to be administered in Wales in like form as it is in England' (27 Henry VIII, c.26) commonly known as the 'Act of Union'.<sup>8</sup>

The King in Council might legislate but force of law did not always follow. Violence continued; corrupt officials ruled; power-hungry aristocracy and delinquent Churchmen meddled in county and local affairs. The commonalty suffered: 'Lord Chandos was summoned before the Council of Wales for terrifying juries, threatening an under-sheriff with guns, and protecting highway robbers.'<sup>9</sup>

Twm Sion Cati played cat and mouse with authority. Outlawed for sheep-stealing (he had to live), his merry pranks may have outdone Till Eulenspiegel's but hardly those of the Irish bandit Delany and 'Klim', the Russian robber as described in T. J. Llewelyn Pritchard of Swansea's 'first Welsh novel', The Adventures and Vagaries of Twm Sion Catti (1828) Aberystwyth. Various editions, both legal and piratical, followed.

Regardless of chronology the legend grew. W. F. Deacon wrote, Twm John Catty, The Welch Rob Roy.<sup>10</sup> The terminology is Scottish, referring to Twm as a 'chieftain', the 'clans' he roused and harpers playing their 'inspiring war-songs'. Another version, basically the same, was entitled: The Life, Exploits, and Death of Twm John Catty, The Celebrated Welch Rob Roy and his beautiful bride Elinor, Lady of Llandisent, The Heiress of Ystrad-Ffin.<sup>11</sup>

W. F. Deacon wrote a play on the same theme as his narrative, The Welsh Rob Roy, performed in 1823 at the Coburg Theatre.

The romance of Twm Sion Cati has extended to the present day. The Cardiff-based Theatr Taliesyn's biennial Indo-Celtic, inter-cultural production this year (13–17 April 1988) was the tale of two outlaws: Twm Siôn Catti, the Welsh Robin Hood and Jesel, the seventeenth-century bandit from an area now part of Gujarat. In addition BBC TV produced a serial Hawkmoor* based on Lynn Hughes' novel of the same title; starring the Welsh actor John Ogwen as Cati and Jane Asher as Lady Jeanne of Ystradffin.

Twm gained his Pardon easily once Elizabeth ascended the Throne. The pardon grant under the Great Seal, bearing the date 1 January 1559, 1 Eliz. was countersigned 'Vaughan'.

Unfortunately the transcription of the Pardon has not been given in full in The History of Tregaron and certain copying errors are apparent in the printed version. However, these may have been due to the state of the original manuscript or the difficulty in reading the Elizabethan hand.

Cf. Christopher Upton's corrected version with the differences in italics:

Born Thomas Jones of Fountain Gate (Porth-y-ffynon) Tregaron; Twm was the natural son<sup>13</sup> of John, son of David ap Madog ap Howel Moethau ap Rees Moethau (the latter was living in 1399, and was fourth in descent from Griffith Voel, descended from Gwaethfod Fawr, Prince of Ceredigion), and by Catherine, natural daughter of Meredydd ap Ieuan ap Robert.<sup>14</sup> In 1588 Twm is described as a man of good family, his armorial bearings being those of Gwaethfod.

The gentry of Wales were principally a squirearchy living semi-rural lives; in many cases their limited means led their existence to seem barely distinguishable from that of the richer yeomen. However, skilful manipulation of the English land laws, matrimonial arrangements, selective property purchases and other, not so legal, methods gained substantial estates for some. But most of the Welsh gentry remained relatively poor, their land realising incomes of less than £100 per year.

Thomas Jones claimed kinship with the powerful Cecil (Seisyllt) family, advisors to the English throne, and inter-marital connections with the Herberts, the Vaughans of Tyle-glas, and the Clements, lords of Caron, among others. According to the Lay Subsidies and Plea Rolls, (Trans. Carm. Ant. Soc. Vol. 9. p. 16) Thomas Jones' uncle, Rees ap David ap Madoc (1560), and his cousin, Evan ap Rosser ap David (1576), were at Caron at those dates. As Owen notes: 'To the Welsh gentleman, his pedigree was a matter of deep concern. For one thing, it established his kinship and relations with other families pertaining to the squirearchy'.<sup>15</sup> Thus gentlemen of a literary or antiquarian inclination, like Thomas Jones, engaged in the study of genealogy as a serious pursuit.

After Henry VII cautiously extended English common law into Wales and the Act of Union (1535) was passed by Henry VIII, Wales was compelled to accept English laws. For the gentry, this meant, above all, that land left by a deceased father now passed to the eldest son rather than being divided equally between all the sons: in effect, the rule of primogeniture over gavelkind.

Numerous manuscripts of the period show how deeply attached the squires were to details of their genealogy, for it justified their claim to social pretensions, family pride and self-esteem, since it showed that their ancestors had been the natural leaders of the Welsh people.

Twm was a singer and poet. According to R. Isgarn Davies, Twm won the Chair at Llandaff Eisteddfod in 1561.

Twm's poetry is widely scattered. For example, 'Cywydd y Gofid', an 'Ode to Grief', or 'Poem of Affliction', is included in S. R. Meyrick's History of Cardiganshire, p. 249; it is printed also in Yr Haul (December 1845). Other poems may be found in British Museum, Additional MSS. 14907, 15008, 15056.

Apparently Twm collected many of the Triads, as the following note, in translation, from the London edition of a transcription shows: 'The Triads were taken from the book of Caradoc of Nantcarven, and from the book of Jevan Brechva, by me Thomas Jones, of Tregaron; and these are all I could get of the three hundred, 1601'.<sup>16</sup>

The following eulogium by his contemporary Dr John David Rhys cannot but show the respect Twm had gained:

Whoever professes himself to be a Herald Bard, must know the pedigrees of Kings and Princes, and be skilled in the works of the three chief Bards of the Isles of Britain: namely Merlin, son of Morvyn, Merlin Ambrosius, and Taliesin the Chief Bard. ('Myrdhin ab Morbrynn, a Myrdhin Emrys, a Thaliessin Benn Beirdh'). And in the Science of Heraldry, with respect to being thoroughly acquainted with the real descents, armorial bearings, dignities, and illustrious actions of the nobility and gentry of Wales, the most celebrated accomplished and accurate (and that beyond doubt) is reckoned Tomas Sion, alias Moethau, of Porth-y-ffynnon, near Trev Garon (Thomas Jones of Fountayn Gate). And when he is gone, it will be a very doubtful chance that he will be able for a long time to leave behind him an equal, nor indeed any genealogist (with regard to being so conversant as he in that science) that can ever come near him.<sup>17</sup>

Various pedigrees are said to be the work of Thomas Jones. J. Kyle Fletcher, for example, in his article, City's Treasury of Old Welsh Books<sup>18</sup> comments on the Family Rolls (pedigree rolls) thus:

. . . but the finest one is the roll of the Kendrick family in rich colours, tricked with gold and silver. Written during the reign of Elizabeth this roll is the work of that well-known Herald Bard, Thomas Jones, of Fountain Gate, usually called "Twm Shon Catti".

Mr R. Isgarn Davies gives the following:

His pedigree of Charles Morgan, in the British Museum (z.20, 1066, Harleian Roll) is in beautiful handwork and colouring, the wording being as follows:

'Pedigree of Charles Morgan of Arheston, Esq., Usher in Ordinary to Queen Elizabeth . . . by Thomas Jones of Tregaron, 1577. This Genealogie . . . is here set downe accordinge unto divers Recordes and manye verye good presidents collected by Thomas Joanes of Tregaron in Wales, gentilman, in the yeare of our Lord 1577. Exemplified and Augmented by Philip Holand, Role persevant of Armes, 1602.'

Also – (F.117.B. Brit. Museum MSS): 'Herbert, earl of Pembroke, as it was set forth by Thomas Jones of Tregaron, AD 1582'.

Also – (F.52. Brit. Museum MSS, 506, 2012): 'Sir Thomas Moston of Moston, set forth by Thomas Jones of Tregaron, and fynished at Founteyne Gate the 9th March, 1604'.<sup>19</sup>

Again Meyrick states: 'At Nant-Eôs is an emblazoned pedigree of the Corbet family written and painted by him'.

Well had Thomas Jones earned the honoured title of 'Herald Bard'.

Unexpectedly, another personality of the age was soon to enter the Welsh scene, a personality who became also both famous and infamous in his own lifetime: '1579. Nov. 29th. I receyved a letter from Mr Thomas Jones', wrote Dr John Dee in his Private Diary.<sup>20</sup>

John Dee, a member of the extensive Welsh circle in London, was the son of Rowland Dee, Gentleman Server to Henry VIII; in effect, he was chief carver at the King's Table and managed the royal kitchen. Unfortunately for Rowland Dee he was a rather rash Welsh patriot who boasted injudiciously of the royal blood in his veins; thus he came to be regarded as an arrogant upstart by his royal master who treated him in contemptible fashion refusing him preferment.

John Dee, however, took great pride in his Welsh ancestry ('Dee' is the anglicised version of Dhu, meaning black), an ancestry dating back to Rhodri the Great, King of Wales. Also his great-grandfather Dafydd Dhu (Will dated 1412) was descended from Llewelyn Crugeryr, a chieftain, and another ancestor was Rhys ap Tewdr, prince of South Wales in 1077. To this extent the Dee family had a distant connection with the Royal House of Tudor.<sup>21</sup>

Twm and John Dee shared a keen interest in genealogy, antiquarianism, poetry and many other subjects.

Dee's home in Mortlake appears to have been a somewhat rambling property to which he added rooms and buildings from time to time. This building housed five rooms of books and his many collections. In connection with his British Isles antiquarian studies he gathered Welsh and Irish records, genealogies and ancient seals,<sup>22</sup> ever seeking to encourage a wider interest in the British language, culture and its ancient legends. Also, he sought to discover the whereabouts of manuscripts about the Welsh Bards.

Dee's continued interest revealed itself in 1574. He writes of 'Certaine verie rare observations of Chester: and some parts of Wales: with divers Epitaphes Coatarmours and other monuments verie orderlie and labouriouslie gathered together'. Briefly, this is the record of a short antiquarian tour. Dee began at Chester, travelling from Westchester via Pulford to Gresford (23 August). He stayed at Wrexham on 24 August (St Bartholomew's Day). Later, he went to Bangor and Oswestry, and spent 30 August at Presteigne. He met Mr Pryce the Mayor at Hereford on Wednesday, 1 September. Also, he recorded going to Ledbury via the Malvern Hills and visited a Mr Edward Threlkeld, Chancellor of Hereford, 'one of my old acqyan-tance syns K. Edward his tyme'. From there he travelled to Gloucester then Cirencester.<sup>23</sup>

Dee maintained his links with Wales throughout his life and, it appears, especially with Thomas Jones. He wrote, '1590. Nov. 28th . . . My cousin Mr Thomas Junes cam in the ende of the terme about St Andrew's even.' And again in the same year: 'Dec. 6th. Mr Thomas Griffith my cosen from Llanbeder cam to see me, and lay all night with me, and allso Mr Thomas Jones, and in the Monday morning went by water to London, and so the same day homeward. A meridie circa 3<sup>a</sup> recipi a Regina Domina £50.'

One could speculate as to whether the payment from the Queen's Majesty was for information brought by Twm.

On 8 January 1595 the Wardenship of Christ's College, Manchester, was offered to Dee through the influence of Archbishop Whitgift. When this was confirmed by Elizabeth, Dee accepted the post. However, he did not forget his Welsh connection. As he wrote in his Private Diary: '1596. July 9th. I sent Roger Kay of Manchester with my letters into Wales.' And, 'Aug. 10th. Mr Thomas Jones of Tregaron cam to me to Manchester and rode towards Wales bak again the 13th day to mete the catall coming. Aug. 13th. I rid toward York. Halifax and Mr Thomas Jones rode toward Wales.' By 'Sept. 5th. seventeen hed of cattell from my kinsfolk in Wales by the curteous Griffith David nephew to Mr Thomas Griffith, brought'.

One might consider whether the 'Griffith David' mentioned by Dee is the same man Twm's daughter Margaret married? In Twm's Will<sup>24</sup> one of the debts mentioned was one from Griffith David, 'my son-in-law'.

The gentry rarely went outside their own social circle when they arranged marriages. Primarily, what interested them was the territorial or financial benefits accruing from an advantageous alliance within their own class, since they had little to gain from marriages with their inferiors. Thus they evolved a system of marriage alliances that closely knit the landed families of North and South Wales. This extended the influence and consolidated the power of the Welsh gentry into what could, and indeed did later, become a potent political and military force.

Power and influence could be misused. On a certain Sunday in 1599 Richard Price, head of the Gogerddan family, 'requested' the men of Cardiganshire to meet him at the parish church of Tregaron. The countryfolk were met by five hundred armed retainers who forced them into the church to hear divine service. After this enforced act of piety they found a platter set out on the churchyard stile. Richard Price announced a comortha (voluntary payment) for which he, and four other Justices of the Peace, would be duly grateful. 'He added, however, that anyone failing to show an exemplary liberality would run the risk of being pressed for military service in Ireland.'<sup>25</sup> An effective speech that produced £100.

Greedily, Price arranged for his wife to initiate comorthas amongst the women of north Cardiganshire enabling him to add £200 to his personal fortune. Other Justices of the Peace followed this example taking even lambs and calves in their own comorthas and giving thanks for them.

Violence abounded even amongst the clergy. We read for example of '... Ieuan Gwyn, a priest . . . drawing his rapier and dagger upon another member of the clerical fraternity in the chancel of Clyro Church, in Radnorshire, and wounding him in the head'.<sup>26</sup>

Many of the clergy were also corrupt, leading lives that were no good example to their unfortunate parishioners: 'The preponderantly secular outlook of the Church, its largely effete clergy and the many abuses that they committed, were bound to contribute towards . . . spiritual malaise.<sup>127</sup>

The actions of one Morgan Davyd, clerk, vicar of Caron verged on paranoia. Thomas Jones issued a Bill of Complaint<sup>28</sup> to the Court of Star Chamber on 3 November 1601, listing an amazing total of events concerning Morgan Davyd.

Thomas Jones accused the Vicar of 'greater wealth than learning' and of 'continual stirring up of strife'. Also, that he went round armed and assaulted his parishioners when the fancy took him. But the main tale is of the constant feud waged against Thomas Jones himself.

Morgan Davyd, with the aid of his servants and one Gwenllian verch David, let horses and cattle into fields sown with corn, wheat and barley causing £40 worth of damage to Twm's crops. When John Moythe objected, the Vicar beat him so severely he lost the use of one arm. Eleanor Pryce ran out of Fountain Gate to aid John Moythe and was attacked in her turn and dragged from the courtyard by her hair.

Not content with these deliberate outrages against Twm's servants, when drunk (as he frequently was) the Vicar and up to ten of his people attacked one Jenckyn Tyler who was repairing the Church roof. Blaspheming God and swearing against Thomas Jones he broke up two ladders 'armed with a great axe' and 'his sword by his side', and threatened Jenckyn Tyler or any of his friends that 'he would cut them in as many pieces as one of the ladders'.

The Vicar had not finished with Twm's retainers. On 9 July 1598 he and his servants plotted to murder John Moythe. Arming themselves, they caught the unfortunate young man going up the hillside and, after beating him, dragged him to a tree and attempted to hang him. Moythe made so much noise the neighbours rescued him and bore him, half-dead, home to Fountain Gate.

Morgan Davyd continually attacked Fountain Gate and its servants. He played various tricks and even Twm himself was injured several times.

Rees ap Ieuan Gitto sent his wife and two retainers to serve 'your Majesty's process out of your Court of Exchequer' and the 'said Morgan Davyd, most contemptuously and irreverently took the said process and threw it to the ground and trod it under his feet in the dirt'.

Murder still on his mind, Morgan Davyd resolved to stab Twm as he sat in the Leet Court as Steward of the lordship of Caron (16 April 1601). The bloodthirsty Vicar concealed a dagger inside his shirt and crept towards Thomas Jones. But he was noticed and apprehended, whereon he swore to kill Twm by any means, notwithstanding what death he had to suffer afterward. The claspknife in Carmarthen

Museum may have been Twm's souvenir of the incident. (See photograph.)

Twm Sion Cati defended his retainers, property and the local folk against the evil Churchman. The Pardoned Welsh Robin Hood still sallied forth, previously into, but now against, lawlessness. Throughout his life Twm had lived dangerously, and his new respectability did not alter this.

Twm's home may well have been a fortified farmhouse, a safe retreat from the Vicar's men when the gates were shut. Apart from the fields of crops he kept cattle. The need for fortification is apparent when noting the long list of weapons the Vicar and his followers brought out against Twm, his retainers and the village folk: sword and dagger, a long bastynado or cudgel, a long pike of iron, a great axe, a main pike, a gleve,<sup>29</sup> a giant gleve, pitchforks and different kinds of javelins.

Twm married twice, fathering three children, Rhys, Margaret and an illegitimate son, John Moythe. In his Will, dated 17 May 1609, he made a bequest of 'to John Moythe, my base son, 9 cattle', who in the Bill of Complaint is referred to as 'a menial servant of your subject'.

Eleanor Pryce, another relative, was said to be 'your subject's maid servant' and 'your subject's cousin'.

His second marriage to Joan Williams of Ystradffyn, Rhandiemwyn, widow of Thomas Rhys Williams, a wealthy landowner and daughter of Sir John Price of the Priory of Brecon, adds greatly to legend.

Fact and fiction meet in curious fashion. A strange sequence of events began to take place at Ystradffyn. Joan's aged husband made his Will early September 1607 and died shortly afterwards. Joan married Thomas Jones within that same month.

So that Joan could retain £200 worth of gold and silver jewellery in addition to over £3,000 in land and goods legally left her, Thomas Jones and her brother-in-law John Winter helped her to alter her late husband's Will. However, the Executors, Thomas Phillipps, Gregorie Morris and William Lloyd, complained before the Star Chamber that, 'Thomas Jones et Joan uxor, late wife of the said Thomas Williams' had falsified her late husband's Will and had detained his goods.<sup>30</sup>

In an undated petition to Robert Cecil, Lord Salisbury, Twm requested that 'an action against him may be transferred to the local court on account of his old age'; and adds further that Lord Burghley 'did recon me to be his kinsman, for that he was descended from my greate graunfather, Howell Moythey'.<sup>31</sup>

But the 'heiress of Ystradffyn' had yet another suitor, Sir George Devereux, tenant of Llwynybrain near Llandovery. (He had been deeply involved in the rebellion against Elizabeth and was uncle to the Earl of Essex,<sup>32</sup> who on 25 February 1601, Ash Wednesday, at 8.00 a.m. was beheaded with one stroke of the axe. (See: CSP Domestic, 1598-1601, 588.))

J. Frederick Jones, in Thomas Jones of Tregaron alias Twm Shon Catti (1530-1609), states, 'On the floor of one of the bedrooms at Ystradffyn there is a strange indestructible red patch which is supposed to be a bloodstain'. He speculated on the 'origin of the stain which I saw as recently as the summer in 1935'.

'Did Sir George Devereux, aided by Joan stealthily murder poor Thomas Jones at dead of night?' And yet again, 'Did Thomas Jones obligingly die of old age after making his Will in Joan's favour, or is that everlasting stain the only evidence of his sudden departure at the dagger's point?'

Alas, on this point history is silent. Naturally, Joan married Sir George Devereux for women were 'hardened by the repetition of the marriage vow'.<sup>33</sup>

Twm died in affluent, if mysterious, circumstances. In contrast Dr John Dee, his cousin and correspondent for so many years died in extreme poverty at his home in Mortlake, tended only by his loyal daughter Katherine and ministered to by his son Arthur. His beloved, faithful wife Jane Fromond had died of the plague in 1605, leaving the old scholar lonely in his last years.

Nowadays nothing can be seen of Fountain Gate (Porth-y-ffynon) except a grass covered site.

'His home was a charming old house built out of the ruins of an old HAFOD which had belonged to the Gwaethfod family.'<sup>34</sup>

In 1894, when stones from the ruined walls were removed, two sandstone blocks, each bearing a heraldic emblem, were discovered and carefully preserved by Mr H. O. Evans of Werna. Hence these two blocks came to be known as 'The Werna Stones'. (See photograph.) These two stones are cherished and likewise preserved today in Tregaron Secondary School Museum.

The Western Mail, 2 March 1926 stated thus:

on two of the stones it will be seen that the coat of arms is that of the TEWDWR family. One was engrail and the other bordered (plain).

Dr Cyril Fox said that the dating of the heraldic carved stones which presented a lion rampart, one within an engrailed, the other within a plain border and with initials under . . . The letters showed notched serifs, and had bosses or expansions on the central line, e.g. of the 'I' and the curve of the 'D'. These features are normally found in inscriptions of the first half of the sixteenth century . . . I suggest they probably come from a house erected immediately after the Dissolution – about 1550 – a time, when, all over the country squires, enriched by monastic estates, were building new large houses. (Arch. Camb. LXXXVI. Part 2, p. 386.)

Such heraldic stones would have been regarded as precious, 'Tewdwr' being a princely family, and would have been carefully built into one of the inner walls of Porth-y-ffynon.

A third stone with different carving and without initials was taken from the ruins, in about 1868, and built into the wall of the home of the late Mr John Philip Rees, a mason descended from a long line of masons and Parish Clerk (1865–1904). However, despite an intensive search for this stone undertaken in Doldre by Robin E. Cousins and friends no trace of this third stone can be found. The suggestion has been put forward that modern progress probably cemented it over.

In Tregaron, The W.I. looks around its Town and Country a fourth stone is mentioned on page 31. Earlier in this excellent booklet, on page 27, it notes:

THE WERNA STONES Courtesy Tregaron Secondary School

towards Port Eion, you pass Neuadd Las, a modern bungalow standing on the very ancient industrial site of a flint chipping floor in Mesolithic times, probably when Gors Caron was a lake . . . On the other bank of the river (Afon Teifi) lies Penybont Farm, whose farmhouse, once a modest country mansion, was built in 1630 by the grandfather of the renowned Thomas Johnes of Hafod.

The Celtic lands abound in folktales of underwater cities and palaces – Sir John Rhys recorded that in the late nineteenth century Welsh mothers still warned their children not to stray too far from their homes when the mist was thick lest they should be snatched away by the fairies to their dwellings beneath the lakes.

Tregaron has a fascinating legend that sounds very much like a Welsh version of Sodom and Gomorrah. North of Tregaron is Llyn-y-Maes, a small lake. Old Tregaronians (it is said) indulged themselves nightly in exotic revelry, great feasts and lewd orgies. Naturally, the long-bearded prophet warned them of fire, flood and destruction if they did not mend their ways – alas, to no avail . . . One night lightning struck, setting the village afire, following which came a flood overwhelming every one of the revellers; those not burnt were drowned and the village sank slowly into the waters of the lake. It sounds like the kind of tale Vicar Morgan Davyd would have preached to his parishioners. The legend may have originated from the logs in the peat from the adjacent bog which is the largest outside Ireland in the British Isles. 'Now it is the haunt of students of botany, zoology and geomorphology, and increasingly of bird-watchers eager to see the Red Kite in its main breeding ground'.<sup>35</sup>

So to a conclusion: having set Thomas Jones in his rightful historical context, what of his role as Twm Sion Cati, the Welsh Robin Hood? It must be remembered that the dominant philosophy of the Tudor Era was not only that of serious theologians, hard-headed politicians and ambitious seamen but a world where spirits, fairies, and conjurors found their way into the poetry of the age. The preoccupation of both high and low rank found expression in the enchantment of myth and legend, popular traditions and the extension of magic penetrating into profound spheres of all knowledge and experience.

I like to think of Twm, his dark handsome face appearing out of the gloom playing tricks on corrupt authority or fishing salmon from the Teifi, meditating on a poem to his latest love. May he live long in the folklore of Wales.

Robert Turner of 'Holshott'

(C. 1620 – 1665?)

The Astrological Botanist and the Books of the Elizabethan Magi

by Robin E. Cousins

Robert Turner lived during the seventeenth century and is known today for his translations of important magical and alchemical texts, mostly dating from the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries. These works include such famous titles as the Ars Notoria: the Notary Art of Solomon, Of the Supreme Mysteries of Nature by Paracelsus, and Henry Cornelius Agrippa's Fourth Book of Occult Philosophy. Such treatises were highly influential in Elizabethan occult circles, even though they were written in Latin and sometimes only available in manuscript form. John Dee, for example, was strongly influenced by Agrippa, whose works he often consulted during the course of magical experiments. Dee possessed an awesome library of nearly 4,000 printed books and manuscripts, which included large sections devoted to the works of Paracelsus (1493–1541) and Ramon Lull (1234–1316). The library was at the disposal of Dee's circle of friends and was even visited by Queen Elizabeth on 10 March 1575. Occult writings, such as Dee possessed, were virtually inaccessible to the general public and could be so today, if it were not for the scholastic labours of Robert Turner. His work has helped to provide an insight into the magical world of the sixteenth century, not only for his contemporaries, but for occultists and researchers ever since.

Although Turner flourished fifty years after John Dee, who had died in 1608, his translations helped to keep the Elizabethan hermetic tradition alive, long after the glory of that era had faded. The translations have never been surpassed and are frequently consulted by the twentieth-century magician. Turner's translation of the Fourth Book has been particularly influential. The book is attributed to Agrippa (1486–1535) and was originally published in Latin at Marburg in 1559. Dee owned a copy of this edition; but, as a result of Turner's translation, by the 1670s no self-respecting astrologer or herbalist could be found without a copy of the book upon their table. Over a hundred years later, Francis Barrett employed the translation when compiling The Magus (1801). He notes that the Fourth Book was 'unavailable except for large amounts', thereby demonstrating the worth of Turner's work. This was echoed by A. E. Waite, a man seldom free with compliments, who decided to 'depart from my usual custom of translating at first hand and make use . . . of the version of Robert Turner, which is quite faithful and has, moreover, the pleasant 'flavour of antiquity'.<sup>1</sup>

The Fourth Book also incorporates Turner's translations of five additional magical manuscripts, including Of Geomancy which is attributed to Agrippa; the Heptameron; or Magical Elements which is ascribed to Peter de Abano (1250–1317) and gives specific details on the invocation of angels; the Isagoge by Georg Pictorius von Villingen (c.1500–1569) which was published in Basel in 1563; Astronomical Geomancy possibly by Gerard of Cremona (1114–1187); and the Arbatel of Magick, an anonymous work published in Basel in 1575. Dee certainly possessed works by Peter de Abano, who had been accused of practising sorcery. After his death, Peter was burnt in effigy and the reading of his 'abominable' books was forbidden.

Both the Fourth Book and Of the Supreme Mysteries of Nature are still in demand and were republished recently, the latter book being entitled Archidoxes of Magic (1975). The Ars Notoria was reprinted in 1987, but unfortunately omits Turner's introduction.

In his day Robert Turner was equally well-known as an able astrologer and herbalist, and his later books reflect this interest. In 1664 Turner published his herbal, ΒΟΤΑΝΟΛΟΓΙΑ. The Brittish Physician [Botanologia], which was based on the Doctrine of Signatures and was similar to Culpeper's herbal of 1653. Turner also wrote and translated medical works and compounded herbal medicines for the plague and other ailments. He sold the medicines direct to the public from his house in Christopher Alley,<sup>2</sup> near St Paul's, and through his booksellers. He claimed his remedies far exceeded the 'intellect of the Modern Speculator of Spittlefields', thereby revealing his dislike of the successful Nicholas Culpeper.

The Early Years

Biographical details of Robert Turner are sketchy. The entry in the Dictionary of National Biography (DNB) is short and is mostly devoted to a description of his publications. His books, however, do provide some knowledge of his ideas and the occasional biographical detail. Other sources of information are scarce and, unfortunately, the local parish records of Christchurch, Newgate Street, for the period from 1588 to September 1666 were destroyed in the Great Fire. In fact, until now the DNB provided the most extensive information available. It is from this work that the description 'Robert Turner of Holshott' is derived, which effectively distinguishes him from other famous namesakes. The former manor of Holdshott was the home of Turner's father for some years and is today part of the parish of Heckfield in North Hampshire. His father lived in the extreme south of the parish by some boggy ground, adjoining the Grove Copse. Turner describes himself as 'Robert Turner of Holshott' in four of his books and dedicates the works to notables of neighbouring villages, even though the books themselves bear a London address.

Little is known of Turner's early life. He was born in 'my Countrey of Hampshire'<sup>3</sup> about 1620, but not necessarily in Holdshott. The local parish registers do not contain any reference to him, although Turners certainly lived in the area at the time. On 17 June 1636, at the age of 16, he was admitted to Christ's College, Cambridge, from where he matriculated as a Pensioner. Most undergraduates belonged to this class and were mainly the sons of small landowners, the clergy, or the fairly 'well-to-do'. Poorer students were known as 'Sizars', while the sons of the landed gentry or the aristocracy were called 'Fellow Commoners'. Sizars were invariably servants to their tutors or the Fellows, in order to help with expenses – a problem which did not affect Robert Turner, whose tutor was a certain Mr Brearley. On 9 October 1637, Turner was admitted at the Middle Temple. He obtained his BA in 1639 and entered Lincoln's Inn during the November of that year.

The Inns of Court were considered as finishing schools for wealthy young men from Oxford or Cambridge. They continued their education with the study of law at one of the Inns and about 80 per cent of the intake came from the landed classes. Even if they did not intend to practise, a knowledge of the law was always useful to gentlemen of property, especially during the later seventeenth century, when dealing with the many disputes resulting from the land confiscations of The Commonwealth. Unlike many, however, Turner did choose to practise the law, although apparently not until the late 1650s. On 14 June 1665, he is described as a 'frequent solicitor',<sup>4</sup> and, indeed, his name is recorded in the Calendar of State Papers on several occasions between 1658 and 1665, either as a defending counsel or as a prosecutor.

An interesting tale<sup>5</sup> survives from the time when Turner was a resident of Lincoln's Inn. On Friday, 3 July 1640, Turner was drinking in the 'Three Cranes' in Chancery Lane with five companions, when John Skelton, one of a group in an adjoining room,

LYDE GREEN, HOLDSHOTT with a view of the boggy ground
 'Where my father dwells, adjoining the . . . Grove'. (Turner Botanologia p. 274)
 No trace of the house exists today Photograph R. E. Cousins accused the six of throwing wine into his room. They retaliated by throwing a glass of wine over the heads of Skelton and one of his friends, after which a fight developed. Stephen Holyer, a friend of Skelton, claimed that Turner's group called for a 'pottle of sack' and forced them to drink the health of the traitorous Archbishop of Canterbury, William Laud.<sup>6</sup> Holyer's cloak was then given to the vintner's wife to pay for the bill and he was carried to a pump and doused in water. This was followed by a beating, but Turner and his friends denied Holyer's accusations and said that he willingly left his cloak for payment. Their version of the event was verified by Thomas Tapping, the vintner's servant, although the notorious toast apparently did occur. After the Lords had read an affidavit sworn by Skelton and Holyer complaining of the 'unprovoked' attack, an Order in Council was issued on 17 July demanding that Turner and his friends account for themselves. The matter was dropped, however, since the testimonies of Turner, four of his companions, and the vintner's boy outnumbered those of their accusers.

Between 1640 and the publication of Turner's first book, ΜΙΚΡΟΚΟΣΜΟΣ. A Description of the Little World, Being a Discovery of the Body of Man [Mikrokosmos], in 1654, virtually nothing is known of his activities. At some point he lived in Wokingham<sup>7</sup> and his early interest in astrological herbalism is evidenced, when he wrote that, in 1644, he had 'taken water out of a hollow beech in Bramsil Park in Hampshire, which has cured the Itch'.<sup>8</sup> Later Turner may have entered domestic service, for when a certain 'William Allen, late of Grimston, Norfolk, but now of London', died in March 1647, he bequeathed to my worthy friend and kinsman Sir John Thorowgood my diamond ring and to his good lady and wife the picture in my chamber . . . To Robert Turner, a servant to Sir John Thorowgood, one black suit of clothes and boots.<sup>9</sup>

Possibly a different Robert Turner; but, Turner did dedicate the Mikrokosmos to the 'Lady Thorowgood, wife of the Right Woshipfull, Sir John Thorowgood of Kensington . . . for your manifold and extraordinary favours and curtesies exhibited towards me in both sickness and health'. He begs her to 'pardon his boldness in this and command me in what liberal service you please'. The somewhat obsequious nature of the dedication may reflect that Turner had once been a servant of the Thorowgoods, while the coincidence of the names certainly supports this possibility.

Diabolical Sorceries

By the mid-1650s, Turner was living in Carpenter's Yard, which was not far from Christopher Alley, where he eventually dwelt. The yard was to the south of Little Britain, with a passage to the Town Ditch, a covered sewer. The yard was possibly located in the northern part of Christ's Hospital, which had been founded in 1553 as a school for orphans. The Hospital complex, a crowded site of 'courts, yards and places', consisted of the old buildings of the former Greyfriars Monastery (dissolved 1538) and included Christ Church, the parish church. Only the southern half was occupied by the institution, the northern section being leased to tenants, such as Robert Turner, in order to increase the Hospital revenues. Little Britain was well-known in the seventeenth century for its printing offices and booksellers and this would have been useful to Turner, who was then at his literary peak. The area was largely destroyed in the Great Fire of 1666 and, today, the site of Carpenter's Yard is occupied by King Edward Street. The Hospital was rebuilt by Wren, but later demolished to make way for the General Post Office.

During the Civil War and the Commonwealth (1642–1660), an end was seen to the stranglehold of the Church over the land. Ecclesiastical censorship ceased as did Church control over education and this resulted in greater intellectual freedom. Sects, hitherto illegal, met and discussed their views in public and it became much easier to write and publish on formerly taboo subjects. The publication of Turner's translations of Agrippa, Paracelsus and 'Solomon' would not have been possible during Laud's reign of terror and he could have been charged with witchcraft. In fact, such was the revival of hermeticism in the 1650s that more magical and alchemical books were published at this time than in the whole of the previous century.

The intellectual climate was thus an inspiration to Turner's Renaissance spirit. He translated and annotated the early texts for the advancement of learning and for the enlightenment of the general public. In the introduction to Astrological Opticks (1655) he explains that the works of 'Antient' authors are 'scarce to be had in the originall'. He had translated the book, so that it could be 'revived to see the light again' and not 'dye in obscurity'. The book concerned was Astrolabium Planum (1488), which had been compiled in Augsburg by Johann Engel or Angelus (1472–1512) and later reprinted in Venice in 1494. Similarly, in his translation of Paracelsus's Of the Chymical Transmutation, Genealogy and Generation of Metals and Minerals (1657), he writes: 'I revived them [these treatises] to posterity, hoping there may yet come a thankful age, in which learning may see Halcyon dayes.' The book had been originally published in Latin in 1576. Bound with the translation was a little work by another of Dee's favourite philosophers, Ramon Lull, entitled Philosophical and Chymical Experiments of that famous Philosopher Raymond Lully; containing the right and due composition of both Elixirs [and] the admirable and perfect way of making the great Stone of the Philosophers. Turner was assisted with his translation by a mysterious 'W. W., Student in the Celestial Sciences'.

Most of Turner's publications contain an Address to the Reader or an introduction in which he describes the object of the work and tries to dispel popular misconceptions. The introductions are invariably provocative, especially in the works dealing with the occult. He endeavours to educate people to distinguish between high magic, which has evolved from 'God and the Cosmos', and base witchcraft, sorcery and superstition. Today, some three hundred years later, the distinction still remains unclear in the minds of many people. To make his point he often deliberately insults the reader, but rapidly apologises to those who are outside of his attacks. For example, in the preface to his translation of Agrippa's Fourth Book Turner states that Magick itself, which the ancients did so divinely contemplate, is scandalized with bearing the badg of all diabolical sorceries . . . and as dogges barke at those they know not: so doe many condemne and hate things they understand not . . . Magicke and Witchcraft are far differing Sciences.

He expected some calumnies and obtreactions against this, from the malicious prejudiced man, and the lazie affecters of Ignorance, of whom this age swarms . . . But I incite the Reader to a charitable opinion hereof. . . And if there be any scandal in this enterprise of mine, it is taken, not given.

Readers are divided into four categories, namely

Spunges, which attract all without distinguishing; Hour-glasses, which receive, and pour out as fast; Bags, which retain onely the dregs of Spices, and let the Wine escape; and Sieves, which retain the best onely.

He presents the Fourth Book to the last group 'knowing that they may reap good thereby'.

Similarly, in Astrologicall Opticks, Turner contributed a long introductory diatribe against the ignorance and superstition of the 'Vulgar People', who were frightened by those Raw-heads and Bloody-bones, where-with Mothers use to scare their Children from running abroad.

Moreover, the ignorant believed all old women to be witches, who made pacts with the Devil and rode up and down in the Aire with him; [and danced] abroad like Cats while their Bodies have lain as dead by their Husbands.

As a result of believing these 'idle stories', the people had, in fact, the Devil as a tutor. To counteract this superstition, Turner had a simple remedy which is still pertinent today.

Let every one learne to know himselfe and keepe the Devill out of his own bosome and he need not feare him any where else.

One year later in his translation of Paracelsus's Of the Supreme Mysteries of Nature (1656), Turner defines the Devil for the benefit of the 'ignorant', because their 'Priests that should teach them knowledge, either cannot or else will not'.

As in the Microcosmos or little world Man, the Soul is the best part, and the excrement the worst; so in the great world, as the Universal creating Spirit is the best part, so is the Devil the excrement of that Universal Spirit.

The book formed part of the Archidoxes Magicae of Paracelsus which had been published in Latin at Cracow in 1569.

The Ars Notoria: the Notary Art of Solomon (1657) conducted people further into the realms of the holy magician. In the introduction to this translation, Turner told the 'ingenious reader' that the book's 'virtues will soon be known, if practised, and the blasts of vice dispersed'.

The Ars Notoria and the *Lemegeton

The Ars Notoria, the magical art of memory, flourished during the Middle Ages, although its origins are attributed to Solomon and Apollonius of Tyana. It was a process by which the magician could instantly gain knowledge or memory of all the arts and sciences. Each branch of knowledge or subject area was assigned a set of magical seals and characters, known as notae. To set the process into operation, the appropriate notae were contemplated whilst reciting angelic names and magical orisons. However, it was regarded as a diabolical form of magic, since the knowledge was quickly acquired from 'demons' without honest study. As a consequence, the Art was condemned by Thomas Aquinas (c. 1225–1274) and subsequent orthodox authorities. Nevertheless, in the sixteenth century, treatises on improving the memory were in demand, whether or not they were linked with works of necromancy and divination. Dee possessed two manuscript copies of the Ars Notoria and Simon Forman (1552–1611) records in his diary that in 1600 he 'wrote out the two bookes of "De Arte Memoratus" of Apollonius Niger, drawn with gould, of the seven liberal sciences'.<sup>10</sup> Robert Fludd (1574–1637) also encountered the Ars Notoria while in Toulouse during his European travels between 1600 and 1605. Turner's translation is based on a sixteenth-century Latin manuscript (Ashmole 5151) 'which Apollonius calleth "The Golden Flowers" . . . and this is Confirmed. Composed and Approved by the Authority of Solomon'.

The importance of the Ars Notoria has declined somewhat over the past two hundred years, owing to its association with the spurious grimoire of the Lemegeton: The Lesser Key of Solomon, a seventeenth-century compilation of five independent 'Solomonic' magical writings united by a descriptive title-page. The Lemegeton consists of Goetia: the Book of Evil Spirits, Theurgia-Goetia, the Pauline Art, the Art Almadel, and the Ars Notoria. It was probably compiled by an anonymous occultist who wished to assemble the lesser works attributed to Solomon into one convenient volume.

Twentieth-century occultists, such as A. E. Waite, have seen fit to distort the facts surrounding the composition of the Lemegeton, extolling the work as a legendary grimoire and overlooking the earlier independent existence of its individual parts. The Elizabethan magi knew nothing of the Lemegeton, but they were familiar with the contents. A form of the Goetia, for example, had appeared in Latin as the Pseudomonarchia Daemonum in Johann Wier's De Praestigiis Daemonum which was published in Basel in 1563. The Pseudomonarchia was later translated into English by T. R. in 1570 and printed in Reginald Scot's Discoverie of Witchcraft (1584). As the warden of Christ's College, Manchester between 1596 and 1605, Dee often had to act as an adviser about cases of witchcraft and Wier's book was one of the works he consulted or lent to investigators.

Similarly, the Theurgia-Goetia is a version of the first book of the Steganographia of Johannes Trithemius, Abbot of Sponheim (1462–1516), which was written in 1500, while the third book of the Lemegeton, the Pauline Art, forms part of a sixteenth-century Latin manuscript in the Bibliothèque Nationale (BN 7170A). The Pauline Art itself was supposedly discovered by the Apostle Paul and delivered by him at Corinth. Likewise, the Art Almadel, which deals with the spirits of the Four Altitudes, can be found in a fifteenth-century manuscript in Florence (Florence II-iii-24). By the sixteenth century, both the Pauline Art and the Art Almadel, like the Ars Notoria, had been condemned as sinful and superstitious magic. The early history of the fifth book, the Ars Notoria, has been discussed.

Sloane Manuscripts 2731 and 3648 are the main sources of the Lemegeton, although the Ars Notoria is omitted from Sloane 2731. Nevertheless, the Ars Notoria of the 'complete' Sloane 3648 is none other than an ink-blotted and often illegible transcript of Robert Turner's published translation of 1657. The manuscript is, in fact, a rendering of an untraceable manuscript compiled in 1640/1, a fact determined by the inclusion of the Angels of the Hours of the Day and Night for Wednesday, 10 March 1641, as an example of the daily angelic calculations required for the Pauline Art. The original compilation of the Lemegeton, therefore, was made too early for the inclusion of Turner's translation of the Ars Notoria. This was added to Sloane 3648, probably for the benefit of the transcriber, along with sections from the Archidoxes Magicae of Paracelsus (not Turner's translation) and scraps from the English translation of Book Two of Agrippa's Occult Philosophy (1651).

Sloane 2731 was commenced on 18 January 1687<sup>11</sup> and was a later attempt to produce a neat transcript from more than one manuscript of the Lemegeton, including Sloane 3648 and possibly the mysterious work of 1640/1. Variations in the names of the Goetic spirits are noted in the margins and all derive from Sloane 3648. Turner's Ars Notoria was omitted from Sloane 2731, possibly because it was still available from booksellers and also because this part of Sloane 3648 is particularly illegible. The Lemegeton manuscripts, therefore, are useful compilations of early grimoires, adapted to suit the requirements of individual seventeenth-century magicians, rather than copies of a medieval comprehensive grimoire.

A recent attempt<sup>12</sup> to publish the complete Lemegeton of Sloane 3648 for the first time was marred by crudely drawn illustrations and the omission of the Ars Notoria, which was condemned as 'literary tripe' by the editor, who failed to understand the significance of the magical art of memory.

Glorify thy Holy and unspeakable Name this day in my heart, and strengthen my intellectual understanding; increase my memory, and confirm my eloquence; make my tongue ready, quick, and perfect in thy Sciences and Scriptures, that by thy power given unto me, and thy wisdom taught in my heart, I may praise thee, and know and understand thy Holy Name.<sup>13</sup>

Fortunately, the omission was offset, when a new American reprint of Turner's translation was published in 1987.

Transition

Robert Turner's opinions were well-respected. He associated with a circle of well-known contemporary astrologers, such as William Lilly (1602–1681), Doctor Nicholas Fiske, (1573–1659?) and the latter's pupil, John Gadbury (1627–1704), who had drawn a natal chart for Culpeper. These astrologers, along with several Cambridge scholars, wrote commendary epistles and poems which were printed at the beginning of Turner's works. For instance, Lilly wrote in Astrological Opticks that Turner 'hath very well translated it and delivered the Astrological sense of every sentence judiciously'. Similar compliments were not uncommon in Turner's books. Lilly, incidentally, had fruitlessly endeavoured to discover buried treasure in the cloisters of Westminster Abbey in 1634, using the magical circle and invocatory methods detailed in a Latin manuscript copy of the Ars Notoria.

Turner himself often dedicated his works to colleagues from Christ's College and to friends, such as the notorious quack or 'Empiricus Famosus', Doctor Trigge of Tower Wharf, who invented the worthless Golden Vatican Pills which allegedly cured all diseases. The landed gentry were also honoured, including the aforementioned Lady Thorowgood; Mrs Elizabeth Creswell, widow of Thomas Creswell, whose family had owned the Manor of Heckfield since the fifteenth century; and Sir William Pitt of Stratfield Saye, Hampshire.

Pitt was complimented with Sal, Lumen et Spiritus Mundi Philosophici (1657) which was one of Turner's final alchemical translations. The book had been written originally in French by Clovis Hesteau, Sieur de Nuysement, at the turn of the seventeenth century. Turner translated the 1651 Latin edition of Ludwig Combach of Hesse (1590–1657). The purpose of publishing this 'piece of Hermetical Philosophy which is well-seasoned with Salt' was to provide information on the Salt of the Philosophers, the third of the Three Alchemical Principles, which form the primal stage of manifestation. Turner believed sufficient had been published on Mercury and Sulphur, the two other Principles of Nature, and hoped that this work would restore the balance. For the 'intelligent and deserving' the book would be a 'great revealed secret', but not so for those 'degenerate bastards . . . not a whit tintured with the Salt of the Philosophers'.

With the advent of the Restoration in 1660, the ecclesiastical hierarchy returned and the Church gained more power. Dissenters found themselves excluded from State office and university, and in this atmosphere there was not the same freedom to publish works on magic. The publication of Meric Casaubon's A True and Faithful Relation of what passed for many Years between Dr John Dee . . . and some Spirits in 1659 had already helped to create a reaction against occultism. Casaubon deliberately set out to discredit Dee and his contemporary followers, so that he (Casaubon) could promote religion and refute charges of atheism which had been levelled against him. He succeeded only too well. Dee's maligned reputation as the dupe of Edward Kelly and as a foolish conjuror of angels stemmed from Casaubon and lasted well into the twentieth century.

The Licensing Act of 1663 kept a close watch on the press, in order to prevent the publication of 'heretical' works. The Act ensured that books could not be published without prior consultation with the Church or State. At the same time, the number of master printers in the country were reduced to twenty. As a consequence, Turner was forced to abandon the translation of further occult treatises. He concentrated instead upon his interest in medicine and the Doctrine of Signatures, which fortunately proved successful for him.

By 1657 he had already published four medical books, including translations of two sixteenth-century works, the Compleat Bone-Setter (1656) of Thomas Moulton (fl. 1540?), a self-styled 'Doctor of Divinity of the Order of Friar Preachers', and the Enchiridion Medicum (1657), both of which he substantially enlarged. The latter work formed the English translation of Praxis Medicorum by John Sadler, who had died in 1595. Turner was also the author of the curiously entitled The Woman's Counsellor, or the Feminine Physician, modestly treating of such occult accidents and secret diseases incident to that sex (1657?), in which he displays a rare concern for women and their problems. The world of writing and publishing was a male domain at that time with most published works reflecting this, and so it was unusual for a man to produce a book sympathetic to women. Turner writes in Of the Chymical Transmutation that he hoped the Women's Counsellor would enable women to become their 'own helpers in such private infirmities, as too much modesty they oft-times to their own hurt conceal'.

The Botanologia and the Doctrine of Signatures

In March 1663, Turner completed his magnum opus, the comprehensive and astrological herbal, BOTANOLOGIA. The Brittish Physician; or, the Nature and Vertues of English Plants. As the subject matter could hardly rate as dangerous occultism, its publication was guaranteed. The book was published in 1664 and was his first work for seven years. Turner used Holdshott as an occasional base for his field studies, since several herbs are noted as growing in his father's garden or elsewhere in the neighbourhood.

The Botanologia was based on the Doctrine of Signatures, in which Turner was a firm believer. The Doctrine had a strong following during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries and had been popularised by Paracelsus (1483–1541), who had expanded the ancient belief for guidance in selecting herbal remedies to cure the ailments of his patients. According to this dogma, every plant bore a 'signature' of its medical application. In the Botanologia, Turner wrote that 'God hath imprinted upon the Plants, Herbs and Flowers, as it were in Hieroglyphicks, the very Signature of their Vertues'. Plants could resemble the part of the body or the ailment which they could cure. For example, walnuts could treat diseases of the brain, to which the kernel was likened, while plants with a yellow sap were good for jaundice. Signatures also represented dangerous animals. The plants in this case would act as an antidote. Hence Adder's Tongue cured the bite of the Adder. Some herbs, however, were left blank in order to encourage people to find the appropriate properties for themselves. In addition, herbs were placed under the dominion of one of the five planets, the Sun or the Moon, together with a sign of the Zodiac. Different parts of the body, moreover, were governed by similar astrological influences. Diseases were felt to be caused by particular planets and could be healed by a herb of the opposing planet. In this way an illness produced by Jupiter was curable by a herb under the sovereignty of Mercury. Alternatively, the malady could be cured 'sympathetically' by employing plants belonging to the planet causing the disease. These particular aspects of the Doctrine of Signatures were reflected in Turner's first book, Mikrokosmos, which included sections on the 'sicknesses attributed to the twelve Signes and Planets, with their Natures'.

In England the Doctrine had been promoted by Turner's contemporary, Nicholas Culpeper, with his herbal, The English Physician Enlarged, with 369 Medicines made of English Herbs. Published in 1653 and still in demand today, the book was written in a language which appealed to the ordinary person. Turner's Botanologia. The Brittish Physician, which deliberately aped the title of Culpeper's book, unfortunately remained forever in the shadow of that work with which it could never compete. After its initial publication, the Botanologia was sufficiently successful to be reprinted in 1687, but it is now forgotten.

The Botanologia presented the means whereby 'people may gather their own Physick under every Hedge, or in their Gardens . . . ; so that . . . they may become their own Physicians'. Almost five hundred herbs, plants and spices are described alphabetically, together with their properties and astrological government. A table of diseases with their herbal cures is appended. Nevertheless, the reader is warned not to abuse the plants by making sacrifices to them and uttering charms over them like the 'Cacochymists, Medean Hags and Sorcerers now adays; who . . . out of some Diabolical intention search after the more Magical and Occult Vertues of Herbs and Plants to accomplish some wickedness'.

Turner respects the discoveries of pioneer Elizabethan herbalist, John Gerard (1545-1607); but Culpeper, whom Turner considered a serious rival, is insulted throughout the Botanologia. 'Culpeper teacheth how to kill serpents with [Alkanet] . . . but this is as ridiculous as Culpeper himself', who was obviously 'beside the saddle' when attributing Dodder of Thyme to Saturn. 'I am sure his logick is false', attacked Turner; but Culpeper had died of tuberculosis in 1654 and was unable to reply.

Herbalism versus the Plague

In 1665 Turner produced a new edition of the Compleat Bone-Setter, which proved to be his final work and the last published in his lifetime. The book bore little relation to Moulton's original and included a portrait of Turner and a section on 'Treating the Pestilence'. Just as osteopathy is disapproved of by the medical profession today, bone-setting was regarded as charlatantry by the College of Physicians, the seventeenth-century medical authorities, because the skill was considered hereditary and instinctual and not scientifically acquired. Nevertheless, with the panic and desperation caused by the plague, which had begun in the first week of June 1665, any book on self-help was welcome. The book was dated 25 June 1665 and was, therefore, well-timed, particularly as Turner himself was running short of funds. He had been forced to transfer a prosecution to a Mr Peck through lack of money, so revenue from the sale of the book would have been helpful. The book would have been particularly appealing, for Turner was at pains to write in 'plain English', as he states in the introduction, so that 'people who are able, may easily make medicines for themselves'.

The Compleat Bone-Setter extensively advertised Turner's sideline in medical remedies. Various treatments are listed which were available from his house in Christopher Alley or from his bookseller, Thomas Rooks, at the Lamb and Ink-Bottle at the east-end of St Paul's. Regrettably, some of the remedies ring of quackery and possibly Turner, like many others, may have been capitalising on the general ill health of the plague-stricken city. His most exotic remedy was the 'Sovereign Antidote against the Plague, and all infectious Diseases, Foggie and unhealthy Airs, Essex and Kentish Agues'. This was sold by Rooks along with the Ars Notoria and the Fourth Book, and an 'excellent powder to procure easie delivery in Child-bearing women'. From his house, Turner sold a 'Balsam for Sore Eyes, and for preservation of the Sight' and his 'Approved Dentifrices for cleansing the Teeth'. The book itself included several remedies and treatments for all stages of the plague. Before going 'abroad out of thy house' it was recommended to drink nine spoonfuls of white wine in a saucer of vinegar. Roses, camphor, cinnamon, mace, nutmeg, amber, citron peel and musk could be mixed with red storax and laudanum to provide a pomander, while another protective antiseptic drink demanded a spoonful of beaten gunpowder stirred into six spoonfuls of Aqua Vitae.<sup>14</sup>

Unfortunately, the 'Sovereign Antidote' and the other remedies did not work for Turner himself. The DNB speculation that he was a victim of the plague is most probably correct. His name is mentioned for the last time in the Calendar of State Papers during June 1665. No further publications appeared, apart from reprints of the Woman's Counsellor in 1686 and the Botanologia in 1687. The latter includes the whole of the 1664 introduction, but the date is omitted, and the accompanying portrait of Turner is a copy of the Compleat Bone-Setter portrait.

The City of London was severely afflicted by the plague. Nearly 1200 people died in the City during the week of 12 September 1665, and 48 of these were buried in Christ Church, the parish in which Turner lived. If the plague was indeed his fate, he probably suffered an anonymous burial in one of the communal graves for plague victims.

The Loss of the Steganographia of Trithemius

Before the Restoration curtailed his occult studies, Robert Turner had planned to produce English translations of the remainder of the Archidoxes Magicae of Paracelsus, Agrippa's Occult Philosophy, and the Steganographia of Trithemius. In the introduction to Of the Supreme Mysteries of Nature, Turner writes:

Shortly expect (Deo volente) the other parts [of Paracelsus] hereof, and some comments on this and them, together with the famous art of Steganography, Authore Tritemio, to speak our own Language; and perhaps the Occult Philosophy of Agrippa digested into a plainer method.

Sadly, his early death meant that the work was never completed, if even commenced, with resultant loss to occult scholarship.

Agrippa and Paracelsus were supposedly pupils of Johannes Trithemius and together the three exercised considerable influence upon the magical tradition of England and Europe during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. Both Dee and Simon Forman considered the Steganographia an important instructional source on Cabalistic Angel Magic. Forman recorded in his diary that he had made a copy of the four books of the Steganographia in the year 1600, while Dee obtained a manuscript copy much earlier in 1562, during a visit to Antwerp. On 16 February 1563, Dee excitedly wrote to Sir William Cecil about the acquisition.

I have purchased on boke, for which a Thowsand Crownes have ben by others offred, and yet could not be obteyned. A boke, for which many a lerned man hath long sowght, and dayly yet doth seeke: Whose use is greater than the fame thereof is spread: the name thereof to you is not unknowne: The title is on this wise, Steganographia Joannis Tritemij . . . Of this Boke the one half (with contynuall Labor and watch, the most part of X days) have I copied oute.<sup>15</sup>

The Steganographia consists of three books with a Clavis Steganographia or 'Special Key' to the operations detailed in the first three volumes. Together these constituted the four books which Forman copied. The first book was completed on 27 March 1500 and, throughout the sixteenth century, the whole work secretly circulated in manuscript form, until it was published in Frankfurt in 1606. Complete editions of the Steganographia were readily available when Robert Turner was planning his translation, but unfortunately this is no longer the case. A recent translation<sup>16</sup> omits the second book and the key, as these volumes are believed lost. Had Turner's translation been available, the work could have been studied more thoroughly over the past 300 years, with reprints presenting little problem.

The Steganographia was undoubtedly the inspiration for Agrippa's Occult Philosophy, which was published in Cologne in 1533. The book was much studied by Dee, who had two copies in his library. In 1510 Agrippa visited Trithemius at his abbey at Sponheim near Mainz and presented the Abbot with the first draft of the Occult Philosophy. It was translated into English by John French (1616?–1657)<sup>17</sup> and published in 1651, but Turner evidently felt that he could improve upon this translation. Nevertheless, this was not to be. In the same address to the reader in which he writes of his future plans, Robert Turner apologises for a delay in producing a new translation of Agrippa with a doom-laden quote from Ovid's Metamorphoses, strangely prophetic of the forthcoming troubles of the 1660s.

NUBILA SUNT SUBITIS TEMPORA NOSTRA MALIS

'Our times are suddenly clouded with evil' – and for Robert Turner regrettably they were.

EDWARD KELLY 1555-1595

Edward Kelly

Seer, Conjuror and Alchemist

The early life and movements of Edward Kelly<sup>1</sup> provide a subject worthy of further research. Of this man who exerted such a powerful influence over the learned Dr John Dee and fostered an occult tradition which has survived to the present day, surprisingly little is known.

According to the account given in Anthony à Wood's Athenae Oxoniensis (1813) Kelly was born at Worcester on 1 August 1555. The name of his father remains unknown, but it is said that he was an apothecary and of sufficient means to send his son to Oxford. Strangely, there is no record of any Edward Kelly having entered the University at that time, but several young men were admitted under the name of Talbot. As we have seen, in the early spiritual diaries, Dee first uses the name Talbot to introduce the mysterious character who entered his service during 1582, and who shortly after changed his name to Kelly. The reason for the alias is unknown, but most commentators believe (perhaps with some justification) that Talbot adopted the name Kelly to escape involvement with the law.

It seems that, after some sort of trouble, Kelly left Oxford in a hurry and travelled to Lancaster. Here he fell foul of the authorities on the grounds of forgery, and for this crime he is said to have been pilloried and deprived of his ears. It seems unlikely, however, that Kelly in fact suffered the last of these punishments, as Dee would hardly have imperilled his position at Court and his scientific reputation by his association with one branded as a common criminal.

Kelly spent some time travelling in Wales where, we are informed, he came into possession of the 'Book of St Dunstan', an alchemical tract, and the two powders of projection; whereby metals could be transmuted to gold and silver. Dee often mentions the book and powders in his diaries, but I can find no record of their use.

On moving to London Kelly took up the post of secretary for Thomas Allen who was, it seems, a magician of some reputation. Dr Peter French suggests that Kelly may have acquired some of his occult knowledge while in Allen's employ.<sup>2</sup>

While at Lancaster he attempted to raise the dead in the churchyard of Walton le Dale. In his book Ancient Funerall Monuments, John Weever relates how Kelly and his companion Paul Waring dug up the corpse of a man recently buried and 'by their incantations . . . made him to speak . . . strange predictions'.

Although history marks Kelly as an impostor and scoundrel of the lowest morals, it is not easy to see how he would be able to convince Dee of his scrying abilities so fully if the Angelic messages were complete fabrication: Dee may not have been worldly-wise in all matters, but he was certainly not a fool. In addition the very nature of the 'received' material implies a standard of education, and a memory capacity, far beyond that possessed by Kelly. When one compares the content of the Englished angelic keys, with the literary style of Kelly's three alchemical works – The Stone of the Philosophers, The Humid Way and The Theatre of Terrestrial Astronomy<sup>3</sup> – there seems no doubt that a quite different personality is involved. Perhaps the spirits did speak through Kelly, or was it some hidden facet of his mind which emerged only during trance? Whatever the answer I feel sure that the scope, magnitude, and complexity of Dee's angel-magic rules out the involvement of simple trickery.

Finally, it seems that even the spirits did not always side with Kelly. He was ordered by the angel Michael to take a wife and shortly after reluctantly married Joan Cooper of Chipping Norton. From the outset the marriage proved to be a disaster and Kelly often told Dee that wedlock had been against his wishes and he hated his wife. Divine wrath!?

Although the Bohemian Emperor Rudolph II had earlier knighted Kelly for his alchemical works, he later lost patience with him as he failed to produce the promised gold. Kelly was arrested and confined in the dungeon of castle Zobeslau and later transferred to castle Zerner. At the request of Dee, Queen Elizabeth tried to secure Kelly's release, claiming him as her subject, but Rudolph refused to give the alchemist his liberty. All else failing, Kelly attempted to escape but, in so doing, fell from the castle turret and shortly after died from his injuries.

Kelly met his death in November 1595 in his fortieth year.

Explanatory Diagrams to Dee Texts

Notes

p. 156 Sigillum Dei Aemeth: (Sloane MS. 3188, fol. 30). John Dee's principal wax seal, used in conjunction with the Holy Table.

p. 157 The Holy Table: It will be noticed that the diagram reproduced here shows the characters in the borders and central square in the reverse order to that published by Casaubon in his True and Faithful Relation. The reason for this apparent transposition of the angelic characters is that, due to a block-maker's error, Casaubon's 1659 version was (it seems) accidentally printed in reverse. The version given here has been redrawn from Dee's Latin lettered example to be found in the Appendix of Sloane MS. 3188. Elias Ashmole examined the Table while it was in the Library of Sir John Cotton. He describes it as being made from fine-grained wood with a top measuring  $36\frac{1}{4}$  inches by  $35\frac{7}{8}$  inches and  $\frac{7}{10}$  of an inch thick. The Table top was placed upon a frame two feet eight inches square, and two feet seven and a half inches high. The four legs of the Table were each three inches square. The frame of the Table had a wooden case incorporated 'closed with 3 Iron Hasps, to be locked up with 3 Padlocks'. The letters down each side of the table were painted on a gold background; the central square had blue lines and gold letters; the Hexagram was painted in gold lines, and the Seven Ensigns of Creation had blue lines and red characters. The whereabouts of the Table is now unknown (possibly destroyed in the Cottonian Library fire of 1731). A late seventeenth-century copy of the Table (in marble) may be seen in the Oxford Museum of the History of Science.

p. 158–9 The Seven Ensigns of Creation: The Angels first instructed that they should be made from purified tin, but later Dee was told to paint the emblems onto the Table.

p. 159 The position of the Seven Ensigns on the Table: The annexed numbers refer to the order in which the Ensigns appear in the present text.

p. 160 The true Lamyne: In Latin and Angelic characters.

THE POSITION OF THE SEVEN ENSIGNS ON THE TABLE

THE TRUE LAMYNE In Latin & Angelic Characters

EDWARD KELLY'S VISION OF THE FOUR CASTLES

JOHN DEE'S HOROSCOPE

Appendix C

The Physical Location of the Ninety-One Parts of the Earth named by Man, as detailed in the Liber Scientiae Auxilii et Victoriae Terrestris of John Dee

by Robin E. Cousins

Liber Scientiae Auxilii et Victoriae Terrestris, which forms part of Sloane Manuscript 3191, provides the details necessary to operate a system of magic, by which the magician can discover how to compare . . . [the] divisions of provinces according to the Divisions of the Stars, with the Ministry of the Ruling Intelligences, and Blessings of the Tribes of Israel, the Lots of the Apostles, and Typical Seals of the Sacred Scripture, [so that he] shall be able to obtain great and prophetic oracles, concerning every region, of things to come.<sup>1</sup>

While in Cracow, John Dee and Edward Kelly received on Wednesday, 23 May 1584, the names of ninety-one regions and provinces of the physical world, as defined by man, from the spirit Nalvage. At this time America was no longer considered to be a group of islands; but Australia had yet to be discovered and the search for the North-West Passage had just commenced. The names of the ninety-one parts relate to the Ptolemaic ancient world of about AD 150 (see Map 8) with some additions. The Spirit Nalvage explains:

Notwithstanding the Angel of the Lord appeared unto Ptolemy, and opened unto him the parts of the Earth: but some he was commanded to secret: and those are Northward under your Pole. But unto yon, the very true names of the World in her Creation are delivered.<sup>2</sup>

The list is not altogether satisfactory. Dee, who was well-versed in geography, had not heard of some of the places and even Nalvage said, 'Here are 15, which were never known in these times . . . The rest are.' Many of the strange locations are indeed in the polar regions, which were uncharted at the time. In fact, a considerable Arctic land mass was believed to exist and was featured on sixteenth-century maps (see Maps 5 and 6). Nevertheless, locations for this region are desirable and there are many areas in the extreme north, whether land or sea, which can be covered by the descriptions. The belief of a south polar continent (Tolpam, Part 58) was not inaccurate, a location which can usefully extend to Australasia which was undiscovered at the time (see Maps 5 and 7).

Two interesting points emerge at the end of the communication relating to known lands not included in the list. Firstly, when Dee asks of 'Polonia, Moschovia, Dania, Hibernia (Ireland), Islandia, and so of many others', Nalvage replies: 'Polonia and Moscovia, are of Sarmatia (Russia); Denmark, Ireland, Frizeland, Iseland, are of Britain: And so it is of the rest.'<sup>3</sup> Does this imply that Brytania (Part 61) can be used to gain access to lands not included within the ninety-one parts? Secondly, when Dee presses Nalvage as to which part governs 'Atlantis and the annexed places, under the King of Spain called the West Indies', Nalvage replies: 'When these 30 appear, they can each tell you what they own. Prepare for tomorrows Action.' The communication is, therefore, incomplete. Unfortunately, 'tomorrows Action' never occurred, because Kelly believed Nalvage to have taken the descriptions from books, including Agrippa's 'Occult Philosophy', and refused to communicate further. 'E. K. remained of his wilful intent', noted a frustrated Dee. However, Onigap (Part 34) may refer to these lands and there is always the use of Brytania, as described above. Note that Dee held that the term 'West Indies' was very misleading and preferred to use 'Atlantis' instead of 'America', as a name for the new lands. Nevertheless, the additional thirty parts wait to be realised, which would bring the total of the parts of the Earth to 121.

Dee bought Gerhard Mercator's Universal Chart of the World and the geographical work of Pomponius Mela to help him with his locations. He does not record his success. Ultimately, the advice of Nalvage in relation to Chaldei (Part 42) and Chaldea (Part 72) is the only way to establish the locations of the obscure and ambiguously described parts of the world: 'You shall finde the difference of it, in practice.'

The Ninety-One Parts of the World

Many of the locations are well-known. However, for the obscurer areas A True and Faithful Relation . . . is often the only guide and, in these instances, supportive quotations are given. Other parts, especially those located by Kelly or Nalvage in the Far Orient or in the Arctic regions, are difficult to place on the world map today, as in Dee's time these regions were largely unexplored and uncharted.

1 AEGYPTUS: Egypt.

2 SYRIA: Southern Syria.

3 MESOPOTAMIA: Land between the Tigris and Euphrates rivers in Northern Iraq and North-East Syria.

4 CAPPADOCIA: Extensive province of Central Turkey, stretching from the Black Sea in the north to Cilicia (Part 14) in the south. The original territory, Cappadocia Proper, occupied the southern areas.

5 TUSCIA: Tuscany or Etruria, a province in Central Italy including Florence.

6 PARVA ASIA: Asia Minor, Anatolia or Asiatic Turkey.

7 HYRCANIA: Area south-east of the Caspian Sea in Iran.

8 THRACIA: Thrace includes Eastern Greece, Turkey in Europe, and Southern Bulgaria.

9 GOSMAM: According to Kelly, 'Here appear great Hills, and veins of the Gold Mines appear: the men seem to have baskets of leather. This is one of the places under the Pole Artick.'

10 THEBAIDI: Thebes (Egypt) and surrounding area.

11 PARSADAL: Kelly, 'Here the sun shineth fair.' Most probably Pasargadae or Parsagarda ('the habitation of the Persians'), the ancient capital of Parsa/ Persis/ Persia Proper or the modern Iranian province of Fars (Part 74). Parsagarda is located about 60 miles north-east of Shiraz.

12 INDIA: Includes Indian provinces along the Indus River, roughly present-day Pakistan and India West of the Ganges (India Intra Ganges).

13 BACTRIANE: Bactriana covers Northern Afghanistan and the south-east of the Turkmen SSR, the River Amu-Dar'ya (Oxus) forming the northern boundary. For lands to the north of the river, see Sogdiana (Part 26).

14 CILICIA: Coastal country bordering the Mediterranean in south-east Turkey.

15 OXIANA: Alexandria Oxiana, a town and its surrounding area on the Oxus River (Amu-Dar'ya) on the borders of Northern Afghanistan and the USSR.

16 NUMIDIA: Eastern Algerian coastal district between Africa (Part 86) and Mauretania (Part 91).

17 CYPRUS: Cyprus.

18 PARTHIA: North-east Iran, to the south of Hyrcania (Part 7). The region has a common border with the USSR.

19 GETULIA: The Western Sahara, south of Morocco, including Southern Algeria, Mali and the modern state of Mauritania.

20 ARABIA: Saudi Arabia.

21 PHALAGON: Dee: 'I have never heard of it.'

Kelly: 'It is toward the North, where the veins of Gold . . . appear . . . The men have things on their shoulders of beasts skins.'

Dee: 'Groynland as I think' (i.e. Greenland).

22 MANTIANA: This is Matiana or the Mattieni by Lacus Matianus (Lake Urmia) in Northern Iran. Lake Van, approximately 200 miles west in eastern Turkey, was once called Lake Mantiana.

23 SOXIA: Sacae/Sachia/Sakas approximates with Chinese Turkestan or Sinkiang in north-west China.

Kelly: 'People here appear of reddish colour.'

24 GALLIA: A 'greater' France with the Rhine forming the northern and eastern boundaries, thereby including Belgium, Luxemburg, and the Southern Netherlands.

25 ILLYRIA: At its greatest extent, Illyria included Central and Eastern Austria, Western Hungary or Transdanubia, Yugoslavia excluding Macedonia, Northern Bulgaria and Romania.

26 SOGDIANA: District between the Amu-Dar'ya (Oxus) and the Syr-Dar'ya (Jaxartes) rivers including the Uzbekistan SSR, with the cities of Bokhara and Samarkand, and Western Tadzhikistan SSR. Afghanistan is to the south, for which see Bactriana (Part 13).

27 LYDIA: Coastal region in Western Turkey.

28 CASPIS: Area to the south-west of the Caspian Sea in Iran.

29 GERMANIA: Includes modern Germany, Czechoslovakia and Poland and extends to the Italian border in the south, incorporating Switzerland and the Tyrol in Western Austria. In the north, Germania can include Denmark, Norway and Sweden, although Dee was told that Brytania (Part 61) could be used for Denmark, which at that time governed Norway as well.

30 TRENAM: Kelly: 'Here appear Monkies, great flocks. The people have leather Coats, and no beards, thick leather, and Garthers . . .'

Nalvage: 'These people are not known to you?'

Dee: 'Are they not in Africa?'

Nalvage: 'They be.'

Probably Teniam, a region on Jadocus Hondius's World Map (1608) straddling the Ivory Coast/Upper Volta/Ghana borderlands.

31~ BITHYNIA: Black Sea coastal region in the north of Turkey, west of Paphlagonia (Part 40), including Istanbul (Asian side).

32 GRAECIA: Nalvage: 'A great Citie, and the Sea hard by it.'

Dee: 'Is not that great Citie Constantinople?'

Nalvage: 'It is . . .'

Graecia is thus Istanbul, not Greece; for which use Achaia (Part 37).

33 LICIA: Lycia is a country on the south coast of Turkey or Anatolia.

34 ONIGAP: Kelly: 'Here appear handsome men, in gathered tucked garments, and their shoes come up to the middle of their legs, of diverse coloured leather.'

Nalvage: 'These be beyond Hispaniola.'

Kelly: 'It is a low Countrey. Here appear great piles of Stones like St Andrews Crosses . . . There are on this side of it (a great way) a great number of dead Carkases . . .'

Nalvage: 'It is beyond Giapan.' (That is, beyond Japan across the Pacific to the Americas. Note that Onigap is an anagram of Giapon.)

Dee: 'Then it is that land, which I use to call Atlantis.'

Nalvage: 'They stretch more near the west.'

This can only be Mexico, particularly the Yucatan. Beyond Hispaniola (Haiti and Domenica) and west of 'Atlantis' or America is Central Mexico and the Yucatan, which is a low-lying peninsular. The people wore bright colours; the temples could resemble St Andrew's crosses; and, many people were slaughtered by the Spanish Conquistadores.

35 INDIA MAJOR: India Extra Gangem or India east of the Ganges, which includes all of South-East Asia.

36 ORCHENY: Nalvage: 'A great many little Isles.'

Dee: 'Do you mean the Isles of Orkney?' 'No.'

Dee: 'They seem to be the Isles of Malacha.'

Dee is mistakenly thinking of the islands around Malaya (Malacha or Malacca) or even the Moluccas. The Orcheni were a people south of Chaldea (Part 72), living on or by islands in the marshlands of the lower Tigris and Euphrates.

37 ACHAIA: Southern Greece, including Athens and the Peloponnisos.

38 ARMENIA: Extensive region which, most comprehensively, stretches from the Euphrates in eastern Turkey to the Caspian Sea, thereby including Armenia SSR and the Azerbaijan SSR.

39 CILICIA (NEMROD): Nalvage: 'You never knew this Cilicia. This is Cilicia where the Children of Nemrod dwell. It is up in the Mountains beyond Cathay.'

This equates to the extreme north-eastern province of the USSR by the Bering Straits, the Magandanskaya Oblast. Cilicia in Turkey is Part 14.

40 PAPHLAGONIA: Black Sea coastal country in the north of Turkey.

41 PHASIANA: District in Eastern Turkey, north of Lake Van, not to be confused with Phazania/Fezzan in Libya, for which see Garamantica (Part 45).

42 CHALDEI: The people of Chaldea (Part 72).

43 ITERGI: Nalvage: '. . . the people are yellow, tawney . . . They are to the south of the last Cilicians.' Possibly Mongolia, Manchuria (North-East China), and Korea.

44 MACEDONIA: Northern Greece and Southern Yugoslavia.

45 GARAMANTICA: Garamantes, a large area in Inner Africa, covering the Eastern Sahara, including the south of Libya (Fezzan), extreme south-eastern Algeria, Niger and Chad.

46 SAUROMATICA: Sarmatia or European Russia.

47 AETHIOPIA: Includes Ethiopia south of Egypt and also all of the unknown African continent south of the Equator, which was known as Ethiopia Interior in Dee's time. Unexplored parts of Africa north of the Equator were known as Libya Interior.

48 FIACIM: Kelly: 'Now he sheweth by the North Pole and the great Mountain.'

This is the North Pole. A great mountain was believed to exist at the Pole. See Map 6.

49 COLCHICA: Colchis is roughly the modern Russian state of Georgia, located to the east of the Black Sea.

50 CIRENIACA: Cyrenaica, a Mediterranean coastal region of Eastern Libya.

51 NASAMONIA: Ill-defined north-eastern Libyan coastal district by the Gulf of Sirte in the west of Cireniaca (Part 50).

52 CARTHAGO: Carthage, Tunisia.

53 COXLANT: Nalvage: 'It appeareth very Eastward.'

Kelly: 'It is on high ground. There come four Rivers out of it, one East, another West, another North, and another South . . . Is this the Paradise that Adam was banished out of?'

Nalvage: 'The very same.'

A discussion follows which does not help to locate Coxlant. The search for the Earthly Paradise, like the Eldorado, was the dream of early explorers. The four rivers are the Pison (The Persian Gulf?), Gihon (The Nile?), Hiddekel (Tigris), and Euphrates. The favourite location of Paradise was considered to be a little north of the confluence of the Tigris and Euphrates. However, other locations favoured sites further north in Mesopotamia and Armenia. Tibet could be another location. It is very easterly; on high ground; and the four rivers are the Mekong (east), the Indus (west), the Yangtze (north), and the Brahmaputra (south). Ultimately, however, the location of Coxlant or the Earthly Paradise must rest with the spirituality of the individual.

54 IDUMEA: Also called Edom, this is Southern Israel and Jordan.

55 PARSTAVIA: Actually Bastarnia, approximately Bessarabia or the Moldavia SSR to the east of Romania.

56 CELTICA: Nalvage: 'It is that which you call Flandria, the Low Country.'

This is North-West France and Belgium, not Central Gaul which is usually known as Celtica.

57 VINSAN: Kelly: 'Here appear men with tallons like Lions. They be very devils. There are five isles of them.'

Suggest the ancient kingdom of Wu-Sun, south of Lake Balkhash in Kazakhstan, USSR. The 'isles' could be communities near the lake.

58 TOLPAM: Kelly: 'Under the South Pole.' This is Antarctica and Australasia.

59 CARCEDONIA: Carchedonia or modern Tunisia.

60 ITALIA: Italy, including the Istrian Peninsula in Yugoslavia.

61 BRYTANIA: The British Isles, Scandinavia, and places not included in the 91 parts.

62 PHENICES: Phoenicia, approximately the Lebanon and Northern Israel.

63 COMAGINEN: Commagene, a land-locked district in Southern Turkey, bounded on the east by the Euphrates and on the south by Syria. Cilicia (Part 14) is to the west.

64 APULIA: Province in south-east Italy between the Apennines and the Adriatic, bounded on the south by Calabria or the 'heel' of Italy.

65 MARMARICA: North African coastal region straddling the Egyptian and Libyan border. The Nile forms the eastern boundary.

66 CONCAVA SYRIA: Hollow Syria, usually known as Coele Syria, now forms Northern Syria.

67 GEBAL: Later Byblos, now Jubail, about twenty miles north of Beirut.

68 ELAM: Also known as Susiana, it is approximately the same as the modern Iranian province of Khuzestan at the north of the Persian Gulf, bordering Iraq and including Abadan.

69 IDUNIA: Nalvage: 'It is beyond Greenland.'

70 MEDIA: North-Western Iran, south of Caspis (Part 28) and Hyrcania (Part 7). Includes Teheran.

71 ARIANA: Eastern Iran, Pakistan west of the Indus, Southern Afghanistan.

72 CHALDEA: A tract of country in South Iraq running along the Euphrates from the Persian Gulf to Babylon (about 50 miles south of Bagdad). The Shamiya Desert forms the western boundary.

73 SERICIPOPULI: A people in Eastern Asia. Serica or Seres equates with China and the Far East.

74 PERSIA: Persis or Parsa, this is approximately the modern Iranian province of Fars. Located in south-west Iran and bounded on the west by the Persian Gulf, the province was the kernel of ancient Persia and includes the ancient cities of Parsagarda (Part 11) and Persepolis.

75 GONGATHA: Kelly: 'Towards the South Pole.'

This is Gongala, an area to the south of Libya Interior by the Equator. In the sixteenth century Kelly's description is apt, but today the region equates with South Sudan.

76 GORSIM: Kelly: 'Beares and Lions here.'

Most probably Korasim/Chorasim/Gerazi an ancient site at the north of Lake Tiberias (Sea of Galilee), Israel. Note also the Chorasimii south-east of the Caspian Sea in modern Turkmen SSR.

77 HISPANIA: Spain and Portugal.

78 PAMPHILIA: Southern Turkish coastal land, between Lycia (Part 33) and Cilicia (Part 14), forming a narrow strip of land around the Bay of Antalya.

79 OACIDE: This is Oasitae (' . . . of the Oasis'), the oasis area west of the Nile, which includes the great oasis of the Oracle of Amon.

80 BABYLON or BABYLONIA: Region in Southern Iraq, extending north from the Persian Gulf between the Lower Tigris and the north-eastern Arabian desert. Babylon, the capital, is about fifty miles south of Bagdad.

81 MEDIAN: Kelly: 'It is much Northward.'

Note, however, Midian – the land of the Midianites by Sinai; or, even the people of Media (Part 70).

82 IDUMIAN: Kelly: 'They are two Isles environed with an arm of the Scythian Sea, which goeth in at Maspi.'

Most probably the region to the north-east of the Aral Sea in the Kazakhstan SSR. Suggest 'Maspi' is a corruption of the Aspisii Montes / Mons Aspisii, which shortened to M. Aspisii, distorts to Maspi. The mountains were supposedly located in this region, but in the sixteenth century much of this land and especially the far north of Siberia or Scythia was Terrae Incognita. Mercator's map of North-East Asia, which is dated 1569, shows a hypothetical arm of the Scythian Sea (Laptev and East Siberian seas) almost reaching to the north-east of the Aral Sea with the M. Aspisii nearby. The Aspisii Scythea were the people dwelling to the west of the mountains and to the north of the River Jaxartes (Syr-Dar'ya). Note also, however, the Arimaspi detailed in Part 88 below. The Maspii, a noble Persian tribe, are too far south to be considered.

83 FELIX ARABIA: Arabian Red Sea coastlands, particularly the south-western areas, including the Yemen.

84 METAGONITIDIM: The Metagonitae were a people living in Tangiers and the surrounding area. The district forms the west of Mauretania (Part 91) or modern Northern Morocco.

85 ASSYRIA: Eastern Iraq between the Tigris and the Iranian border.

86 AFRICA: Mediterranean coastal region of Libya, including Tripoli and the modern province of Tripolitania, but excluding the eastern part, for which see Cireniaca (Part 50) and Nasamonia (Part 51). The region also includes the eastern Algerian coastlands and the Algerian/Tunisian border. This is not the continent of Africa.

87 BACTRIANI: The people of Bactriana (Part 13).

88 AFNAN OR AFRAN: Kelly: 'Here appear people with one eye in their head, seeming to be in their breast, towards the Equinoctial.'

Dee: 'I remember of people called Arimaspi.'

Dee is confused here, as the Arimaspi ('the one-eyed') were a people on the left bank of the Middle Volga, north of the Caspian Sea. The Afran are the people Ptolemy called the Aphricerones, located just north of Equatorial Africa in North Zaire. The ancient scholars considered that all the southern parts of Africa were uninhabitable (as with many unexplored lands) and populated with strange beasts. Herodotus included in his conjectures on unknown Africa descriptions of peoples with 'one eye in the breast instead of the usual head', which must be the people referred to.

89 PHRYGIA: Large province in Central Turkey. Greater Phrygia was bounded on the east by Cappadocia (Part 4).

90 CRETA: Crete.

91 MAURITANIA OR MAURETANIA: Morocco and the north Algerian coastlands, not to be confused with the modern state of Mauritania, which is located further south and for which see Getulia (Part 19).

3 Dee, like most of his contemporaries, believed the island of Friseland to exist. It was, in fact, a duplication of Iceland on an early map (see Map 6), an error which was repeated. When its coast was supposedly skirted, this was actually the coast of Cape Farewell, Southern Greenland. Note also that today Germania (Part 29) incorporates Poland. In Dee's time Poland was located much further eastward and would have formed part of Sarmatia or Russia (Part 46).

Guide to the Maps

Maps 1 to 4 give the 91 parts of the physical world and their corresponding numbers, as detailed in Sloane MS. 3191. The usual form of the name (if any) is given beneath in square brackets, e.g.

SAUROMATICA
[SARMATIA]

Duplicated names in round brackets indicate possible alternative locations, e.g.

(COXLANT 53)

All boundaries are given where possible. Unnamed bounded areas are lands which are not included in the 91 parts and are only included to show the extent of an adjacent listed area. Named but unnumbered areas, e.g. Scythia, are included to ease location of lands.

Provincial boundaries within major areas are indicated by a slightly lighter line.

Maps 5 to 7 are adaptations of sixteenth-century maps (listed below). From these it can be seen that a considerable Arctic land mass was believed to exist; hence the North Polar locations indicated at the top of Map 4. The Antarctic coastline shown as part of TOLPAM (58) is not inaccurate.

Map 5 is a sixteenth-century map of the world based upon THEATRUM ORBIS TERRARUM by Ortelius (1570).

Map 6 is based upon a map published in 1595 and shows the northern polar region as Gerhard Mercator imagined it to be.

Map 7 shows the southern polar region, based upon a map from SPECULUM ORBIS TERRAE by Gerard and Cornelius de Jode (1593).

Map 8 shows the world according to Ptolemy, c. AD 150.

ENOCHIAN MAGIC IN THEORY

DEAN F. WILSON

PRAISE FOR THIS BOOK

“Students of the Western Esoteric Tradition are often presented with an ‘either/or’ approach to Enochian Magic—they are told that they must choose between either the Dee Purist tradition or the Golden Dawn tradition because ‘one is right and the other is wrong.’ In Enochian Magic in Theory author Dean F. Wilson takes a refreshingly ecumenical approach, presenting the Enochian system from various viewpoints and removing the unfortunate partisanship that has too often entered into the discussion. Written from the perspective of someone who has considerable experience with Enochian, Wilson’s text is reader-friendly and filled with valuable illustrations that will help students better understand this complex subject. We wholeheartedly recommend Enochian Magic in Theory to anyone, beginner or Adept, who seeks a well-rounded, well-researched book on Enochian theurgy.”

— Charles “Chic” Cicero and Sandra “Tabatha” Cicero

“As the subject of Enochian magick has become more popular among modern occultists, it is no surprise to find new introductory material being offered by those who studied the system in its obscurity. Enochian Magic in Theory is a good example of such a resource. Here, students interested in the ‘Dee-purist’ tradition will find simple and straightforward introductions to the various tools and tables, angels and spirits recorded in Dee’s occult journals. Students of the post-Victorian ‘Neo-Enochian’ tradition will find detailed explanations of material (some of it quite obscure) added to the system by the Order of the Golden Dawn, Aleister Crowley and others. All of this is mixed together with the personal work, theory and experience of the author (and, in some cases, that of his Enochian-based Order, the O.S.D.L.), giving us a rare glimpse into the modern theory and practice of the greater Enochian tradition.”

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This book would not have come to fruition without the help and encouragement of many people—far too many to name.

While I have moved on to other things and have come to a very different understanding of Enochian magic now, I owe a lot to my time in the Order of the Sons and Daughters of Light, particularly to my teachers there: Frater Neshamah and Frater VVV.

This book started out as an online primer for those interested in Enochian magic. Since then it has grown into something far more extensive, and something that is more based on the original material than before. Thanks goes to Frater SI, otherwise known as Vovin, for hosting the primer on his forum.

I would also like to thank those who helped me proofread the text and correct any typos and errors, including Jason Docherty, Gerry Dempsey, and Niall Jordan. Sufficed to say, when it comes to producing a book, eight eyes are better than two.

Special thanks also goes out to Nick and Paola Farrell and the members of the Magical Order of Aurora Aurea, a Golden Dawn order that puts magic back into the heart of things.

A final thanks to Clay Holden and the John Dee Publication Project for permission to use his Sigillum Dei Aemeth design.

INTRODUCTION

Enochian magic is an occult system that was delivered by angelic entities to magician, mathematician and astrologer Dr. John Dee and skryer Sir Edward Kelley in Renaissance times. The system, which was transmitted over the course of many years, includes a complex array of tools, magical tables, and an entire language, purported to be that of the angels.

It is not surprising then that Enochian magic draws much attention. Israel Regardie, in his introduction to the Second Edition of The Golden Dawn, commented that he found it somewhat puzzling “the frequency with which the almost wholly untutored beginner invariably selects the Enochian system to start with.”<sup>1</sup> The reasoning for this enticing lure is unknown, but for anyone who has worked with this system, it becomes increasingly clear that there is something about it, a potency and power, that few other systems can match.

Perhaps it is power that makes Enochian magic so attractive, or perhaps it is the ease of use in getting results. Speaking of the Enochian Calls or Keys, but easily applicable to the entire system, Aleister Crowley wrote:

“The genuineness of these Keys, altogether apart from any critical observation, is guaranteed by the fact that anyone with the smallest capacity for Magick finds that they work.”<sup>2</sup>

I have to agree with him on this. The truth about Enochian magic is that you do not have to put quite the same effort into getting results as you do with, for example, the Qabalah or Goetia. Even those who just read one of the Calls or listen to a recording of it frequently report unusual occurrences soon afterwards. However, and I must stress this, the results one gets when the energy is not properly channelled are entirely chaotic. Results does not always mean good results. Energy bouncing off the walls of one’s temple does not mean

1 Israel Regardie, The Golden Dawn, Introduction, p. 10.

2 Aleister Crowley, The Vision & The Voice, p. 8.

success in terms of achieving a desirable outcome.

Benjamin Rowe, a magician who worked with and wrote extensively about Enochian magic, echoed this view, saying that “the Enochian entities are too cooperative.”<sup>3</sup> They are easy to summon, will often do things without qualm, will speak in the magician’s language and often display visions that support the magician’s world view, making it even more important that the magician knows how to ensure as true an experience as possible.

This book is designed to teach the theory behind the system in all its intricacies, while its follow-up, Enochian Magic In Practice, will provide logical step-by-step procedures for putting it into practice, to give magicians what they need to channel this energy for a productive end.

This book is designed to give a thorough knowledge of the Enochian system from various perspectives, including the original Dee method, the popular Golden Dawn method, and a few more modern approaches, such as that of an experimental Enochian group I was once involved with, the Order of the Sons and Daughter of Light (OSDL). This group explored the system and developed a practical application of it for spiritual advancement and magical attainment.

Given the syncretic nature of my approach to the system, it is important to state immediately that this book will not satisfy any one faction of Enochian magicians. Students of the Golden Dawn style of Enochian magic are better off reading Israel Regardie’s The Golden Dawn and Pat Zalewski’s Golden Dawn Enochian Magic, as I cannot reproduce that material in full here.

Likewise, Dee purists will likely gain more from studying the original Dee diaries than reading this book, as I do not limit my approach to only what Dee was shown. Given the fact that many of Dee’s documents were destroyed and a number of areas of the system remain obscure, not to mention the lack of practical instructions for the use of the system, it is only appropriate that in my attempt to give magicians a workable guide I include some less orthodox teachings.

However, I will make it clear throughout the text where each piece of information comes from, be it Dee, the Golden Dawn, the OSDL, or my own personal experience with the system. I believe that this is important, as it will help the reader pick and choose what material is applicable to their understanding and application of Enochian magic.

---

3 Benjamin Rowe, The 91 Parts of the Earth, Introduction.

The notable Enochian magician Benjamin Rowe summed up the usefulness of a varied approach to the system as follows:

“These instructions should not be interpreted rigidly. There are numerous minor variations, particularly in the method of forming the names. The flexibility of the Enochian system is such that all of them will produce results, varying slightly with the method used.”<sup>4</sup>

This applies to the many different applications of the system. While the Golden Dawn, for example, made several errors in its version of Enochian magic, it also made numerous advances, developing the system into something that is workable. This is quite different to the original Dee method, but the beauty of Enochian magic is that they both work very well.

One thing I have noticed about many Enochian books on the market is that while they often go into great detail in describing the system and its delivery, they tend to fail miserably at explaining what it means and how to use it. While the “how to” can be found in Enochian Magic In Practice, my hope is to answer a lot of the “whys” here. Readers are free to accept or reject my explanations or arguments, but always I will attempt to support them with quotations from the original material.

Due to some limitations of space, some theoretical concepts, like that of Cacodaemons, will be left to Enochian Magic In Practice, where the actual instructions for using these can be found. This is an area that has been all but ignored in other books on the subject and one that I hope to elucidate in detail.

For quotations from Dee’s diaries I primarily use Dr John Dee’s Spiritual Diaries, Stephen Skinner’s revised and reset edition of Meric Casaubon’s A True and Faithful Relation of What Passed For Many Years Between Dr. John Dee and Some Spirits (hereafter referred to as simply A True & Faithful Relation), in addition to

Joseph H. Peterson's John Dee's Five Books of Mystery. Skinner has corrected many of the errors in Casaubon's work and made the text significantly more legible, joining Peterson in providing a major benefit to students and scholars of this system who do not have easy access to the originals at the British Museum.

I have also modernised the spelling of many of the words used by Dee to make the passages more readable, but those with access to the cited books can check them for the original spelling if they are so inclined. The Early Modern English used by Dee, with its many idiosyncrasies in spelling, serves only to act as an obstacle to understanding the message behind his words, which is far more important.

In addition, I have added some grammatical elements that were missing from Dee's transcriptions, most notably in terms of the possessive case. Frequently Dee leaves out an apostrophe, which, while still readable, I have corrected.

For biblical quotations I employ the New Revised Standard Version, henceforth abbreviated as NRSV.

Enochian magic is one of the first magical systems I studied and certainly the one I have explored in the most depth. It maintains a special place in my heart and I appreciate all that I have achieved through the use of this system. Enochian magic is vast, both in the entirety of its system and in the application of it, which can be used for so many different things. I hope this book and its sequel will help people get a more thorough understanding of Enochian magic and aid them on their first steps of practice.

I

DEE &amp; KELLEY

The Enochian language and system of magic was first delivered, through a series of skrying sessions over a period of five years, to magician Dr. John Dee and his skryer Sir Edward Kelley. Both Dee and Kelley were Protestants, though it might be better to describe them as Deists, for their beliefs and practices did not entirely fall in line with mainstream Protestantism. This will be evident from the material involved with the Enochian system itself.

When Dee neared the end of his life he hid his documents in a secret drawer of a cedar wood chest, perhaps at the request of the angels, or perhaps because he was loath to see his life's work destroyed. In 1642 a Robert and Susannah Jones bought the chest, which had found its way into a shop. It was not until 20 years later, however, that the Jones discovered the secret compartment, which held many of Dee's magical diaries.

The documents eventually found their way into the hands of Elias Ashmole, an antiquarian and alchemist, in 1672. Ashmole already had an interest in Dee, having published two alchemical texts written by Dee's son, Arthur, around two decades beforehand.

The collection was handed over to the British Museum, where it remains today. It was here that the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn expanded upon the brief mentions of Enochian in its Cipher Manuscript into what would become a major part of the modern occult tradition, and the means by which most people interested in Enochian magic would be introduced to the system.

Another collection of Dee's documents was found by Sir Robert Cotton after an excavation of land surrounding Dee's house. It was this stash that Sir Thomas Cotton handed over to Meric Casaubon, who transcribed and published them, with a number of errors, in A True & Faithful Relation.

Unfortunately, many of Dee's diaries were destroyed after they were discovered, with half of the stash discovered by the Jones used as lining for pie tins by their maid, and the remaining number narrowly escaping the inferno of the Great Fire of London in 1666. While this has had little bearing on the overall system, it is possible that answers to some of the major questions and explanations to some of the more obscure parts of the system might have been found in these destroyed texts.

Dee was meticulous in his documenting of the workings, transcribing the communications in almost excruciating detail, with many footnotes and explanatory comments dotted throughout. He even made several copies of his diaries. It was this level of attention to detail that allowed the Enochian system to survive, despite the unfortunate treatment of some of the diaries. In fact, I would argue that Dee's extensive documentation skills were one of the very reasons why he was chosen by the angels for the delivery of this magical system in the first place.

The communications between the angels and Dee are long, spanning many years and hundreds of workings. Some of these sessions were intense, producing a high volume of material that ultimately became the Enochian system. Other sessions were less fruitful, effectively amounting to little more than clairvoyant chit chat. Benjamin Rowe sums it up best:

"Much of the communication was important within the context of the operations, but has no direct bearing on the systems of magick being presented. Of the rest, there are long periods of communication that, in retrospect, seem to have no purpose but to hold the magicians' attention on continuing the operations. During these periods the angels would present colorful visions, portentous prophecies, and angelic gossip, but very little in the way of solid information.”<sup>5</sup>

This “filler” material often makes the diaries difficult to read, especially when searching for material relating to the magical tradition that we have come to describe by the term “Enochian.” They can often be beneficial for context, but generally speaking they were intended for Dee and Kelley’s eyes and ears, not the thousands of magicians who would follow.

It is impossible to get a full understanding of the Enochian system without exploring the two figures who played such a pivotal role in its delivery and discovery. Without Dee we would not have the religious fervour and urge to commune with the Angels; without Kelley we would not have the psychic capabilities, the ability to make that communion a reality. The intricacies of the relationship between these two men is enough for a book of its own (I recommend The Queen’s Conjurer by Benjamin Woolley for more detail), but a brief exploration is necessary.

JOHN DEE

5 Benjamin Rowe, Enochian Magick Reference, p. 1.

Dee was born on 13 July 1527 in Tower Ward, London to Jane and Roland Dee, the latter of whom worked as a textile merchant and gentleman sewer to King Henry VIII.

Dee studied at Trinity College, Cambridge from the age of 14, where he was exposed to multiple subjects, including mathematics and astronomy, both of which would shape his future. It is likely here that he was first introduced to the occult.

Dee married his second wife Jane Fromond in 1578 and she bore eight children, only three of which outlived Dee, due to disease and plague that ran rampant at the time. Jane also miscarried after being ill for days with another child. His son Arthur wrote a number of essays on alchemy and also acted as a somewhat unsuccessful skryer for Dee towards the end of the angelic workings.

Aside from prayer it is not clear to what extent Dee carried out magical work. Some records exist that show that he carried out exorcisms, including an attempted one on his troubled nurse Anne Frank, whom he believed to be possessed, but she eventually committed suicide. It does not appear that he ever used Enochian magic, but it is likely he at least dabbled in, if not overtly practiced, some other forms of grimoire and Qabalistic magic.

Dee allegedly had one of the largest libraries in the world at the time. Casaubon states that Dee had some 4,000 books, 700 of which were manuscripts. He also notes some 48 books catalogued as written by Dee in A discourse Apologetical, which was sent to the then Archbishop of Canterbury.<sup>6</sup>

When Dee returned to his Mortlake homestead in December 1589 he found that it had been ransacked and around 500 of his books and many of his other prized possessions had been stolen. Interestingly, in August of that year he reported being plagued by nightmares that Kelley would “bereave me of my books.”<sup>7</sup> We do not know exactly who carried out this crime, but some reports suggest it was a London mob or people close to Dee, though there appears to be no evidence that Kelley was among this number.

Dee’s later years were marred by squalor, a somewhat ironic twist of fate for one who had enjoyed such wealth for much of his life. He found himself in debt to many people and unable to pay his bills, forcing him to sell much of what little he had left to get by.

Many of Dee's friends donated reasonable sums of money to help him out. Even Queen Elizabeth I came to the rescue with a large sum of money. She also secured him a position as Warden of Christ's College in Manchester, a post he held until his death. In his final days his daughter Katherine sold many of his cherished books, a fact that might have hastened his passing.

Dee died in Mortlake at the age of 81 or 82. The exact year of his death is not entirely known, since the records and gravestone have since gone missing, but it is believed to have been in December 1608 or March 1609.

The first working Dee did with Kelley resulted in an angel telling him he would live "an hundred and odd years,"<sup>8</sup> but that turned out to be a false spirit pretending to be Uriel. While Dee did not quite make that lofty age, his real life span was nearly double the average lifespan at the time, which was around 40 years, and he outlived almost all of those around him, including Queen Elizabeth. Dee might have lived even longer were it not for the relative poverty of his final years.

A RENAISSANCE MAN

Dee was a typical polymath or Renaissance Man, being well-versed in a great array of subjects and hungering for more knowledge, including the secret teachings of the angels. He was like many people of the time, including Leonardo da Vinci and Michelangelo, who were not only jacks of all trades, but masters of those numerous subjects that they delved in, inspired by the philosophy of the time that we are limitless in our abilities and our capacities for knowledge and development.

Dee was a great mathematician, invented many things, was pivotal in the explorations of the New World (through his cartography, etc.), and, indeed, was heavily involved in the various occult sciences that were part and parcel of the "elite" of that day. He was fluent in many languages, including English, Latin, Greek and Hebrew.
